

Miss Society

By MELLIFICIA. Monday, December 28, 1914.

Quite a new feminine type has appeared in our midst, wafted, possibly on the wings of the first cold wave.

The latest turn of fashion's wheel has brought forward a female dandy, much dandier than the male dandy or dude of years gone by, and quite the opposite in every way of the slouchily dressed, rubber-soled shoe, no heels, creation so prevalent last summer.

Observe an Omaha maid of the advanced prototype, a girl of the moment, swinging up Farnam street.

The shyness, the delicacy of our grandmothers have dropped from her as a cast off garment. She stalks supreme in her wonderful straight togie, wearing manish shoes with spats, heretofore the dashing prerogative of the made dandy solely. With her straight box coat and stiff collar, she looks like a handsome youth at first glance (and incidentally, this is just what the dear little thing is aiming at). Below, she affects a plain skirt, as narrow as possible, and when she is really brave she will carry a walking stick. This is of wood, with a turned or straight top and more or less jeweled. The costume is completed with manish gloves, not small any more, the little hand, that last touch of feminine dignity, has been sacrificed now. She will wear risk a six and a quarter against a five and a half if the gloves are well cut and white. And lastly, but not least, she has pockets; all hall such a convenience.

This new feminine protoplasm is an ornament, something at least to be looked at. Whether she has come to stay or not, we do not know and do not care, but will enjoy her while she lasts.

Cornell Concert Parties.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Gaines will entertain at a box party at the Cornell Musical club's concert at the American theater this evening in honor of Miss Helen Louise Crosby of Topeka, who is the guest of Miss Marion Kuhn. Following the concert the party will attend the dance in honor of the Cornell men at the Rome hotel. Those present will be: Misses—Helen Louise Crosby, Louise Dinning, Frances Hochstetler, Marion Kuhn.

In and Out of the Bee Hive. Mr. George Evans, manager of the Cornell Glee club, is the guest of Mr. Frank Selby while in Omaha.

REGULAR YALE PENNANT AT ALUMNI CELEBRATION

When the Nebraska Association of Yale Alumni holds its banquet at the Omaha club, the genuine Yale colors will be present in the shape of a Yale pennant forty inches high and seven feet six inches in length. This is the pennant presented a year ago to M. J. Greevy of Omaha, by former President Taft, now president emeritus of the Yale corporation. President Dixon of the Yale Alumni has borrowed the pennant from Mr. Greevy to be part of the decoration at the banquet.

Many Packages at Postoffice With Addresses Lost

A number of Omahans to whom Christmas packages were sent through the mails may not receive them for a considerable time, if at all. Tags and address labels were lost, so the postal authorities do not know to whom and where the parcels should be delivered. A good-sized pile of such parcel post matter is heaped up on the floor of the office of Superintendent of Mails Meland at the postoffice.

Of the many thousands of Christmas packages which escaped loss of tags and labels the last are just now being delivered. Many arrived Christmas day or Saturday, so, although intended for the holiday, were two or three days late in reaching their destinations. Most of the carriers and parcel post wagons had much Christmas mail to handle all day Monday.

Yetter Charges AGAIN AMENDED

Defendant Changes Term "Improper Relations" in Her Answer to "Indignities."

MRS. YETTER WATCHED HIM

She Admits on Cross-Examination that She Did Not Know of His Meeting Mrs. Martinez Until Months Later.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 28.—(Special Telegram.)—The charge of "improper relations" against William L. Yetter, wholesale paper dealer of Kansas City and Omaha, upon which Mrs. Yetter based the defense in her husband's suit for divorce, was settled to the general term of "indignities," when the hearing before Judge Heohorn was resumed this morning after a recess of four days. The term "indignities" was discarded as too harsh. The hearings probably will extend through today and a decision is not expected until tomorrow.

Mrs. Yetter Contradicts Self.

On cross-examination, Mrs. Yetter was asked to review her husband's conduct with other women.

"Did you believe your husband's coldness in December, 1912, was caused by his meeting Mrs. Martinez?" Mrs. Yetter was asked. Mrs. Alma Martinez of Deadwood, S. D., was named as a co-respondent in Mrs. Yetter's answer.

"Yes," Mrs. Yetter said. Then, by a series of questions, Mr. Yetter's attorneys obtained from Mrs. Yetter a confession that she did not know of her husband's meeting with Mrs. Martinez until the following spring.

Hundred and Fifty Thousand War Tax is Collected Here

Almost $150,000 extra revenue from the emergency war taxes recently imposed by congress has been collected in Nebraska through the local department of internal revenue, according to Acting Collector E. W. North.

Documentary and proprietary stamps brought in $5,000, wine stamps, $12,000 and special taxes or licenses on various lines of business netted $45,000 in this state.

In spite of the addition of the emergency revenue to the year's receipts Collector North states that the total revenue collected for 1914 will be only $20,000 more than for 1913. This year's total will be about $7,743,000.
