By MELLIFICIA. Thursday, December 10, 1914.

ONE never knows what amusement is ahead of them when they lie for Excelsior Springs. This is the opinion of several prominent Omahans who have just returned from there.

Mr. James L. Paxton and Mr. J. A. Cavers say they saw some dance while there, and the latter returns with the reputation of being no little "trotter."

Morning, noon and night found Mr. Cavers cajoling some guest to the ballroom piano. Failing there, the old, faithful music box would be called to action to satisfy Mr. Cavers' whim.

The stride of the lame duck caught him, if he did stump his toe terribly in the fox trot. Maybe Mr. Cavers did not follow our friend Turpin's advice, "Hesitate, hesitate, and whatever you do don't trot."

Mr. William McKnight, major domo of the dining room, a little peevish by the insouciant entry of Mr. Cavers into his domain, doing the Zeppehlin glide as he "slid" into place, suggested that the gentleman from Omaha bring his friends to a real hop at the "Albany."

A number of guests at the Elms hotel accepted, and here agile Mr. Cavers met his "Waterloo" in "walkin' the dog," an art of which he is at once acknowledged his complete ignorance as he watched the dog walk in a circle described by a foot radius.

With the departure Sunday of Mr. Paxton and Mr. Cavers, the Elms' force of funmakers, which had been in session there for a week, was removed.

Debutante Tea.

Mrs. Frank Bacon was hostess today at a tea, which was given from 3 until 6 o'clock, to introduce her daughter, Miss Isabelle Bacon. Mrs. Bacon and daughter received in the living room, which was decorated with Killarney roses.

Miss Bacon wore a gown of pale blue crepe de chine, made with long tunic of net, trimmed with bronze fur. Small pink roses trimmed the bodice, which was finished with a cape of pink tulle. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pink and black satin, in tulle, made with over-dress of black net.

Coffee was served in the dining room. The table decorations were of pink roses and pink-shaded candles.

Invitations were extended to 30 guests. The tea was followed by a dancing party at Turpin's academy, to which 19 guests were invited. Assisting this afternoon were:

TOYS

Toyland is a busy place these days—Trains are running—Aeroplanes flying—the whirr and buzz of mechanical toys—the squeak of funny animals and strange dolls mingled with the shouts of happy children make Toyland at Orchard & Wilhelm's a place of fascination to young and old alike.

The basement is filled full of toys—so many that we can't begin to tell you about them all.

LIGHTS FOR HORSE DRAWN VEHICLES FROM NOW ON

Among the first dealers to seize upon the opportunity to supply the public with lights for horse drawn vehicles, an ordinance upon which goes into effect tonight, is the Ford Supply company, 213 Farnam street. A penalty is attached to violations of the ordinance, which requires that there shall be both front and rear lights on all vehicles drawn by horses. The object is to reduce the possibility of collisions on dimly lighted streets.
