AFTER meeting Miss Eleanor Gates, story writer and author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl," last winter, I am keen to see the play.

Miss Gates is a friend of Miss Helen Ingersoll of New York, formerly club editor of the Bee, and while attending a tea at the home of Kate Douglas Wiggin, we had the honor of meeting Miss Gates, also a former newspaper woman. Miss Gates is a western woman, young, vivacious, and spirituelle and dainty for one who has had so many experiences. At the tea in New York, this charming young woman was quite the most popular guest, and like other celebrities, demanded rather considerable attention. My friend, Miss Claire Helene Woodard, was introduced three times to the great writer. Finally, the third time, Miss Woodard said, "Miss Gates has shaken hands with me three times, but I do not know whether she has met me or not!" and then we were almost embarrassed with so much attention from a celebrity.

Miss Gates spent her early girlhood on her father's stock ranch in Dakota, with little companionship except that of her parents, for no white families lived near, and her playmates were the children of the Sioux Indians. There was no school to attend, but her mother, a woman of culture, taught her at home. Miss Gates had not been at school one day in her life when, at the age of 19, she went to California to enter Stanford university. She found she could not take the regular course, for, while under her mother's teaching she had advanced further than entrance requirements in English, mathematics and other branches, she had no Greek or Latin. Therefore she took a special course.

To pay her expenses at college, Miss Gates did newspaper work, and did it so well that upon graduation from Stanford she became a regular member of a newspaper staff in San Francisco.

Wallace-Matteson Wedding.

The Duluth News-Tribune gives the following account of the wedding of Mr. Hugh Wallace of Omaha:

Glen Avee church was the scene of one of the most delightful weddings of the season Saturday evening, when Miss Maude Emily Matteson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Matteson, 208 Holsen avenue, became the bride of Hugh Elliott Wallace of Minneapolis, formerly of Omaha. Rev. W. W. Lawrence of Glen Avee church and Rev. Robert Von der First Presbyterian church officiated. Miss Ruth Alth Rogers, organist, assisted by Frederic C. Freemantel, tenor soloist of St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal church, Minneapolis, gave the following musical program before the ceremony: Organ, "Ich Liebe Dich," by Grieg; tenor solo, "Love Abiding," by Jordan; organ, "Slumber Song," by Parker; tenor solo, "Wedding Music from Lohengrin," leading into the wedding march.

The bride wore a handsome bridal gown of white crepe charmeuse with under flounce of duchesse lace, the same lace forming a cape which came to the waist line. Her court train hung from the shoulders. She wore a long tulle veil draped away from the face. She carried an exquisite shower arrangement of bride roses and lilies of the valley, the shower being of pink Cecile Brunner roses, which fell from a cluster of the same flowers. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was an old-fashioned hand-made cameo brooch with gold setting.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Carl T. Anderson, wore pink charmeuse trimmed with black lace and velvet. Miss Winnifred Hicks, maid of honor, was gowned in pink chiffon and tulle with epaulettes trimmed. Miss Jane McLeod was gowned in yellow satin charmeuse trimmed with monkey fur and white lace, and the other bridesmaids, Miss Madeline Miller, also wore yellow charmeuse trimmed with chiffon and lace. The attendants of the bride carried arm bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums tied with tulle.

The little flower girls, Alice McCabe and Vall Rattenbury, wearing white tulle frocks with pink ribbons, carried baskets of baby chrysanthemums. Little 3-year-old Mary Catherine Staack was the ring bearer. She wore a dainty frock of white with white tulle bows and carried the ring in the heart of a chrysanthemum.

The groom was attended by his brother, George M. Wallace of Omaha, as best man, and his ushers were Mr. Paul Eusebio of Fargo, Mr. Harold Matteson of Madison, brother of the bride, Mr. Carl T. Anderson and Mr. Laurin Hunter.

Mrs. Matteson, mother of the bride, wore a gown of changeable rose and gray satin charmeuse trimmed with rose point lace. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. George G. Wallace of Omaha, was gowned in black crepe de chine with a plaited tunic trimmed with black Chantilly lace. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. George M. Wallace's gown was of blue messaline with an evening of gold net. The low bodice was trimmed with Coney fur. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. Mrs. Frederic C. Freemantel of Minneapolis wore an imported gown of soft peach satin with a tunic of beaded embroidered chiffon. Her arm bouquet was of dainty pink roses.

A reception for 150 guests followed the ceremony at the home of the brides parents. The house was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums, dahlias and mountain ash berries. In the receiving line with the bride and groom were the members of the bridal party and Mr. and Mrs. James E. Matteson, parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. George G. Wallace of Omaha, parents of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. George M. Wallace of Omaha, brother and sister-in-law of the bridegroom. Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. O. W. Rowe, Mrs. John McGreor, Mrs. F. E. Church and Mrs. W. H. Rattenbury.

