ELECTION WORKERS NEAR POLLS

Charles Bryan Calls Election Officials Down for Manner in Which They Conduct the Polling Place.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LINCOLN, Nov. 3.—(Special.)—In one polling place in Lincoln this morning the official ballots were piled up in a mixed mass in one corner of the polling place and it was not until Charles W. Bryan demanded that better care be taken of them that the judge in charge, who appeared to boss the place, took the ballots and placed them where the public would have no chance to get access to them.

In the same polling place prominently placed on the window was a big card about three feet square urging the voter to vote for the suffrage amendment and showing how to vote in its favor.

Other literature with pictures of the different candidates on all tickets were prominently stuck up about the polling place, notwithstanding the law strictly prohibits any attempt to influence the voter within 100 feet of the polling place.

Candidates and others were openly working immediately in front of the door of the polling place and automobiles with yellow banners were in evidence flying about the city and near the polling places, giving evidence that voters may have been brought to the polls, although this is prohibited by law.

So flagrant was the breaking of election rules in this precinct that a prominent worker whose own party was the most in evidence in the violation said that it was evident that there would be plenty of grounds for a contest.

TRACTION COMPANY WOULD CHANGE ROUTE

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LINCOLN, Nov. 3.—(Special.)—The Lincoln Traction company has applied to the State Railway commission for permission to route its "High Line" College View cars into Lincoln over the Fourteenth street tracks instead of over the Twenty-third street line, as originally run until the company made the change some time ago.

G. W. MILLER OF SALINE COUNTY KILLS HIMSELF

FRIEND, Neb., Nov. 3.—(Special.)—George W. Miller, an old resident of Monroe precinct, committed suicide at his residence, twelve miles southeast of Friend, yesterday morning by shooting himself with a shotgun. Mrs. Miller was stricken with paralysis Sunday evening, and the next morning Miller took the gun, remarking, "That he was going to shoot a cat." A short time afterward a physician arrived with a nurse for Mrs. Miller, ordered from Friend, and went to find Miller, who was found lying at one corner of the barn with the gun between his feet and the left side of his head blown off. It is thought that Mrs. Miller's sudden illness had overbalanced her husband.

Broken Boy Accidentally Shot

BROKEN BOW, Neb., Nov. 3.—(Special.)—Wilford Haines, an 18-year-old boy employed on the John Dietz farm a few miles northwest of here, sent a bullet through his left shoulder late Sunday afternoon while hunting rabbits. The boy was using a .30-caliber revolver and in crawling under a fence the weapon was in some way discharged, the bullet taking effect in the shoulder. The wounded lad managed to reach the house and a physician was sent for, who found upon arriving that the bullet had struck the collarbone, took a downward course and came out under the left shoulderblade. The patient stands a fair chance of recovery.

Hawkeye Coaches Much Impressed by Play of Cornhuskers

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 3.—(Special.)—Assistant Coaches Kent and Rutshaupt and Sam Gross, quarterback of the Iowa football team, all had a lot to say about what they saw at Lincoln last Saturday, when they watched the Ames-Nebraska game there. Talks by the two coaches formed a big part of the practice for the Hawkeye squad last night, and the general trend of their remarks was all the same. Evidently they were considerably impressed by the Cornhuskers, while they found Ames also a better team than expected.

"Nebraska is not so strong now as at the time of the Iowa-Nebraska game last year," said Kent. "But the team is coming and it will be fully as good as last year's aggregation by the time it comes here to meet Iowa on November 21. The Cornhuskers are a big, powerful team, not quite so well balanced as the Minnesota team, but still a formidable aggregation. Iowa will have to improve greatly to have even an outside chance with Stiem's men. The Nebraska backfield is composed of big, heavy men, and the team plays straight, hard foot ball with no frills; but it is a mighty effective kind of a game. Iowa is facing another uphill battle, in my opinion."

Exhaustion, more than anything else, caused the crumbling of the Ames team in the last half, according to the Iowa coaches. The Aggies played some great foot ball, and are now looked upon with great respect here. The Hawkeyes have to meet them at Ames, on their homecoming day, which means that they will fight their hardest.

NOTES FROM TRYON AND M'PHERSON COUNTY

TRYON, Neb., Nov. 3.—(Special.)—What might have been a serious accident was averted Saturday night in this city by the presence of mind of F. L. Roberson and Prof. O. A. Johnson. The Tryon High school was giving a Halloween entertainment in the Odd Fellows' hall, and at about 10 o'clock Mr. Roberson noticed that the floor was settling and the building swaying. He quickly added more braces and went upstairs and told the professor, who asked the people to move to the sides of the building so that a pie-eating race could be put on. When the center of the floor was clear he then told the people the trouble and asked them to vacate the hall, which they did. About 300 people were in attendance at this entertainment.

