LUSITANIA CREW SHOWS HEROISM

Upholds Tradition of Courage in British Merchant Service by Conduct.

Queenstown to the Central News says: it is agreed that the Lusitania's crew upheld the tradition of heroism in the were 30 in the first cabin, 800 in the sec British mercantile marine. Those not and and ist in the steerage. engaged in launching the boats went among the passengers seeing to it that so far as possible all were provided with stated that the Lustania's speed had been reduced in the morning, when the liner was off Fastnet. Later in the day it was increased, and the word to resume full speed was given just before the first explosion occurred.

The first torpedo entered the steamship's bunkers, hurling a shower of coal as high as the upper deck. The captain immediately headed for shore, but the second explosion followed quickly. This tornedo is believed to have killed or injured many passengers who were lunchin the dining saloon."

LESS THAN 700 RESCUED FROM THE LUSITANIA

People Aroused. Nothing that the Germans have done since the outbreak of the war has so sroused the anger and determination of the British people as the sinking of the Lusitanis. This anger is shared by the Americans in London, who had relatives or friends aboard.

The members of the stock exchange insisted on the withdrawal of all members of German birth, although nationalized. At many places throughout the country, these nationalized British sublects were made to suffer for Germany's action. In one jarge shiphuliding plant at Wallsend the workman threatened to strike unless those employes with German names were lischarged, and the company although badly in need of workmen was compelled to grant the demand. German barbers and other Germans whose presence in the country has been tolerated since the war began, also found themselves boycotted. But there have been no disorders of any kind.

The German submarine made no at-mpt to cave anybody. We saw it for moment before it deve.

The first torpedo struck us between the first and second funnels. The Lusi-tania shock and settled down a bit. Two other torpedoes quickly followed, and soon finished our ship. Four or five of our lifeboats want down with it, and the tremendous section as the liner was enguifed, dragged many people down also.

our small boat before the first rescue steamers arrived. Provious to this time small shore boats and fishing amacks Story of Cadet.

W. G. E. Meyers of Stratford, Opt., 16 years old, who was on his way to join the British navy as a cadet, said:

had just gone to the upper deck after lunch, to play a game of quoits with two other boys. One of them, looking over the side, saw a white streak in the water and shouted: There's a terpede, coming straight at us.' We watched it until it struck us, with an awful exosion. Then we rushed to the boat deck. Just as we got there a huge quantity of splinters and great masses of water flew all around us.

"A second torpodo struck us about four dautes after the first. I went below get a life belt, and met a woman who was frenzied with four. I tried to calm her and helped her into a boat. Then saw a boat which was nearly swamped. I got into it and, with other men, bailed it out. Then a crowd of men clambered into it and nearly swamped it."

Rev. If. W. Simpson, a passenger in the second cabin, saved himself by clinging to an upturned boat.

Signal of Distress. 'After a struggle we filled this boat with all we could rescue," Dr. Simpson said today. "We tied a pair of trousers to an oar and hotsted it as a signal of

"A big trawler came along and took us zboard.

"When we were struck I was in the saloon. Lafe belts were handed around, but the people did not want to out them on, and they rushed off to the deck just as they were.'

William Brown of Alaska, another survivor, said he decided not to rush for the hoats. "I came to the conclusion that a life belt was the thing for me," he said. So I went to my cabin and secured one. With it on, I slid down a long rope into the water. Subsequently I got into a

H. Smethurst, a steerage passenger, was paved in the same way. He had put his wife into a lifeboat, and in spite of her urging he infused to accompany her, say-ing the women and children must go first. After the boat with his wife had pulled away, the husband put on a life belt, alipped into the water and floated until he was picked up.

Made Clear to Germany. The government stated this in its last note to Germany, and at the same time issued a warning that the imperial German government would be held "to strict accountability" by the United States for any loss of American vessels or lives. The decision, which the president and his advisers must reach, it was admitted in all quarters, is a momentous one. Those officials conversant with the legal aspects of the case pointed out that the United States faced a grave and serious problem of lasting importance in history as all the world-neutrals and belligerents two slike-would walt with acute expectancy for the course which the United States would pursue to preserve the rules of international law, particularly the rights of neutrals with respect to the safety of noncombatants on merchant ships at

The following additional list of survivors was received tonight at the Cunard. The suggestion that the warnings by the German embasey in newspaper advertisements should have been sufficient to deter Americans from traveling aboard ships flying the British flag was widely commented upon among diplomats.

No Official Warning. At the State department Secretary Bryan revealed that the embassy's warning had never been officially communicaled to the State department and that since the announcement by the German admiralty in February or its proclamation of a war zone, the American protest and the reply from Germany saying the government would disclaim responsibility for accidents to neutrals, the subject for several weeks, had not been officially mentioned between the Berlin and Washington governments.

Among a few diplomatists there was a disposition to crit'cise Americans for minimizing these warnings, but some officials pointed out that it was never conceived that the Germans' submarine campaign would be extended to passenger liners which usually carried scores of neutrals, without specific warning that such a vessel would be attacked. With respect to the reports that the State department had discouraged the travel of Americans to Europe, Secretary Bryan said:

"We have discouraged ever since the beginning of the war the going abroad of any naturalized Americans and have declined to give passports to Americans who wanted to go abroad for pleasure, but have given them to those going or ELMWOOD, Neb., May 9 .- (Special.)dedication exercises were held here today for the new $14,000 Methodist church. Rev. P. Van Fleet, pastor of the church the largest individual contributor be sides being one of the most untiring workers in securing the edifice and as appreciation of this the membership has voted to name it the "Rev. P. Van Fleet, D. D., Memorial Methodist Episcopal

The building which was dedicated free of debt, is said to be one of the most beautiful in southeast Nebraska and for a town of this size is one of the most costly to be found in the entire section. The church is built on the library plan and constructed of red pressed brick and atifricial stone. All of the windows are the richly designed art glass windows. The furniture and interior furnishings ae rof the very finest. The building has a seating capacity of 600 and consists of the main auditorium, galleries and Epworth league room. Besides this there is a basement modernly arranged with kitchen, dining room and rest room. The deditation sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Embree, superintendent of the Tecumseh district, and in the evening Chancellor Fulmer of Nebraska Wesleyan university delivered an address on "Education and Environment."

Rev. P. Van Fleet, who was so largely instrumental in securing the new building for Elmwood, has a very distinctive record as a builder of Methodist churches in this part of Nebraska. Following are the towns in which there are buildings that he has helped either in dedicating Unadilla, Graf, Murdock, Syracuse, Nebraska City, Anburn, Table Bock and Elmwood. In the majority of these cases he has contributed in a financial way.
