

GERMANS CAPTURE MANY MEN AND GUNS

Official Report from Berlin Shows Heavy Losses to the French at Argonne.

GERMAN LOSSES ARE SLIGHT

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—(By Wireless to London)—German troops captured 745 French soldiers and twelve machine guns in the western part of the Argonne forest yesterday, according to an official announcement made by the German War office today.

"Of these men twelve were officers," the statement says. "The Germans captured also ten smaller guns. The enemy's losses were heavy, from 400 to 500 dead having been on the field of battle. The French infantry regiment No. 155 seems to have been annihilated. The German losses were comparatively slight."

interfere, and it made use of that right to the utmost by giving advice and "pressing the button," and the British denials of these German endeavors are an afterthought and contrary to all evidence and willfully untrue. Germany maintained Austria-Hungary's position to settle its trouble with Serbia alone. It did not know the terms of the note of ultimatum beforehand and it had to accept the Austrian viewpoint as any other nation of Europe had.

I wonder whether Mr. Carnegie is going to propose the British-Irish difference to be settled by the Hague tribunal, and what his English countrymen would say to this. But Germany urged moderation into Austria-Hungary to a point that the German chancellor had to confess "he was afraid that his language was not any more palatable at the Ballplatz" (meaning the Austrian foreign office), and I am glad to publish here now for the first time in the United States one of the dispatches sent from the Berlin foreign office to the Austro-Hungarian ally: the dispatch is quoted from a London Westminister Gazette of August 1, in the book, "The Diplomatic History of the War," by M. P. Price, M. A., an English professor, a professor not only of science, but of truth. It reads as follows:

"BERLIN, July 30, 1914.—To the German Ambassador in Vienna. The report of Count Fourtades does not harmonize with the account which your excellency has given of the attitude of the Austro-Hungarian government.

"Apparently there is a misunderstanding, which I beg you to clear up. "We cannot expect Austria-Hungary to negotiate with Serbia, with which it is a state of war."

"The refusal, however, to exchange views with St. Petersburg would be a grave mistake.

"We are indeed ready to fulfill our duty. "As an ally we must, however, refuse to be drawn into a world conflagration through Austria-Hungary not respecting our advice.

"Your excellency will express this to Count Berchtold with all emphasis and great seriousness.

"RITTMANN-HOLLWEG."

When the British foreign office was yet in a more balanced mind, it repeatedly acknowledged the good services that Germany had rendered in order to exhort Austria-Hungary to moderation, but since in consequence of a number of misfortunes, the very well known English characteristic, that they are very poor sports and very bad losers, has taken hold of their mind, they constantly tried to pervert the public opinion.

Sir Edward Grey fully joined the German viewpoint, and he told the French ambassador (see England's White Paper No. 57) on July 29: "In the present case the dispute between Austria and Serbia was not one in which we felt called to take a hand. Even if the question became one between Austria and Russia we should not feel called upon to take a hand in it. It would then be a question of the supremacy of Teuton or Slav—a struggle for supremacy in the Balkans; and our idea had always been to avoid being drawn into a war over a Balkan question."

This is exactly Germany's viewpoint and it is impossible for Sir Edward Grey to take exception to this, or for Mr. Carnegie either.

Germany Not to Blame for Ignoring Conference.

Later on Jan. 29 Sir Edward Grey proposed the international conference, it would have been for Austria-Hungary, not for Germany, to accept, because it was the one to submit to that conference, and Austria-Hungary never did. And under those circumstances Germany could not even press on Austria-Hungary, because the partiality of the proposed tribunal was patent from the first. Austria was to submit to a tribunal composed of England, France, Italy and Germany, the two first being Russia's allies but the Russian point of view had been

KEARNEY WOMAN HURT BY EXPLOSION OF RANGE

KEARNEY, Neb., Jan. 30.—(Special)—Mrs. M. N. Troupe, wife of the Buffalo county treasurer, was slightly injured on Friday morning when the range in the family home exploded. Frozen pipes in the water front caused the explosion after a fire had been built in the range. The steam caused from the thawing of the pipes sent particles of the range in all directions, Mrs. Troupe being struck by some of the smaller pieces. One large piece of the stove was hurled through the door into the yard, while another piece went through two doors of the interior of the home.

News Notes of Alliance.

ALLIANCE, Neb., Jan. 30.—(Special)—J. A. Seaman, the aged father of Mrs. Hattie Owens, died here this morning after suffering for over a year with paralysis. The remains will be shipped to Waco, Neb., for burial.