The prospect of drilling for oil in the vicinity of Tryon is taking on new life again. The Holloway Bros., who have made the most promising strike, having gone through fifty-two feet of sand in which there were strong indications of oil, are negotiating for a machine which will put down a hole 2,500 feet, and it is their intention to put down several holes to this depth.

Never in the history of McPherson county has there been a crop raised under such peculiar circumstances. Farmers gave up raising any potatoes during the months of July and August, and many of them let their patches go to weeds. The last of August several good rains visited this section after a two months' drought and the potatoes commenced to grow again. As a result reports of good yields are coming in and potatoes weighing from one to two pounds are being exhibited in town. Many who in August said they would not have a spud are now telling of having from 300 to 400 bushels.

Fremont Teachers Have Had Holiday

FREMONT, Neb., Nov. 3.—(Special Telegram.)—The Fremont school board last evening declined to close the schools for the rest of the week in order to permit the teachers to attend the convention at Omaha. The reason given by the board was that the schools were closed during the week of the Big-Four fair, the second week in October.

The fair was held in the city park just across the street from the new high school and one other large school building. On account of the fair, some of the exhibits and the dog show being located in the street south of the high school, the board decided that it was impracticable to hold the usual classes. During that week a city institute was held with several instructors present and all teachers were required to attend.

SUIT IN SUPREME COURT TO COLLECT INSANITY FEES

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LINCOLN, Nov. 3.—(Special.)—Suit was begun in the supreme court today against five counties that have refused to pay to the state the amounts due on accounts for care of insane, as frequently published in the last five weeks.

The amounts in each case are more than double what the original account was because of the interest which has been accumulating back as far as 1878. The counties with the principal and the total after the interest has been added is given below:

Table with 3 columns: County Name, Principal, Total. Rows include Boone, Burr, Dakota, Gage, Stanton, and Stanton county.

Stanton county has paid $2,000 of the former principal, so that the interest on that account has not gained the proportions of the other counties. Interest will be charged on the principal in addition to this on October 25, 1914.

BRITISH SUCCEED MAKING TRANSFER

heavier forces were being got ready and brought up. "It was known that they were raising a new army and that part of it would probably be sent to the western theater, either to cover the troops laying siege to Antwerp, in case that place should hold out, or to act in conjunction with the besieging force in a violent offensive movement toward the coast.

"After the fall of Antwerp and the release of the besieging troops there was a gradual increase in the strength of their opposition. The resistance of the detachments grew more and more determined as more infantry and guns came up into the front line until Tuesday, October 28, when the arrival opposite us of a large portion of new formations and a considerable number of heavy guns enabled the enemy to assume the offensive, practically against the whole of our line at the same time that they attacked the Belgians between us and the coast.

"The operations then assumed a fresh complexion. On October 21 the new German formations again pressed all along our line. South of the Lys an attack on our lines was repulsed with loss to the assailants. We were driven from some ground close to the north, but regained it by a counter attack.

"Still further to the north the Germans gained and retained some points. Their casualties to the southeast of Arroncourt were estimated at more than 6,000.

Fierce Action Near La Ghele. On the north of the Lys, in our center, a fiercely contested action took place near LaGhele, which village was captured in the morning by the enemy and then retaken by us. The German casualties were extremely heavy. One battalion of their 19th regiment was practically wiped out, some 400 dead being picked up in our lines alone.

"By our counter attack we took 130 prisoners and released some forty of our men who had been captured. Our men were well treated by their captors.

Taking Reservists Off Neutral Boats is Not Defined Right

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The State department has not yet defined its attitude toward the British contention of the right of removal from an American ship of its German or Austrian reservists, and it was said at the department today that not only until a specific case arises will there be any declaration of policy on the subject.

So far, while the British authorities have removed some of these reservists from American ships, the action has been taken in harbors within the territorial jurisdiction of Great Britain. Even in that case it has not been conceded by the department that this right of removal may be exercised beyond the taking off of passengers or of a small portion of the crew.

If the privileges were exercised to the extent of taking up an American vessel for want of a sufficient crew to navigate it and thereby interfering with American commerce, the department probably would lodge a strong objection. The whole subject is admittedly open to new construction and very complex, involving the right of fully naturalized American citizens and those who have merely made declaration of their intention to become citizens.

While the United States government asserted the right to take "contrabanded" persons from a neutral ship in the famous Mason and Sibold case in 1861, the prisoners were afterward released on the ground that Captain Wilkes of the San Jacinto had acted without direct authorization from his government, which felt that the right to make prisoners in this fashion was too delicate to be exercised by a naval officer, even where no courts were available.
