

TELLS WHY AGAINST TEACHERS' SCHOOL

Member Woodland of Omaha Board Asserts Training Department Less Efficient.

OPPOSITION TO ABOLISHMENT

Interest in the contemplated decapitation of the teachers' training school, decreed in secret session by the teachers' committee, continues to grow, judged by the protests coming in, although the majority of the committee express their determination to insist on adoption of their recommendation at the next board meeting. Asked for the reasons for the proposed change, Member Frank H. Woodland, who voted with the majority in the star chamber committee meeting, has given The Bee the following statement:

"My reasons for favoring the discontinuance of the training school, briefly stated, are:

"The training school is entirely unnecessary and consequently a useless expense. There are more experienced teachers with a college or normal school education anxious to secure positions in the Omaha schools each year, than there are vacancies. The superiority of such teachers over graduates of our training school has always been recognized by the board, judging from the fact that they are paid a higher salary when elected than are the graduates of the training school. The policy of the board, as indicated by its rules, which have been in force for years, has been to select as teachers only those who have graduated from a college or state normal school, and those with only a high school education are distinctly recognized exceptions to the general rule, and graduates of the training schools are expressly included in such exceptions.

Says Training Less Efficient.

"In the next place, the theoretical training received by members of the training school can not be compared with that of graduates of the state normal. In the nature of things this is obviously impossible, for but one day a week is devoted to instruction. The other four days of the school week the students are in the various schools, observing or assisting teachers in their classroom work, consequently the training school is not more than 25 per cent of the instruction and study secured by college and normal school students. whatever success, therefore, has attended the work of graduates of our training school must be ascribed largely to their natural abilities and in spite of their insufficient theoretical training.

"The discontinuance of the training school would be for the best interests of those who would otherwise become members of it. There can be no question but what the guarantee of employment held out to those who enter the training school has deterred most if not all of them from securing a higher education and operated as an inducement to many otherwise able to continue their education to stop with the high school. The suggestion that graduates of the training school are those who can not afford to get their training elsewhere is not warranted by the facts. Quite as little is there in the suggestion that they get away with the training school will operate against the employment of Omaha girls."

Retailers to Ask City to Stop Fake Bankruptcy Sales

How to check the practice of fakirs of advertising bankrupt sales on the principal streets of Omaha when no bankruptcy has actually occurred, is still a problem that retailers are working on. Information is being gathered from cities that have eliminated this deception. The Associated Retailers have letters from the associations of Denver and Minneapolis telling how the matter is handled there.

In Minneapolis there is a city ordinance that prohibits such fake sales and financial advertisements on several of the principal streets. In Denver it is different. There is no ordinance covering the point there, but the city council arbitrarily prohibits such practices on certain of the principal streets. The retailers there circulated a petition, got an overwhelming number of signatures, and presented it to the city council requesting such action.

CORN IMPROVES IN WESTERN NEBRASKA

Burlington's Crop Report Shows Corn at McCook and Wymore in Exceptional Condition.

WHEAT CROP AVERAGES GOOD

While rains, according to the Burlington's weekly crop report, were general over Nebraska last week, they were not unusually heavy except in the eastern part of the state. Elsewhere it is asserted that they were just about sufficient to keep crops growing rapidly. In the eastern portion of the state they were torrential in some localities. For instance, at Fremont the precipitation reached 8.17 inches; Plattsmouth had 3.65; Nebraska City, 2.86; Table Rock, 4; Syracuse, 2.05, and many other places one and one-half to two inches.

As a result of the heavy rains, according to the report, in the eastern portion of the state, corn conditions went back, while elsewhere there was an improvement. The condition of corn over all the several divisions of the road average a 100 per cent crop. The comparison of condition with the previous week is made. Figures are:

Division	Last Week	Previous Week
Omaha	91	88
Lincoln	90	87
Wymore	102	97
McCook	117	106

Fully Up to the Average.

The opinion is expressed that unless there should be an unusually early frost, the corn crop as a whole will be fully up to the average and that if there should not be a killing frost before the middle to the last of September, it will be unprecedented in the history of the state.

Dealing with wheat the report shows that this year farmers are stacking more than ever before and that threshing out of the shock is not the rule. As a result less threshing has been done than during former years, but whatever farmers have threshed, the wheat has turned out well. Twelve of the Burlington agents, reporting from that number of