A farm demonstrator for Box Butte county is almost assured. Nearly $1,200 has been subscribed by the farmers and business men of Hemingford and Alliance and the surrounding country, and the membership of the farmers' organization only lacks a few of having the required number. A final effort will be made this week when the Alliance Commercial club committee, who has charge of the proposition, will canvass the county and secure the balance of membership, so that the demonstrator can be engaged early.

SUNDAY TRUCE IN BITTER FIGHT ON FLOOR OF SENATE

the floor early tonight apparently much refreshed and ready for another long distance argument should his services prove necessary.

Throughout the long day session and as night fell again, the situation was tense. Many of the senators slept in their seats after the long watches through last night; others stretched on the sofas circling the senate chamber, others formed team relays, offensive and defensive to crowd the measure to a vote, or to head it back. There was little sharp parliamentary fencing. In the main it was steady speech-making, with here and there a flash of wit or bitterness.

Senator Lodge again gave warning that the buying of belligerent ships would precipitate grave international complications with Great Britain, France and Russia, and would "start this nation on the highway of war."

Kern Gives Notice.

During the day it was the expectation on both sides of the chamber that the contest would be carried through the night and into Sunday. But at 4 o'clock Senator Kern, leader of the administration forces, gave notice that the battle would be suspended until Monday.

At the same time there came the announcement from the democrat conference rooms that the bill would be kept before the senate continuously all next week without adjournment or recess until the measure was passed—thus retaining the endurance test after the truce of tonight.

to the friends whose help, I think, has been responsible for my appointment. I greatly enjoyed the associations I formed during the time I formerly served as judge and am looking forward with pleasure to the work to be done during the remainder of Judge Sutton's term."

Congratulated by Judges.

Judge Redick was congratulated by the other district judges, who it was loudly whispered about the court house, were not sorry that he was the governor's appointee.

Judge Redick was born in Omaha April 2, 1870, the son of John I. Redick. He was educated in the Omaha public schools and Cornell college Iowa. He was married September 12, 1888, to Miss Mary Otis Wood. He has a son, John W. Redick, and a grandson.

From 1879 to 1882 Judge Redick was chief clerk of the local federal revenue office. He was elected district judge in 1905, was re-elected in 1907 and defeated for the republican nomination in 1911. That same year he was defeated for the city commission as a citizens' union candidate.

Judge Redick is prominent socially and professionally and is regarded as an able lawyer. He is also wealthy.

Judge Sutton has become a member of the law firm of McKenzie & Cox, the firm name now being Sutton, McKenzie & Cox. He will start his new work Monday.

His last official act was the signing of divorce decrees in the suit brought by Mrs. Victoria Newland against T. Dewitt Newland. "I am sorry that the last thing I should do as a judge is to grant a divorce decree," he remarked.

Eggs in Storage Nearly Year.

WEEPING WATER, Neb., Jan. 30.—(Special)—Nearly a year ago, or in April, 1914, Jesse A. Lyon, a 7-year-old lad living near Unadilla, marked his name on an egg which was sold with others to a store at Unadilla. A few days ago word was received from a man by the name of Sam Rubine of Detroit, Mich., saying that he had noticed the egg on repacking a shipment from a cold storage house in Chicago.

HERNHARD DERNBERG.

This official British utterance tells all of Mr. Carnegie's contentions to the ground. I do not doubt the perfect sincerity of Mr. Carnegie. He has a well deserved reputation as a wellwisher to mankind and is one of the most broadminded men that had ever taken up the peace of the world in a noble and broad spirit. So I write very reluctantly against him. But he will agree that no feeling of gratitude can permit a sincere man to suppress the truth, and that everyone who has the real advance of the world in his mind should rather die for truth than live for peace.

Four Auburn Deaths.

AUBURN, Neb., Jan. 30.—(Special)—Elizabeth Pummel died Thursday at the home of her son, Cary Pummel, in this city. The funeral of Benjamin Fradenberg, an old time citizen, was held at Johnson's this week. He died in Colorado, where he had gone a few years ago. He was a resident of this county for fifty years. William Rohrs, aged 73 years, died this week at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Rabe. He was a native of Germany and came to this country in 1868. Word has just been received by Lige Hardenberger of the death of his brother, John, in the state of Oregon. The body will be brought here.
