July for Several Days. PRICES ARE ABOUT THE SAME OMAHA, March 10, 1915.

OMAHA, March 10, 1216.

It was the gossep of the wheat pit that Wall street had been buying May and selling July for several days. Commission houses have had considerable new buying of May and July from traders who believe that the ultimate scarcity of cash wheat will make higher prices before another crop. It is shown by preastables that Russia has given the bulk of its grains, if not all, as security for a large loan from England and France. An official Russian order issued lately prohibits exports of any article of food or fooder, except on special permit. The sale of such articles to foreigners engaged in the wholesale trade in these commodities also is prohibited. This to a great extent explains the anxiety of the salles to force the Dardanelles. Wheat is Russia is selling at $1.11 to $1.41 per lushel. A mixed situation exists in the brovision trade. Some traders are inclined to think that bogs will be much higher before May 1 and helieve that, with cured product on a good merchandising hasis purchases should be made on the breaks.
