Twenty Cars Burn. Shortly after the train was cut in two the gasoline tank exploded, and with great rapidity the fire spread, quickly communicating to the other nineteen cars, all of which were burned. These cars were loaded with groceries, one with lumber, one with strawberries, one with onions and five with silver ore being brought from New Mexico to the Omaha smelter. The silver ore was valued at $10,000 per car. While the silver ore was melted by the heat of the fire and the metal ran off over the ground, it can all be saved.

M. P. SEEKS CAUSE OF WRECK AND FIRE

Fifty Thousand Dollars Worth of Silver Ore Melted—Can Be Saved.

FOUR ARE BURNED TO DEATH

Superintendent D'Bernardi of the Missouri Pacific has inaugurated an investigation to ascertain the cause of the fire that destroyed nineteen loaded cars in the freight train at a point two miles south of Nebraska City early Monday morning.

The investigation has failed to develop anything tangible. Conductor Kirz was unable to throw much light on the origin of the fire. He had thirty-three cars in his train, and when he first noticed the fire, a tower of flame seemed to be shooting up from one of the tank cars carrying gasoline. The fire was discovered by the engineer at about the same time.

When the discovery was made the train was moving at a speed of about fifteen miles per hour. It was in a cut about thirty feet deep. The engineer stopped his train and the fireman and brakeman went back as close to the fire as they could get. There they cut off the burning cars and the balance of the train pulled ahead out of the fire zone. With the other cars there was nothing to do but let them burn. As the fire progressed the trainmen heard the cries of men in the cars, but they were unable to reach them.

In clearing away the wreckage the bones of four men were found, and it is believed that there was still another burned to death. The men were all tramps who secreted themselves in some of the cars farther down the line.

DESCRIBES THE ASSAULT

Official Observer Describes Attack of British Upon Positions of Germans.

MOVE ASTONISHES ENEMIES

PARIS, May 18.—The official eye witness with the French army gives a description of the attack on Neuville St. Vaast.

"From 4 to 10 o'clock in the morning of May 13," he says, "the artillery prepared for the infantry attack with thousands of projectiles. Nearly every one of these going home, the enemy was demoralized. At 10 o'clock, according to the pre-arrangement, our infantry, massed in the rear, leaped out of the trenches without further order. Barbed wire as thick as a man's finger, protecting the enemy's works, had been annihilated by our fire. Bridges, prepared in advance for crossing the trenches, were thrown aside in the ardor of the assault, the men leaping across the gaps and rushing across the hill separating them from La Targette, without flinching under the heavy rifle fire and machine gun fire.

"The Germans, astonished at our assault, seemed ralled to the spot, and when the two forces came into contact only those machine guns which were in protected positions continued to fire. They were, however, unable to check the advance of our men, who reached the houses in La Targette. There hand-to-hand fighting in the streets and orchards ensued and our advance was somewhat stayed. But the town was soon surrounded. Fighting their way, the French troops finally reached the first house of Neuville.

"At the same time our attacking forces on the center, battling with the same spirit, crossed the road to Bethune. Among the tombs in the cemetery a desperate engagement ensued. This territory was twice taken and twice lost, but we held the ground in the neighborhood, capturing five lines of trenches and then dug in. All this took place within two and a half hours.

Open on Enemies. "While the men stopped to breathe, the artillery came up in the rear, and with the same precision as in maneuvers, although under a heavy machine gun fire, placed their pieces and opened on the enemy.

"Startled by cries, our men discovered a detachment of German light cavalry in concealment, with seven three-inch guns and 500 shells. They were taken prisoners and sent to the rear. There were German dead everywhere in the trenches and while the infantry was finishing the destructive work of artillery, piles were gathered and buried.

"In the succeeding days our effort was directed at conquering Neuville. Here the large, deep cellars of the houses were not sufficient for the enemy's fortifications; they covered the top of the cellars with material three feet thick and dug new shelters in the cellars themselves, strongly protected, to which they fled during the bombardment. From one end of the village to the other these cellars were connected by underground passages, through which the soldiers circulated, rising up like woodchucks here and there where least expected.

Every House Armed. "Every house was armed with machine guns in these reinforced shelters, but in the face of these defenses, from Monday to Friday, our infantry continued to assault without cessation.

"On Saturday at nightfall we held the greater part of the village and the progress we had made outside the place resulted in strengthening our position.

"During the night of May 11 violent counter attacks occurred to the east of the village. Our troops allowed the Germans to advance to within twenty yards of their trenches and then with machine guns and rifles mowed down the first line. Then the infantry, leaping out of the cemetery in pitch darkness, threw themselves upon the remaining force of the enemy and those who were not bayoneted were brought in prisoners."

GILDER'S PAINTING IS BOUGHT BY ST. PAUL The St. Paul Institute of St. Paul, Minn., has just paid an Omaha artist, Robert F. Gilder, the highest of compliments by purchasing his picture, "Winter Morning," which was on exhibition there recently. In a popular voting contest Mr. Gilder's picture received 2,506 votes. Although a St. Paul artist received the highest number of votes, Mr. Gilder's "Winter Morning" was in such high favor that the institute voted to keep it in the city to be a part of its permanent collection. St. Paul local papers are unstinted in their praise and give Mr. Gilder a most glowing writeup.

Yellow Pine Rate Case Pops Up Again

The complications that resulted from the old yellow pine advance freight rate case, which is now four years old, still keep popping up in an echo here and there. An echo of this old case has just been sounded, when Examiner Bell of the Interstate Commerce commission took testimony for a day in Omaha in the case in which three Omaha lumber companies are still seeking reparation from the railroads for the days in which the railroads charged them an excessive freight rate without authority of the Interstate Commerce commission.
