

RESUME RAZING OF BOARD OF TRADE

Fire Damaged Building to Be Replaced by New Structure Over Nine Stories High.

COMPLETE THE PLANS SHORTLY

A large force of men have resumed work tearing down more of the old Board of Trade building recently seriously damaged by fire. This followed the announcement of E. M. Morstan, Jr., made Monday, to the effect that the directors of the building company have decided to tear down the structure and build a new fire-proof building on the site from nine to fourteen stories high.

Although Mr. Morstan declared that all differences that stood in the way of building a new structure have been amicably settled, C. W. Hull of the C. W. Hull Coal company, that occupied office room in the corner until some time after the fire, refused to state that he had given up his claim on his lease in the present building.

When President Fred R. Baker of the bank was asked what Morstan's statement meant with regard to the lease the bank has, he said: "Well, that's up to Morstan. We never had any trouble with them about the lease."

Asked if the bank would look toward getting ahead in the new building the Board of Trade people contended, Mr. Baker said: "Oh, that's entirely too long to wait."

Complete Plans Shortly. Within sixty days plans are to be completed for the new fireproof building, Mr. Morstan is quoted as saying. The cost of the new structure as at present contemplated is to be around $600,000. Mr. Morstan says the plans for the new structure have not yet been very definitely considered.

The city commissioners have been advised that the owners of the Board of Trade building have started to wreck this building, which was damaged by fire recently. In a communication to the council the Board of Trade Building company admits the contention of the building department that the building should be wrecked.

Building Officials Not Exercised Over the School Houses

The Park school was inspected during the last school year and the school board was directed to strengthen the stairways, which work was done. School buildings of the type of the Park school are not desirable, nor are they fireproof, stated Lee Bridges, chief building inspector.

Officers of the city building department do not seem particularly exercised over the declarations of Dr. E. Holvorth of the Board of Education regarding the condition of the Park and old Bancroft schools. While they admit these buildings are old and should be replaced with new structures they will not say that immediate condemnation is necessary.

Fire Warden Edward Morris says he looked over these schools about a year ago and intends to make another inspection this week. Complaints of weakness in the stairways at the Park school were made by parents last year. School buildings of this type are being held as usual at the Park and Bancroft schools.

Porter Again Held for the Grand Jury

After being held to the federal grand jury once before on the charge of impersonating a secret service operative, Henry R. Porter has again been ordered held to the grand jury by United States Commissioner H. E. Daniel. In default of giving $1,000 bond, he is now in jail. Saturday an order of removal to South Dakota will be asked, his alleged offense having been committed in Deadwood.

Hailed as Fare by Lad Who Had Just Stolen His Jitney

To be hailed as the first prospective fare by an auto thief who had stolen his jitney bus fifteen minutes before was the odd experience of J. N. Swanson, 2004 North Twenty-fourth street. Swanson recovered his car, but the thief escaped.

When Swanson noticed his car had been stolen from the rear of his home he notified the authorities and set out himself on a still hunt for the fellow.

Fifteen minutes later, while standing at Twenty-fourth and Lake streets, he was solicited to ride as a passenger by the driver of a bus and stepped into the car. It was his own machine.

Swanson rode down Twenty-fourth street without letting the driver, a boy scarcely more than 17 years old, know that he was suspected. The boy drove recklessly and Swanson grew nervous as the machine narrowly missed a street car and then a group of women.

"You're not a very careful driver, son," remarked Swanson.

"Oh, so-so," replied the youth, "I always manage to get by."

"Well, suppose you give me the wheel. This is my car. You've got to go to the police station with me," said Swanson.

The lad was somewhat taken back, but relinquished his hold, and Swanson started the car toward police headquarters. When Twenty-fourth and Cumming streets were reached the owner was forced to step up for a street car, and as he did so the boy suddenly leaped from the vehicle and ran away. Before Swanson could get out of the car the lad had disappeared.

Bogus Check Artist Kept Diary of All His Various Deeds

Robert H. Dunkirk, who posed as Robert H. Duke, son of the tobacco magnate, in Omaha recently, and secured endorsement to a bogus $500 draft, which he raised to $5,000, and cashed in Memphis, has apparently visited Omaha before, according to extracts from his diary. Dunkirk was arrested in Portland, Ore., and will return to Omaha with Detective Frank Williams, who left last week for the coast.

After entering describing his check passing exploits in N., M., and C. (supposed to be Nashville, Memphis and Chicago) he writes regarding experiences in O.-J., as follows:

"I shall stop at O.—this time. Won't stay here but a day or two. Dangerous is right. Have appointment with two different lady friends. One of them Muriel M. of the P. apartments, otherwise I would not take this chance of reappearing here. My cash balance this evening is $78, and I hope to augment it."

"Must change my name after leaving here, as I fell positive that the authorities are getting busy. After six years of dodging these gumshoes, it sure would be tough to be nabbed at this particular time."

Personal vanity of an unusual description seems to have caused Dunkirk to keep a diary in which he told of his movements and misdeeds in detail for the purpose, he says, of having his record correct when the inevitable end of his career had come. A search for the P. apartments, which he mentions in the diary has been of no avail.

HUNDRETH RECRUIT IS SIGNED BY LIEUT. TIPTON

Over 100 recruits have been pledged for the navy by the Omaha recruiting station in the federal building since Lieutenant Thomas M. Tipton was assigned as recruiting officer in charge of the Omaha district. The hundredth enlistment occurred Monday. Lieutenant Tipton has been here six months. On account of the rigid requirements for enlistment and the small number of applicants lately the number of men accepted has been smaller than last year.
