Wounded Soldiers Only War Sign, Says Hungarian

"If it wasn't that we see wounded soldiers on the streets we wouldn't know that there is a war going on," says Alexander Pollack of 78 Kaiser Wilhelm's boulevard, Budapest, Hungary, in a letter to his boyhood chum, Henry Pollack of Omaha. The letter was written April 25. It states that no man in Hungary had, up to that time, been called to the colors who were over 23 years of age. Alexander Pollack is, himself, about 40 years old and he says "it doesn't look as if I will be called on." He quotes prices on cattle, wheat, beans, and several other staple food articles which range from 50 to 100 per cent higher than before the war. "But what does this matter," he says. "The farmers get the benefit of these increased prices."

Canary Enters and Jewelry Goes Out the Same Window

About $1,000 worth of jewelry and valuables went out of the window when the household of Henry Hiller was burglarized early last Monday morning. To gain an entrance the intruder had moved a small table holding a bird cage containing a canary. The next day a stray canary flew in at the same window and sought to join fortunes with the bird already there. Mr. and Mrs. Hiller are wondering whether it is an omen or coincidence. In the meantime they are caring for the canary bird stranger until some one claims it, and waiting for the return of the stolen jewelry or its reimbursement by the insurance company.

RAINS HELP MORE THAN HURT CROPS

Farmers from All Over the State Say the Prospects Were Never Better Than Now.

TIME TO REPLANT THE CORN

"Splendid," "simply grand" and "the best ever" is the way Nebraska's crop prospects are described by farmers from out in the state who are in Omaha for a day or two on business.

In spite of slight damage done to the last two or three days, and in spite of flood water in some of the river valleys, all the farmers agree that it is not too late to remedy the slight damage to corn, and as to the winter wheat prospects, they assert that they never were better.

Z. T. Lettwich, member of the State Board of Agriculture and owner of big farms near St. Paul and De Soto, declared at the Merchants hotel that a sound St. Paul crop prospects are better than for years past.

Expect Bumper Crop. "Favorable winter conditions, the late rains and the generous rains have given us hopes of reaping a bigger harvest than ever before," he said. "I am told by all the farmers in the community, and also know it from my own observation, that prospects are simply grand. Up to a week ago we had more rain at St. Paul than Omaha had, and we've had plenty since then, too."

He had just come in from his farm at De Soto, and although told by the railroad conductor that from Oakland to Tyson there was flood water, washouts and too much water on the lowland fields, he predicted that the damage to corn prospects would not be serious.

Reins Most Beneficial. "Even though the lifted corn washes badly in furrows, it is not too late to replant the comparatively small areas that will need such treatment," he asserted. "The rains will help rather than hurt the winter wheat, and will have little or no effect on alfalfa, except to make the later cuttings all the better. Outside the flooded districts we never had better prospects than now."

Among other farmers at the Merchants who voiced similar opinions were Harry Williams of Gothenburg, C. Ellington of Brunswick and Nat Houston of La Platte. Ellington said that in the northern part of the state every farmer was rejoicing over the big rains. Dan Gaines, proprietor of the Merchants, said he had heard many other farmers tell of glowing crop prospects as a result of the precipitation. He also has several farms.

"We farmers in the west end, where dry farming methods prevail, are tickled to death over the heavy rains," volunteered A. B. Persinger of Lodge Pole, who is at the Paxton hotel. "Our winter wheat is virtually made by the recent rains, which came on top of the splendid effects of the late snows and favorable winter conditions."

NORTHERN PART OF STATE IS FLOODED

Heaviest Rain in Years in This Section Washes Out Railroad Tracks and Floods Farms.

HALF INCH OF RAIN IN OMAHA

Over the north half of Nebraska the rain Tuesday was probably the heaviest in years, railroads operating through the storm stricken area reporting from one-half to six inches, doing much damage on the low lands and washing out crops on the hillsides.

The Northwestern system suffered the most severely. All the way from Long Pine on the Black Hills division, across the north half of the state and into Iowa, there was a continuous downpour from early evening until morning. On the main line there was no serious damage, though trains into the city were two and three hours late on account of soft tracks.

On the branches of the Omaha road, a part of the Northwestern system, the Crofton, Wynot and Bloomfield lines were put out of commission by the washing away of grades and weakening of bridges over the streams. In many places and over stretches from a few rods to several miles in length, along the lowlands tributary to the three branches running into the north part of the state, the water was from two to three feet deep. In places the track is submerged and in others washed off onto the right-of-way.

Streams Out of Banks. All the streams are out of their banks and the draws are full of water, which has spread out over farms, seriously damaging crops.

The Great Northern through the north part of the state, running from Sioux City to O'Neill, is reported in bad condition and out of service on account of the washing away of stretches of track at points where the line crosses the streams.

Roads farther south escaped with little damage, though the Union Pacific had a washout on its Columbus branch. This, however, was repaired during the day.

Of the roads from the east, the Great Western was the only one that seems to have been caught by the storm to any serious extent. South of Carroll, Ia., and between there and Manning, some 300 feet of grade was washed out, necessitating the detouring of all trains over the Northwestern from Carroll west.

Half Inch in Omaha. The Rock Island had a small washout over in the hills east of Council Bluffs, delaying trains a couple of hours.

While the rain reached flood proportions in the north part of the state, it was also heavy all along the Missouri valley with the possible exception of Omaha. Here the official record showed a precipitation of one-half inch. Below

Women Will Place Flowers on Graves of Soldiers Saturday

Mrs. Sarah Gardner, chaplain of the relief corps, will conduct the services at Prospect Hill at 10:30 o'clock.

Sunday morning at 10 o'clock the post and corps will attend Memorial services at the North Side Christian church, and at 3:30 o'clock will meet at the court house and go in a body to the Young Women's Christian association, where they will be guests at the Memorial services there.

WEST DODGE STRIP IS TO BE REPAVED SHORTLY

City commissioners announce that arrangements have been made for the delayed paving of a strip on Dodge street west of Forty-sixth street, the distance being about 1,000 feet.

The paving work will be done within the next few months.
