SEVERAL of Omaha's younger generation are making rapid progress in the musical world; so much so that we will not doubt soon add new laurels to our now scintillating atmosphere.

One unusually talented youngster is Master Bernard Hanighen. This little tot has reached the pedal stage of supremacy in his work, but not years. His feet come within miles of the ordinary pedal, but to facilitate his progress his parents have had a pedal built especially for his practice. He now pedals like a veteran.

Little Miss Elizabeth Paffenrath, although but 6 years old, is a regular prodigy. This little mite has just been studying the piano since October and she has already appeared on several recital programs.

Little Miss Gene Palmer, daughter of Mrs. George Elmer, is not yet in her teens and is doing work in the advanced music classes.

Miss Virginia Crofoot, though some older in her art than the others, bids fair to follow in the footsteps of her mother, Mrs. L. F. Crofoot, and her aunt, Miss Frances Nash.

ANGELA MORGAN, poetess of America's delegation to the International Peace congress, called by the women of Holland.

ANGELA MORGAN

Young Hopeful Causes Much Grief to His Fond Parents

The juvenile mind is characteristically blind to social distinctions. It does not perceive the great gulf fixed between the Possessors of Mammon and the Nonpossessors of Mammon. And young Van Rensselaer Pipp, heir to the Pipp millions, finds company and joyous companionship in Tommy Jenks, son of Jenks, the hod carrier. Behold now the exploit which this very characteristic had dictated right here in Omaha. The small heir apparent to a staggering amount of Omaha mammon is the hero, although his proud father and his dotting mother would call him the villain.

Let us call the family Pipp, just for convenience in narration. The Pipp motor car is vast in size and glistening in appearance. Mamma Pipp feels that it properly represents the dignity of the family and incidentally prevents too close inquiry into the occupations of two grandfathers who were, Mrs. Pipp is secretly, silently, sorrowful to remember, honest workmen.

The Pipp glide about the city in their wheeled palace in as regal splendor as King George in his glided coach riding to Parliament. Young Pipp, starched and Little-Lord-Fauntleroyed in clothes that he has accompanied his loving parents. He is to them as the apple of their eyes, eye, even more than their wealth and their pride.

The other afternoon the Pipp, gliding down Farnam street, were surprised at the number of persons (persons) in the word-taught accent on the first syllable who waved their hands at them as the wheeled palace glided on its way. Mrs. Pipp was at first astonished, then indignant. She wondered vaguely whether the public had learned about those grand-fathers.

Mr. Pipp was surprised, too. Master Pipp was not surprised. His mother has not lived with him nine years without becoming acquainted with his characteristics.

And so, as folks continued to wave at the automobile, Mamma Pipp turned her aristocratic head upon her regal neck and cast her haughty eyes upon her son, the apple of her eye.

So's good-looking, good natured, rosy face was suffused with grins and his big blue eyes were full of joyous juvenile twinkles.

One chubby hand was at the sill of the open limousine window. "What have you in your hand, dear?" demanded Mamma Pipp in a Mrs. Potter Palmer voice.

"Aw, nothin', mother," grinned Master Pipp. Mrs. Pipp decided instantly that, under the circumstances the Queen of England would seize the hand of the young Prince of Wales. She instantly did the same to young Pipp. The hand came in and with it a large placard. Mamma Pipp's eyes gazed upon the placard and this is what she saw rudely lettered upon it: "JITNEY BUS 'S CENAS"

Almost Mamma Pipp wept. Almost Father Pipp laughed when she showed the awful thing to him. Mamma Pipp thought she detected a wink going from her husband to her son, but she decided she must be mistaken.

Master Pipp loves his mother. And so he has solemnly promised her that he will act in the future as a young ornament of society should act.

"I want Lee's Shampoo"

Don't hesitate in demanding the use of Lee's Shampoo by your barber or hair dresser. It costs the barber more than some other kinds, but, in gallon bottles, the cost is less than one cent per shampoo and it takes less time and labor in doing the manual work.

There is only one place where it hurts the barber and that is in eliminating the need of hair tonics, hair restorers, dandruff cures, etc., but that is always for the customer to decide.

Lee's Shampoo cleans quick, washes out quick and dries quick. It leaves no soap in the hair fibre and scalp pores to set up scalp irritation and hair troubles. It is a very pure and neutral vegetable oil, alcohol, glycerine, semi-liquid soap, emerald green in color, beautifully transparent and pleasantly perfumed.

Don't ask merely for green soap. Any soap can be colored green but there is only one Lee's Liquid Shampoo.

10-Shampoo Bottle 25 cts. At your druggist's or postpaid. Special on quarts and gallons.

SPECIAL TO BARBERS AND HAIR DRESSERS
To any bona-fide owner of an operating barber shop or hair dressing parlor, we will furnish free a quart bottle of Lee's Shampoo. The only condition is that you follow our directions in applying the Shampoo and buy more from us if your customers are pleased. This applies in or out of Omaha.
