MRS. CARL FREDERIC HARTMANN of Chicago, formerly of Fort Omaha, has been devoting her time since leaving here to the composition of a number of songs. The first four of the group have just been published and are now being played at the Blackstone, La Salle, Stratford and Auditorium Annex hotels, and at some of the summer gardens, prior to the opening of the concert season. Miss Beatrice Van Loan, the soprano soloist at the La Salle Roof Garden, has two of Mrs. Hartmann's songs in her repertoire, "Illumination" and "L'Envoi," or "I Am Weary." The other two already published are "Saint Cecily" and "Love is a Mystery." All of these have been orchestrated for full symphony orchestra, and are issued by the Clayton F. Summy company of Chicago.

Major Hartmann of the signal corps, formerly commanding officer at Fort Omaha, has received many honors and has recently been detailed for the War college at Washington, D. C. But Mrs. Hartmann will remain in Chicago until the holidays, as she has a number of compositions to be published within the next few weeks. Little Miss Phyllis Hartmann will attend the Sacred Heart academy at Lake Forest this winter.

Some of Mrs. Hartmann's songs will be heard in Omaha shortly when the musical season opens.

Omaha Woman Asks Big Damages from a Rich Californian

Alleging that Alton D. Taylor, a wealthy Californian, inveigled her into a mock marriage nine years ago, Miss Gertrude Malmberg of Omaha has filed suit in district court for $25,000 damages. The plaintiff says she came to America in 1901, met Taylor and kept company with him for two years, between 1903 and 1905, and that on January 4, 1905, he took her to the Farnam hotel, where a supposed marriage ceremony was performed. After traveling as man and wife over California, visiting in Utah and in Arizona and Texas, Miss Malmberg says that in May, 1914, she returned to Omaha and discovered that no marriage license had been issued.

During their eight years of married life together Miss Malmberg asserts Taylor introduced her to many persons in Omaha and California as his wife.

FOND PARENTS SEEKING FOR THEIR LONG LOST SONS

The police have been asked by three fond and distracted mothers to locate their wandering "boys," all of whom happen to be over 18 years of age. One has been Owen French of Lafayette, Ind., has been gone a year, and his father writes that three clairvoyants who have been consulted declare that the prodigal "wants to return home, but will not give in." Mrs. Nellie Tidd of Sheridan, Wyo., tells the police that if she knew her son, R. L. Daniels, 25 years old, is alive and well, her troubled mind would be put at rest. He is a union painter, she says.
