

Statue that Appeals to the Pioneer

THE END OF THE TRAIL—JAMES EARL FRASER, SCULPTOR

Where the long and diminishing sunset trail of the vanishing red man ends in the surf of the Pacific, he halts—the last remnant of his tribe. Lance held dropped, drooping and spent pony, storm-buffed and famished, despairing Indian form a group bitterly significant of the end of all things for his people; for despair and death have ridden with him to the end of the hungry trail.

It is just possible that in creating this composition, so full of the gripping realism of a phase of life that is passing, James Earl Fraser had in mind the caustic remark of the humanitarian who said "Civilization always begins by turning some weaker race out of doors." This, perhaps the most noteworthy of the many equestrian statues which embellish the splendid festival courts, gardens and palaces of the Panama-Pacific International exposition—palaces and plazas now practically complete—stands, serene in size, at the entrance to the beautiful Court of Flowers, between the Court of Abundance, with its sumptuous evidences of an esthetic civilization, and Festival Hall, which will be devoted wholly to music. At the entrance to the Court of Palms, which is the south approach to the beautiful Court of the Four Seasons, stands Solon Borlum's companion equestrian group, "The Pioneer," similarly striking and typically western—most of the other hundred groups at the exposition are not, notably those of "Pizarro" by C. C. Rumsey and "Cortez" by Charles Niehaus, flanking the great Fountain of Energy, hard by, in the South Gardens of the Alameda.

Mr. Fraser's work first attracted general notice at the World's Columbian exposition in Chicago, where his fine group of the spirit of the old west and his intimate knowledge of its passing types showed to good advantage in his "Cherokee Chief" and other conceptions. A pupil of the Art Institute of Chicago, Mr. Fraser had the advantage of long training with Augustus Saint Gaudens; yet he acknowledged most of all the influence of the one great master—Nature.

Fortunes Made in Andean Tin

peties to take these matters into consideration.
Suggested Reforms Are Good.
The new laws, if they can be passed, will remedy many such evils. One of these has already been enacted. It provides that the contestant to a mining claim must deposit $500 with the government to show the good faith of his suit, and that this is to be forfeited in case he cannot make good. Another law provides that the annual dues and fees for holding the title to a mine must be all paid by December 31 of each year. In the past such dues have been allowed to run on and the mining title be considered good if they were paid in a lump. In fact, a man might have taken out a claim to a property twenty-five years ago and paid only for his first papers. Everyone would suppose the title to have lapsed, and another claimant, taking it up and working it, might then find that the first claimant had at last paid his back dues as a whole, and that his original title was good. This new law will prevent any such arbitrariness and will put Bolivia on a sound mining investment basis.

During my stay in Peru I asked many questions as to the mining laws there. I learn that they are excellent, and that such property is more easy to acquire and hold than in the United States. Every Peruvian district has its mining delegate, and anyone, foreigner or native, may go before him and claim mining property. This is called the denouncement, and the claimant pays a fee for it. This fee is for the registration and the advertisement of the claim in two designated journals. It gives the discoverer the right to the claim for five months from the date of filing his papers, and if at the end of that time he still wishes to hold the property the mining delegate will fix the corner stones and give him possession. After that the only payment required to continue the claim is the annual tax of $15, and the claim holds good as long as the money is paid. As a rule there is no disputing of titles, and the Americans tell me that the foreigner has just as good a chance to hold and to work his mines as the natives.

Transportation a Hindrance.
The great trouble as to Peruvian mines is the lack of transportation. Said one of the mining engineers of Cerro de Pasco: "I believe that this part of the Andes is about the highest mineralized country on earth, but also that the most of its minerals will not be available until railroads are built across the mountains and up and down the plateau. I have found mining after mine that would make me a millionaire many times over if I could only get the transportation required to bring the timber and coal to the property and to transport the ore to the coast. Many of these were old Spanish workings that need only to be re-opened to make them pay well. Others were far off in the interior, where the ore would have to be taken out by llamas or donkeys. The chief thing we need here is roads and railroads." FRANK G. CARPENTER.

NEXT POPE QUITE UNCERTAIN

Traditions Have Often Held Good Unexpected Choice Will Be Made.

NEXT PRELATE AN ITALIAN

Papal Successor to Pius X is Practically Sure, However, in Point of Nationality on Account of War.

ROME, Aug. 28.—The old Roman proverb that the man entering the conclave expecting to be pope always leaves as a cardinal, is being recalled as the college of cardinals assembles, to choose a successor to the late Pius X.
The patriarch of Venice himself neither sought nor expected the election in 1903, and his successor may quite as likely be found outside those who have been most talked of as the next pope.

