Redick's Old Picnic Grounds Are Now to Be Put on Market

Mrs. M.H. Blackwell

The noted Redick's Grove, as such, will soon be no more. The last of this tract is now platted and is being put on the market by A. P. Tukey & Son. This is known as Redick's Second addition. It contains forty-six lots, between Thirtyfirst and Thirty-third streets and between Jackson and Leavenworth.

Interest has always centered around this old spot on account of the great maple grove, in which the big picnics were held in the pioneer days of Omaha's history. The tract now thrown on the market is still a part of this famous old grove and contains a great many huge Ancient Order of United Workmen hall, the first picnics he can remember in this grove was given by Mrs. John McCormick in 1862. Over 200 were present. Two good springs bubbled up in the grove in those days, so there was plenty good water for the picnickers. Where the present boulevard is, a small creek ran through the grove at that time. Judge Redick's father dammed this and made a fine swimming hole for the boys. The winding roads through the grove in pioneer days made it the fashionable drive

Redick's Grove originally comprised 160 acres of the farm homesteaded by a man named Weatherwax. In 1861, going to war, he sold 100 acres to John I. Redick. Leavenworth and from Twenty-seventh on the east. A large part of the ground is now covered with residences, stores, churches, the Nicholas Senn hospital, Temple Israel, and so on.

John L Redick first laid out Redick's First addition, which was afterwards replatted into Redick's subdivision. Redtek's Grove addition and other smaller W. A. Redick's Second addition is the last of this famous tract available for platting.
