HERE are fashions in falling in love as there are modes in shirts, dramas, novels and bodices. For the last decade men—young, old and middle-aged—have been giving their hearts to girls, "mere chits in their teens," and the once dread widow, of whom men were warned to beware, was conceded to be quite harmless, not even possible for lightest flirtation.

But, in the shuffling of fate, the mode has had its day, and the widow has come back into her own; and our president is seen at the head, leading the new fashion, playing the lover adorable to a matron past 40.

It is passing away, at least for a time, of the "bud." Barrie, the greatest living dramatist, has declared woman at her loveliest at "Forty and a bit," and Gutzon Borglum, the greatest living sculptor, "loveliest at every age."

In Omaha society there are just a full score of charming widows—so what is the coming season going to bring? "The rose-bud garden of girls" is getting anxious—fashions travel quite fast, especially when westward bound, and it is scheduled to be about Christmas when Omaha men will realize, like Sam Weller, "Widows is dangerous."
