War Summary

The fourth day of the second general battle between the Germans and the allies finds Emperor William's forces, pressing unprecedented strength their advance on Paris. Their right is reported to be within fifty miles of the French capital.

In the absence of official announcements news dispatches indicate that the British and French continue a stubborn resistance, giving way slowly, however, whenever this strategy is necessary to keep their lines intact and prevent an enveloping movement by the German right.

In the east the fighting progresses with unabated fury. Both the Russian and the Austro-German armies have met successes and reverses. It is admitted in Petrograd (St. Petersburg) that two army corps were defeated in east Prussia and that three Russian generals were lost.

On the other hand, the Austrians appear to have been defeated in Galicia, where overwhelming successes are claimed by the Russians. This claim finds support in a dispatch from Vienna, which states that the Austrians have decided to evacuate Lemberg, the capital of Galicia-
