FIRMS THAT TOOK PART IN BUILDING AND FURNISHING IT

New State Bank Will Install Burroughs Machines

The officials of the new German-American State bank, after a thorough investigation, decided that they could not afford to handle their accounting work without the Burroughs bank equipment.

The biggest problem they had to contend with was that of service.

They had to make certain that the equipment installed would give them dependable service, so that they could in turn give the best possible service to their depositors.

It has been the same with hundreds of other bankers throughout the country, and the only solution of the problem of service, was the installation of Burroughs Adding Machines, backed by Burroughs Service.

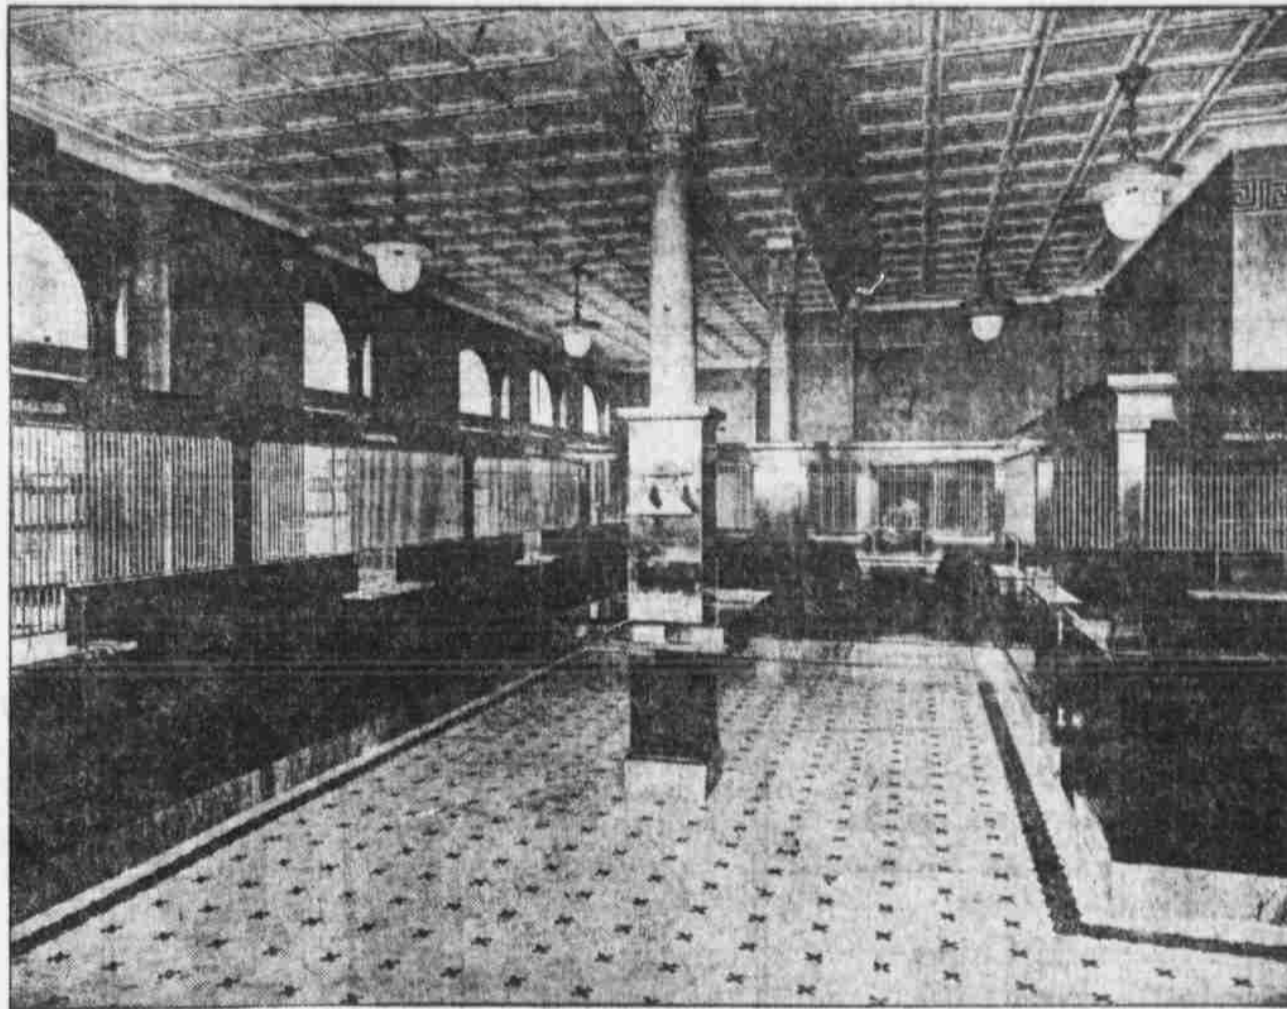

As a general rule, the banks in any one town are all advantageously located. They are sound financially, and possess a well established reputation. There is one attribute, however, which distinguishes any one bank from the others, and that is generally, the service rendered to customers.

The word Service has a broad application. Used in connection with Burroughs Adding Machines, it means accuracy and speed in handling figures; time saved on the part of bank employees, which can be used to good advantage in other ways; new methods of handling figure work, which are as advantageous to the customer as to the bank.

This was the service that the officials of the German-American Bank were interested in, and their purchase of the Burroughs bank equipment is conclusive evidence of their intention to give their customers as good service as can possibly be provided.
