WHY Do Men Dislike Boudoir Caps? is the title of the following rather interesting impression written by one who entertains a bit of a doubt that Mr. Broadshoulders really does dislike this particular article of feminine adornment provided it is appropriately worn:

Who was it that said the other day that the reason men so heartily disliked boudoir caps was because the woman who would wear a boudoir cap in the morning was the woman who was too untidy to arrange her tresses neatly before noon. Obviously, of course, no man loves a slattern.

But do men dislike boudoir caps? Of course, this is a rather difficult question to answer, because most women haven't any very adequate way of discovering more than one man's taste on the subject of boudoir caps, although some ingenious debutantes have been known to discuss the subject by way of small talk. The verdict has to go down that men really do like these frivolous little French contraptions. If such were not the case why should Fannie Ward and Billie Burke, who surely do not play to the women of audiences, usually show their graces in at least one act of their plays with their auburn hair cap crowned.

Most men really do like all those many indescribable nothings called negligees, be they fluffy caps or ribbon-made slippers, but with a man's characteristic feeling for the fitness of things they do not like to see these contraptions worn inappropriately. What man does not like to see his wife sipping coffee opposite him in the soft lace frills of a becoming matinee. But what husband does like to see the same lace ruffles hovering over the frying pan?

When once frills have so been desecrated the charm is broken.

At the Brandeis Theater.

Advance reservations for Miss Billie Burke's engagement at the Brandeis theater next Monday and Tuesday evenings, with matinee Tuesday, are the largest in number that have been received for any attraction since David Warfield. MANY ENTER GARDEN CLUB

Instructor Dale Finds One Lass Who is Mother for Three Young Brothers and Sisters.

ELEVEN SCHOOLS CANVASED

Adeline Peterson, 11-year-old daughter of Andrew Peterson, 213 South Forty-first street, probably deserves the most credit of any child so far entered in the garden club being organized among boys and girls of the city schools. At least E. E. Dale, the expert employed as instructor and overseer in the movement, inclines to that belief.

Not that Adeline has already grown anything wonderful in a backyard patch, for she has only begun her garden. But Dale asserts she is a little wonder, anyway, for although she is more than busy keeping house for her father and three younger sisters and brothers, and is attending Windsor school besides, she has entered the garden club competition against over 150 boys and girls who have plenty of spare time, and she says she is going to win a prize, too.

Adeline's mother is dead, so Adeline is the little mother of the household. She helps her dad all she can, doing much of the housework and helping with the younger children. Dale thinks she is decidedly ambitious and enterprising to undertake a garden in addition to her housekeeping and school work, and he is going to help her all he can.

Expect Enrollment of 500.

Out of eleven schools that have been thoroughly canvassed in the garden club movement, 153 boys and girls have enrolled in the clubs. On that basis, Dale expects a total of at least 500 members from the forty-four public and parochial schools in Omaha. He feels that such an enrollment will be quite satisfactory, considering the nature of the undertaking, which includes keeping a garden for five months, making a careful report of expense, receipts and profits, and writing a story of the work at the end of the season.

Hundreds of school children who are unable to join a garden club because of lack of adequate grounds, or time for the work, or because their vacation plans will prevent carrying the garden work through the summer are nevertheless taking advantage of the penny package seed offers in the schools. In one school where only a dozen boys and girls enrolled in the club work, over 1,500 packages of seeds were bought for planting in flower and vegetable beds, Secretary R. B. Flower says.

Girls, Why Move to Kansas to Wed with Eligibles at Home

Alarmed at the issuance by the town clerk of Smith Center, Kan., of a list of those eligible for marriage in that part of this glorious land of ours, the editor of the Gering Courier, Gering, Neb., discards his sartorial encumbrances, swings a quiverful of arrows about his blushing form, takes his arrow in hand and calls upon the girls of Gering to get married just as quickly as they can "straighten their throw ropes."

And he shows the fair ones a vista of sixteen, substantial, real estates, personal propertyed bachelors "who are the best looking marriageable men we have ever met."

"Now, girls, don't send away down to bleeding Kansas when you have so many fine chances right here in your own county," the editor beseeches. He then proceeds to enumerate the sixteen by name, appending to each name the lands, stock and other property possessed. It appears that none of these young men owns less than a section of land. Some, the editorial matchmaker points out, have built new houses of additions to their old ones and are "just ready to entertain a wife."

"Then there is Harry Reid, who lives with his brother, Raleigh, and nary a woman to stir the straw ticks or warm the multiguns of these deserving bachelor farmers," cries the editor. Even George Erb, who carries the mail on Route 1, where all these unmarried men live, is a bachelor.

Girls, girls, what is the matter?