That he will be an Italian has been regarded as almost a certainty, for the state of affairs throughout Europe is said to make it more desirable than ever that the church should not depart from its traditions. But there is, from the American side, a possibility that the tradition might still be maintained and at the same time an American citizen be elevated to St. Peter's throne. This would be in the case of the election of Diomedo Falconio, Italian by birth, who was for many years a missionary in America and then a papal delegate to the United States and whom became a naturalized American citizen during his residence abroad.
Cardinal Falconio is, however, only one of several logical candidates and only one of many possibilities.

There is little doubt, if any, authorization for speculating on the chances of the many candidates. Following are some of the names that have been mentioned, with brief biographical data:

Vannutelli a Possibility.

Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli, the dean of the sacred college, was born a year earlier than the late pope, but at 80 he is still young in years in comparison with a number of his colleagues. In reality, however, he has aged greatly since 1903, when he was talked of as a successor of Pope Leo XIII. Today he is almost blind, stone deaf, and in such a low state of health generally that he has been less seriously discussed at the present time.

The Vannutelli family is the only one which has two members in the cardinalate. Vincent Vannutelli, a brother of the dean, is quite as prominent. Under Pius X he held the prefecture of the apostolic signature, which is "the court of last appeal" in all questions relating to marriage under the Catholic law. He is now 75 years old and doubtless he is well remembered in the United States, where he was greeted by thousands of Catholics in many cities during his tour of that country in 1906. On this tour he delivered an address at the consecration of St. Patrick's cathedral in New York.

Cardinal Martinelli is even better known in the United States, where he was papal delegate from 1896-1898, previous to the service of Cardinal Falconio at Washington. He is 96 years old and under Pius X he was prefect of the Congregation of Rites.

Oldest Candidate Mentioned.

Cardinal Agliardi, the sub-dean of the sacred college, is the oldest among those who have been mentioned as possibilities. He is now in his 83d year, so that consideration of his name could not be taken seriously without involving the danger of a short pontificate.

Cardinal Gotti, who is also a year older than was the late pope, was one of those prominently mentioned as a successor to Leo XIII. when it was urged both for him and against him that he was a strict conservative churchman, said to be opposed to liberal views as exemplified in America. He is the son of a dock laborer in Genoa. Under Pius X he was prefect of the congregation for the propagation of the faith, a most influential position in earlier days, but less important since the strictly missionary lands have become less numerous.

Cardinal Gasparri has been held in high regard for his learning. He is the most eminent of the church canonists, having lately completed the codification of the canon law of the church, an orderly arrangement of the entire body of law. If elected, it is said he would be another Leo XIII.

Cardinal Mafti, the archbishop of Pisa, was once a newspaper man. He is a noted astronomer and has written many volumes on the subject. He is a native of Corsica and is in his 85th year. Pius X frequently invited him to Rome to remain in an official capacity, but the people of Pisa begged him to stay with them and he heeded their plea.

Cardinal Ferrata, secretary of the congregation of the holy office, is in high favor among the theologians. It has been said he would be the nearest possible duplication of the late pontiff. He is in his 63th year and one of the few surviving members of the college raised to the cardinalate by Leo XIII.

Orkin Brothers to Open New Exclusive Suit and Cloak Store

Orkin Bros. are going to open an exclusive cloak and suit store at 219 South Sixteenth street, the opening to be about September 15. J. L. Orkin is now in New York City on a buying trip, and will select a complete line of exclusive cloaks and suits. Mr. Orkin was the founder of the Orkin Bros. store in Omaha and is recognized as one of the leading cloak and suit men of the country, having been in business in Omaha for nine years. After J. E. Orkin sold his interest to the Burgess-Nash company, he visited the principal cities of the country, and he has decided that Omaha is still the best place to continue his business, and has decided to locate his lot among the businessmen of this city.
The new store will be in the Neville block, on Sixteenth street near Harney.

War Apt To Affect Prices of Clothes

It doesn't make any difference which way the ideas of the European wars turn, the retail price of men's and women's clothes is sure to be affected in some way.
And hundreds of Omahans know this and are exhibiting good, solid "horse sense" by having NEW clothes made out of the garments they wore LAST winter.

That is, they are having Dresser Bros. effect the transformation at the $37.00 Dresser Cleaning plant at 2211-2213 Farnam street.
Dresser Bros., for instance, can take an old overcoat and rip it apart, dye it, re-design and re-cut it, sew it together again, clean it and then press it up into a new and stylish an overcoat as any you would purchase brand new for the same price. That spells economy for you, doesn't it? It cost-but a trifle for this service, but it WILL cost a pretty penny to buy a NEW overcoat won't it? Dresser will clean and make over ladies' tailored suits and gowns in the same manner; they'll work over your furs until they look fresh again; they'll even clean and entirely re-block the hats you wore last winter.

Just phone Tyler 345 and talk to the men's clothes man; the ladies' suit man; the woman who has charge of the dress-making department; the fur man, or the hat department manager. State what you have to do and you will be told what it costs to do it.
but do it soon. DON'T put it off until you start the hard coal stove going or until your ears become crisper.
Again—the phone number is Tyler 345.
