

U.S. EXPERTS WILL ADDRESS FARMERS

Two Men from Department of Agriculture to Speak at Co-Operative Farmers' Convention.

CLIFFORD THORNE IS COMING

It is Expected that Twelve Hundred Representatives of Co-Operative Associations Will Attend the Meeting.

Two men from the United States Department of Agriculture are to be in Omaha to speak on co-operative work and the grading of grain before the Nebraska Farmers' Co-Operative Grain and Live Stock Shipping Association at its meeting December 16 to 18, inclusive. They are John R. Humphrey and E. L. Morris.

Clifford Thorne, chairman of the Iowa State Railway commission, is also on the program. He is to speak to the farmers' associations on the railway situation, especially as it affects the shipping interests of the farmer.

This is to be a large convention, following on the heels of the Nebraska Farmers' Congress, which is also to meet in Omaha. The Grain and Live Stock association has some 300 associations in the state from which to draw delegates. Each local association is allowed from one to four delegates. It is expected that the attendance will run between 1,000 and 1,200. J. S. Cannaday of Minden is president of the association.

Delegates from Associations.

This state association is made up of delegates chosen by the various grain and live stock co-operative shipping associations in the state. In hundreds of communities in the state the farmers have organized themselves into grain and live stock shipping associations on a co-operative and profit sharing basis. They throw their grain together and ship it in carload lots. Likewise, they bunch their live stock together to make carload lots, in order to take the best advantage of the market. They thus eliminate the profit of the local buyer or scaler. This movement has grown quite popular in the state in the last several years, so that every year there are more and more of these local associations. Problems arise in each local association, problems of freight rates, of overcharges, of profit sharing, of membership and how much advantage of the system should be allowed to farmers who do not join the association, and yet want to enjoy its benefits. There are hundreds of problems that confront the shippers. They come together in a delegated state association convention and go over these problems, exchanging experiences and deciding on united efforts along definite lines. Often they have in mind necessary legislation which they will seek in the hope of getting relief for their greatest grievances, or legislation that will make their task of co-operative marketing easier or more simple.

Requests for Grand Jury Next February Not Seriously Taken

Requests that a grand jury be called to sit next February, which, it is said, have been made to the district judges, have not resulted in serious consideration of such a move, according to a statement made by Presiding Judge English.

It had been reported that the charges of wholesale iniquity in Omaha made during the last political campaign might result in the calling of an inquisitorial body, although only one year has elapsed since the last grand jury sat, and it has been the custom to make the interval two years. "I hadn't heard any talk about a grand jury at all," declared Judge English. "The judges do not meet until January 1."

French Officers Buy Two Trains of Horses for the War

Representatives of the Omaha-Chicago roads are making a desperate attempt to secure the routing of two trainloads of horses that French army officers are buying to be sent to the war zone of Europe. However, they are getting little satisfaction, as the officers have passed the word along the line that they will not make any contract until they are ready to load.

Since last week the French army officers have bought 600 animals, and as soon as they increase the purchases to 1,000 they will be ready to ship. The 1,000 horses will be sufficient to load two trains.

Two government game wardens who appeared against them were unable to positively identify Grayson and Jager as the hunters who shot a snubnose at Carter lake, saying that they were only convinced that the shot came from their boat.
