Will Study Opera for Its Winter Work

The Musical department of the Omaha Woman's club has chosen a very timely and intensely interesting subject of study, "Opera," for the season of 1914-1915. At each meeting one opera will be considered. A brief mention of the composer will be made, his style, and the school to which he belongs. A short synopsis of the libretto will be read, succeeded by the overture or prelude, as the case may be. Solos for soprano, alto, tenor and bass, also duets, trios, quartets and choruses of the opera studied will follow. At the first meeting a talk will be given, showing the development of the opera up to the present day, interspersed with illustrations of the different schools, Italian, German, French, English, Bohemian, Polish and Russian. The first meeting is in charge of Mrs. Effie Steen Kittelson, "Il Trovatore" by Verdi, which will be studied October 28, is in charge of Mrs. E. M. Seyfert. The others are as follows: November 11, "Mignon," Thomas, Mrs. Wagner Thomas, leader; November 25, "Der Freischutz," Weber, Miss Helen Saditek, leader; December 9, "Bohemian Girl," Balfe, Miss Helen Mackin, leader; January 13, "Il Pagliaccio," Leoncavallo, Mrs. L. M. Lord, leader; January 27, "Carmen," Bizet, Mrs. J. B. Redfield, leader; February 10, "Martha," Flotow, Miss Amanda Tebbins, leader; February 24, "Butterfly," Puccini, Mrs. M. D. Cameron, leader; March 10, "Faust," Gounod, Mrs. A. L. Fernald, leader; March 24, "Tannhauser," Wagner, Miss Emily Clevé, leader; April 7, "Parsifal," Wagner, Mrs. J. E. Haarman, leader; April 21, subject to be announced later. The music studios of the city have responded most generously, and a fine presentation of the opera is assured. Dramatic readers will read the synopsis of the librettos at each meeting. The department believes that a fair knowledge of an opera will be gained by those attending the meetings. They will no doubt, become more interested in the subject and will doubly enjoy "opera" when it is presented in our city. To those not members of the Omaha Woman's club, but who are interested in music and would wish to attend these meetings, a cordial invitation is extended to join the department. The season's fee is $2, rather a small sum, considering the benefit derived.

When Sandleman Played "Dixie" with the Marine Band

When the United States Marine band goes on its travels its leader and members are frequently compensated for their arduous work by the pleasing incidents of their sojourn in different cities. On its tour of Dixie land, in the fall of 1911, they came to a town in which the southern characteristic of reticence was especially exemplified in an old gentleman who had been an officer in the Confederate army and was then filling a modest position in connection with the court. There being no public hall in the town, the use of the large court room had been granted for the Marine band's concert. In the rear of the court room was a smaller apartment which the members of the band used as a retiring room and in which they rested during the intermissions.

The old colonel seemed to regard "Uncle Sam's" musicians rather suspiciously. As they strolled about before the beginning of the concert he followed their every step and watched their every movement, just as if he were afraid that in some way they might take a notion to make off with some of the precious archives or perhaps some of the less conspicuous pieces of furniture. The leader of the band attempted to get into conversation with the old gentleman, but all the blandishments of the urbane Mr. Sandleman failed to evoke a response. The guardian of the court house vouchsafed not a word in reply to those addressed to him.

At the close of the concert, as Mr. Sandleman was passing from the concert room into the apartment in the rear, he found the old confederate standing at the door. A strange transformation had taken place in his demeanor. He stood there with beaming face and outstretched arms, and grasping the leader's hand in his own he exclaimed: "By god, sir, I have been a life-long democrat, but after the way you fellows played 'Dixie' I will vote for William Howard Taft, even if they put up Woodrow Wilson against him, just because Taft sent you fellows down here."

One may wonder if the old democrat had a sort of psychological "hunch" as to what was going to happen in Baltimore in the year of grace, 1912.

Health Officers Ask All Births Be Promptly Reported

Failure to report to the city health office all births in the city may do incalculable harm to some person in the future, says City Health Officer Millard Langfeld, who was commenting on the stubbornness with which hospital and other physicians comply with the city ordinance.

"All births should be promptly reported," said Dr. Langfeld. "Suppose it were necessary for a man to establish his identity in order to secure possession of an estate, say in Germany, to which he had fallen heir. If the record of his birth in Omaha was not in the books he might be deprived of his rights."

Health Commissioner H. W. Connell has sent word to all physicians asking them to report births promptly. Sometimes births are reported from fifteen to twenty years after the child was born. Such cases are not infrequent at the city health office. Sometimes a child is reported for several years before the birth certificate, written on forms no longer used, is found in the files of a physician and mailed to the city.

Sioux City Visitor Object to Picture of a Lion in Court

Whether a large painted picture of a crouched lion hanging in Judge Sutton's district court is a violation of neutrality and indicates anti-German sentiment is a question now up to the Board of County Commissioners. Herman Goetz of South Sioux City, Neb., a carnival visitor, believes the "British lion" is out of place in a court of justice and complained to members of the county board. The painting is directly behind Judge Sutton's chair and, according to the commissioner, symbolizes the power of justice to punish offenders and enforce the decrees of righteousness. For this reason and because the picture was hanging in its place long before the European war began, the commissioners believe neutrality will be best observed in making no change. The reasons are too intelligent to overlook the opportunities in the "want ad" columns. They're worth while reading.
