PARADE UNDER DIFFICULTIES

Des Moines Style Show Winds Up in Wake of Big Storm. STREETS LITTERED WITH DEBRIS. Loss Due to Heavy Rain Will Be Hundred Thousand Dollars in Capital Alone—No Mail from East.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 18.—(Special Telegram)—A parade of decorated floats and other special features made by the business men of Des Moines, closed a three day "style show" under somewhat unfavorable auspices as the big storm of last night damped the ardor of most of the people. The parade was followed by fireworks. Some of the streets along which the parade was to have passed were still badly cluttered up with paving blocks torn out by the floods, and along the streets pumps were at work clearing out cellars. It is estimated that $100,000 will be the losses to individuals and to city. Only partial train service was resumed out of the city during the day. No mail was received today from Chicago. Some of the railroads will have to repair hundreds of yards of track before the trains will run again. Work in the Valley Junction shops of the Rock Island was suspended because of deep water in the track.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—President Wilson today declined to receive Horace L. GERMAN CENTER GAINING SLOWLY AGAINST ALLIES

The statement made in French and English dispatches. The wording of the latest German bulletin may perhaps be interpreted as indicating that there is only a series of minor engagements in progress, but it is understood that this is not the case and that the attacks and counter attacks mentioned are part of a heavy general engagement.

Severely Defeat of Russians. Meanwhile the severity of the censorship on the Russian front has been relaxed and a number of stories are coming through from which it is possible to draw a general picture of the operations leading to the defeat of General Rennenkampf's Russian army.

From September 7 to 13 the Russians took a strong position on the line from Angerburg to Gerdauen, Allenburg and Kohnau, the left wing resting on the Masuren lakes and the right wing protected in the rear and flank by the forest of Frisching, whose pathless woods and swamps furnished an almost impenetrable position. The Russians devoted great efforts to entrenching their position and brought up besides their heavy artillery, Russian cavalry, which scouted far to the west and south but otherwise, the army undertook no offensive operations in the days following the battle of Tannenberg.

The enemy's forces, according to the German official account were composed of the second, third, fourth and twentieth corps, two reserve divisions and five cavalry divisions.

General Hindenburg, the German commander, meanwhile was assembling every available man, depriving the fortresses of their garrisons, and calling in all but a bare remnant of the forces protecting the southern frontier in the vicinity of Saldau, adding them to reinforcements received from the west.

General Hindenburg again resorted to the customary German flanking movement and since the Russian right protected by the forest and marshes, seemed too strong, he adopted the daring strategy of sending the flanking force to the lake region to the south, the same character of movement by which the Russian army was trapped and captured a short time before, and which in case of failure might have been equally as disastrous for the Germans.

Strategy Successful Again.

The strategy, however, succeeded, although General Rennenkampf offered a desperate resistance to the frontal attacks. After three days' fighting the Russians were forced back slightly in the center. When the flank movement of the Germans was discovered already threatening the flank, a counter movement was launched against them with a new army collected at Lyck, including the twenty-second corps and parts of the third Siberian corps, just arriving from Irkutsk, but the counter attack failed and on September 10 the Russians began to fall back on their main position, retreating in good order and well covered.

The Russian artillery on the right wing appears to have made a good retreat owing to a timely start, while the west wing was hard pressed by the enveloping German infantry. From this wing the Russians retreated across the border in two columns, while the main body went northward and the others in an easterly direction, pursued by the Germans, who advanced far from the border.

The German government has appointed Count Von Merveldt as governor of the Russian province of Suwalki and other points occupied by them.

The University of Kislingberg today conferred on General Von Hindenburg honorary doctors degrees from all four of

Patti Held as Prisoner of War; Leaves Servants as Hostages

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Adeline Patti arrived in Paris yesterday, after being kept several weeks, together with her husband, a prisoner of war at Carlsbad, where she was finally obliged to leave all her male domestics as hostages to gain her own liberty. This was obtained only after laborious negotiations and in the meantime the count and countess were subjected to insults by the people besieging the hotel in which they were kept under guard.

We have learned little concerning the situation, but we can point to some successes such as the repulse of the French night attacks and the fact that the French have succeeded neither in outflanking the retiring right nor breaking through the front.

The abandonment of our original positions between Paris and Verdun for strategic reasons is in itself nothing momentous. In many days of battle and shifting positions final results alone are important. So long as the battle continues undecided with the possibility of throwing in fresh troops, while the enemy has exhausted themselves by repeated attacks, the German chances are better than those of the "Anglo-French."

Describes East Prussian Action.

Captain Schieckert, the correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger describes the action in east Prussia on September 10 as follows: "Our heavy howitzer batteries, located on the extreme right wing bombarded the entrenchments and bomb proofs of the Russian army with their terrible effect and from this position we could watch the progress of the battle easily with field glasses but we, too, caught the big notes of the battle music.

"The battle salvos of the Russians came in every shortening intervals and between rolled the infantry fire, now in volleys and then irregularly. Meanwhile the hard rattle of the machine guns on the edge of the forest had a deafening sense, adding long runs of notes to the concert.

"The Russian shrapnel meantime burst too high or too low near our batteries, but the Russians after a while got the range. Soon our batteries increased the fire until the heavens seemed aflame, while on the horizon the villages broke out in flames.

"Through the field glasses I observed dark masses moving across the fields. It was the well extended German infantry advancing with rapid speed. Altogether too high over them exploded shrapnel and from the north came infantry fire which was soon silent.

"At 1:10 o'clock in the afternoon the Russian shrapnel fire reached its maximum violence and then followed a cessation of all fire for ten minutes, and again the fire was opened. At 2:05 o'clock the Russian fire stopped with our men advancing as rapidly as possible and a little while afterwards the effect of our flank movement behind Loetzen made itself felt."