Frederic C. Freemantel, tenor, sang at the reception, accompanied by Mrs. Freemantel.

The Omaha guests were Mr. and Mrs. George G. Wallace and Mr. and Mrs. George M. Wallace.

The bride wore a going-away suit of brown kitten's ear with hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace left for a short trip through the central states and will visit at the home of the bridegroom's parents at Omaha during the holidays. They will make their home at Minneapolis after the first of the year.

Positively Masters Croup.
Foley's Honey and Tar Compound cuts the thick choking mucus, and clears away the phlegm. The gasping, straining fight for breath gives way to quiet breathing and peaceful sleep. Harold Berg, Miss, Mich., writes: "We give Foley's Honey and Tar to our children for croup and it always acts quickly." No wonder, man in Texas walked 15 miles to the store to get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Every user is a friend. All dealers everywhere.—Advertisement.

Dahlman Goes to Valentine Reunion

Mayor James C. Dahlman has departed from his snug quarters in the city hall and is making ready to show the young bloods how to break bronchos and other ferocious horses at the wild west dinner at Valentine. The mayor makes the trip to Valentine every year, dons his chaps, slides into his silver-trimmed saddle and scampers friskily around on his pet roan pony. During his absence Dan Butler will be acting mayor.

SEPARATE BOYS AND GIRLS

Superintendent Sturges of First Methodist Works Out Idea.

PLAN IS SAID TO WORK WELL

Has Assistant Superintendents for Each of Boys and Girls Divisions — Women Teachers for Girls and Men for Boys.

An innovation and advanced idea in Sunday school management is being carried out at the First Methodist Sunday school by T. F. Sturges, the general superintendent. He has not only done away with men teachers for girls and women teachers for boys, and abolished mixed classes of boys and girls, but also has gone so far as to seat members of the two sexes on opposite sides of the room, with a man as under-superintendent for boys, and a woman in a similar capacity for the girls.

"We have found by experience that the best results come from this system," Superintendent says. "In mixed classes of the younger ages we found that the boys teased the girls, and then when they got into their teens, the boys made eyes at the girls, in both cases reducing the efficiency of the Sunday school work."

"We have known of but very few successful classes of any age where both sexes were included in the membership. There is only one in our school, and that is made up of elderly people. The scheme of having a person of the opposite sex teach a class of youngsters does not get the best results for a woman never is able to appeal as strongly to a class of boys as a man is, nor is a man able to appeal as strongly to a class of girls as a woman is."

Problems for Boys.

"Our system is to work out the teaching on a basis of boys' problems and girls' problems. Boys' problems are of manhood and strength, and need a man to handle them. Girls' problems are more on social lines, in which a woman excels. A man can get out with a class of boys and be an everyday teacher and helper, as well as an instructor in Bible study. Likewise, a woman is more at home with girls outside the Sunday school, and therefore has more influence in it."

Mrs. Winnetta E. Wiener, a public school teacher, is superintendent of the girls' division of the Sunday school at the First Methodist church. The division includes all girls between 3 and 16 years of age. Walter F. Mayer, business secretary of the Young Men's Christian association, is superintendent of the boys' division, which has similar age limits and is seated on the opposite side of the room.

Adults Are Grouped.

The adult Bible classes and those of young women and young men are grouped in the center section of the Sunday school room. All classes, except one of elderly people, are assigned to members of one sex, with a teacher of the same sex. Activities outside of the Bible study on Sundays are always planned separately for the two sexes.

The success of the Sunday school is partially credited to the separate-sex policy. The school has an enrollment of over 625, with an average attendance of over 400. It is the largest, or next to the largest, Sunday school among Protestant churches in Omaha, and is without doubt the largest in proportion to the church membership.

PROF. COFFMAN TO SPEAK AT TEACHERS' CONVENTION

Prof. L. D. Coffman, head of the department of education of the University of Illinois, will be included on the list of speakers at the convention of the Nebraska State Teachers' association, to be held here in November. Prof. Coffman will speak on the "Thriftful Purpose of the Public School" on Friday, November 6.

WANTS PEREMPTORY WRIT AGAINST LIGHT COMPANY

H. W. Barnum, a licensed houseowner, has filed suit in district court for a peremptory writ of mandamus against the Omaha Electric Light and Power company. He alleges that General Manager Hoffrage of the company refused to temporarily remove the company's wires from Eighteenth and Capitol avenue, in accordance with provisions of a city ordinance, so that he could move a house across that intersection. Judge Willis G. Sears did not grant the peremptory writ, as prayed for, but handed down an order, which stated that he thought the matter should be heard before the question of issuing a writ was decided. His order is to show cause against the writ prayed for, and he set the hearing for October 18.
