How instead of trying to gain whole at once he made a little book for dally examination and centered his intion upon one especial one each successively going through the list complete in thirteen weeks, (There being thirteen virtues upon his list, and four courses of it in a year? He did not try it only for one course, nor for just one year, but with more or less frequent interruptions he continued the me all through his life. He always carried the little book with him, and writing from in his seventy-ninth year. he said: "But on the whole, though I never arrived at that perfection, I had ambitious of obtaining, yet 1 have been, if I had not attempted it." a the practice of each virtue helped him ranged list of the virtues of the ext of music in the order in which they even the most

We all know the truth of the ig, that what isn't worth working or, isn't worth having, that what i lightly gained is soon forgotten? If more of the talented ones had to work for their lessons in some way they migh approciate them the more. If only there vere more incentive for work. It is that which is lacking rather than opportunity

George Honry Howard, a prominent s writing a series of articles upon "Mis ing Links in American Music Trab the first of which appeared in Music America last week. It takes up the de ficiencies upon the part of the American tudent, and the first deficiency he gives s lack of thoroughness in theoretics mining, i. e., harmony and counterpoint The reasons he gives for this poor theoretical training on the part of the student are: (1) The prevalent American ness of intellect fatal to study; (2) the on spirit of unrest, a thing begun seldom finished; (3) the writing cone is sidered from a mysical viewpoint; (4) the study of theoretical music begun too late: (5) poor quality of textbooks often used (6) lack of ear training discipline, and too rauch hurry. It is well worth a read-ing and furnishes much food for the thought. There is so much truth in the aying, "You can lead a horse to water, but you can not make him drink," which the hair. Our grandmother made up a has been apily paraphrased by somebody mixture of Sage Tea and Suiphur to keep to "You may send a boy to coffege, but her locks dark and beautiful, and thouse can not make him think." Mean-sands of women and men who value that dent would define his attitude in something of this manner: "It is not so bad old-time recipe. to have to learn to play or sing; maybe own a church position, or go on the bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphu road with it. Theory shows one how to Compound," which darkens the hair so stuff, but if a person can play, I can't sibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it kverybody knows it is lots smarter to and falling heir. You just dampen a te a guest guesser than to really know sponge or soft brush with it and draw a thing and there is niwers a chance this through your hair, taking one small that you may hit it when you guess any strand at a time. By morning the gray way, so why dweedo? People are so hard hair disappears; but what delights the upon students securitys, they want them ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to work all the time. I don't do any is that, besides beautifully darkening the mars than I have to. I must look after halr after a few applications, it also my health. is much more joy in getting out of it. Then the aforesaid average student will take a nickel and spend an hour or more of his valuable time at the movies. Some other day perhaps he may wake up and wonder why he is "a descendent instead of an ancestor," as Disraell said in the play of that name

Sigmund Landsberg was again chosen as examiner of music in the Lincoln High school, where some twenty-two students are availing themselves of the privilege of credits for music in their high school course, providing they can show that their work warrants it. Mr. Landsberg went to Lincoln last week to conduct the midterm examinations. He speaks enthus astically of the work being done in our wide-awake and more progressive sister city, where the value of music as an art, science and intensive study is recog-

HAIR AND THE MARRIAGE MARKET

Too many men have been unpleasantly surprised to find that their wife's hair which they had so greatly admired was only a switch or transformation. We now know that poor hair is a confession of either laziness or lack of knowledge and that fair care with sensible means will insure scalp health and hair beauty. In washing the hair it is not advisable to use a makeshift, but always use a preparation made for shampooing only. You can enjoy the best that is known for about three cents a shampoo by getting a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while which insures hair growth.-Advertise
