IT PAYS—TRY HAYDEN'S FIRST—IT PAYS

FAMOUS LANDMARK OF WAR

Brussels Field of Waterloo Near Which Armies Again Are Battling.

200 feet high. Ten miles from the city of Brussels it marks the plain where history's greatest battle was fought, where over 60,000 men were killed, wounded and "missing." It is hardly necessary to say that it was fought on June 18, 1815, and that it culminated the campaign following Napoleon's escape from Elba and stopped his mighty effort to conquer all Europe. The duchess of Richmond gave a ball in Brussels on June 15; at midnight Wellington, having already heard that the outpost had been engaged, went to the ball. Here he found the prince of Orange, the man who seemed fated to cause the loss of life through his blunders. Even now he ought to have been at Binche, where the duke promptly sent him, after inquiring for news. Far from being surprised at the evening's attack, as some writers assert, the duke had dispatched his orders before he went to the ball, for at 2 a. m. strange sounds broke the night's silence and great masses of troops were on the move and bugles were blowing everywhere and people opened their windows to see the various regiments tramp past. A Highland band was playing bagpipes to the swing of the "Black Watch" as they went out to battle through the Namur gate. Curiously enough, many of the officers were still wearing their silk stockings and dancing pumps, for the heat was so intense that men went mad and died on the march; but for the rest, they pushed on and were soon under fire. The battle is eclipsed by the thought of the awful aftermath: the plain so filled with the dying and the dead that for three days parties brought in the wounded, who in many cases were saved by having had their bleeding stanchied by the front. In the hurry 300 bodies were flung down a well. For thirty years the corn crops were of a deeper color when they grew over the blood of the slain—Strat.
