School Notes

Mary Donnelly Robb is in school again.

The fifth grade is now working with fractions.

Orland Morris is a new pupil in the second grade.

The sixth grade has completed their work on decimals.

James Robb entered school this week and is taking fifth grade work.

Russell Fletcher was out of school two days on account of sickness.

The seventh and eighth grades are beginning their new work for the quarter.

The following visited in our high school last week: Alda Taylor, Elza Taylor, George Green and Christine Neumann.

The fourth and fifth grades wrote letters to their mothers asking them to visit school. They hope that some will accept.

The intermediate room went to Garrison's Grove last Wednesday afternoon. They enjoyed a wondrous time there.

In a singing contest held Friday afternoon Harriett Leach won in the second grade and Enid Swanson won in the third grade.

James Robb worked out for a school carnival to be held next month. Watch for further notice of this entertainment.

The X English pupils have been working on debates the past week. They are finding that "because" is not proof of a statement.

The Home Economics class has begun the study of leavening agents. They find that their study of general science helps them to quite an extent. The various methods of leavening are then illustrated in the laboratory.

Reviews for and the taking of quarterly examinations was the order of the day in our school last week. Those in the high school who were exempted from all their examinations because of an average daily grade of 85 per cent and being held absent in the early weeks. Virginia Harris, Wilma Fletcher, Clona Farth, Sarah McQuinn, Olye Mae Ray, Vera Upton, Sara Upton and Harriett Cheney. Those exempted from at least one of their examinations were: Ruth Pell, Nellie Mendy, Elmer Fahrlander, Stacey Niday, Mildred Clark, Zola Eaton, Rachel Pell, Alma Frans, La Von Frans, George Rieks, Harold James, Florence Thacker, Amos Crook, Letha Porter.

"OUR SCHOOL" We can knock it, we can rap it, We can kick it, we can scrap it, But let's advertise our school another way.

Let us laud it and applaud it, Let's commend it and defend it, Till the state shall know we mean just what we say.

We can take it, we can break it, We can make it or forsake it, Just by the way we talk about our own.

We can boost it, we can shove it, We must talk it, we must love it, If we want it to go up instead of down.

Why not sing and shout its praises, Mention all its happy phases, Show the state the best school on the map.

Boost it at the store and table, Boost it when and where we're able, All together now—let's boost and "can" the rap.

Why not sing and shout its praises, Mention all its happy phases, Show the state the best school on the map.

Boost it at the store and table, Boost it when and where we're able, All together now—let's boost and "can" the rap.

30,000 MAJORITY FOR THE 'RIGHT-TO-WORK' MEASURE

Anti-Picketing Statute is Sustained in Railroad Centers with but a Few Exceptions.

Despite the intense opposition of organized labor to the anti-picketing, or "right-to-work" statute passed by the people of Nebraska in the referendum of November 7, the act was sustained by a majority of 30,000 or more in the whole state and a number of counties containing railroad centers, the chief sources of antagonism to this measure, voted in favor of it.

In nearly every county where the rural and small town vote predominates, the anti-picketing statute had a substantial majority. It was the only one of the four referred laws that the farm and small town vote did not oppose. The farmers, to the extent of supporting this act, went back on their political allies, the labor unions, and the latter are left holding the sack, while the state wide registration law modifying the direct primary system, to which of which the farmers were particularly hostile, were beaten.

The local charter restriction law was approved by a small majority due to concerted work in its behalf by bankers all over the state.

Advertising Campaign Helped

The big majority piled up for the anti-picketing statute was due chiefly to an advertising campaign in its behalf which the Nebraska manufacturers' association sponsored. One of the advertisements, appearing in a great many newspapers over the state showed a picture of a woman who was her children watching for the return of the family breadwinner. It was labeled, "Will he come home tonight?" The reading matter which went with the picture pleaded for sympathy on behalf of the workman who has to run the gauntlet of these pickets.

Although the shopmen's organization at Havelock and the union labor clubs in Lincoln did what they could to counteract this publicity, the legislature gave the law a majority of 7,578.

That county in which Grand Island with its Union Pacific shops is situated, voted to uphold the act by a majority of 394 Adams county, with Hastings and its railroad population, returned a margin of 1,374 in its favor. Fremont and Dodge county, the Northwestern railroad center, including Kearney, voted against the act by 177 and 923, respectively. The Rock Island headquarters and shop town, Fairbury, failed to control Jefferson county, which voted by a margin of 46 to sustain the law.

Beaten in Sixteen Counties

Out of ninety counties which have officially reported to the secretary of state, there were sixteen that voted against the "right-to-work" statute. Several of these have railroad centers in them. A few are predominantly rural. Kearney county, including Havelock, voted against the act. Douglas county and Omaha voted strongly for the law.

North Platte, which is second only to Omaha in its Union Pacific railroad population and interests, piled up an adverse majority large enough to carry Adams county against the act.

In Dawson county (Chadron) the Northwestern railroad employees were actively instrumental in getting a majority of 150 against it. Norfolk, including Fremont in importance as a North western operating and commercial point, was also against it, but Madison county as a whole was practically a standoff, the majority being only 11 against.

Other counties which gave majorities antagonistic to the anti-picketing law were Arthur, Blaine, Clatsop, Harlan, Hayes, Kearney, Logan, Pierce, Platte, Sherman and Thomas.

AMERICAN LEGION NEWS

By the POST ADJUTANT

The new membership cards for 1923 have arrived.

Don't forget the special meeting of the entire post Wednesday night.

No action has been taken toward raising dues this year, and it is probable they'll be continued at $2.

The cool weather has made the club rooms a popular place again, although they are pretty much deserted during the summer.

For two years a certain Plattsmouth man has paid the rental on the club rooms telephone without choosing to reveal his identity. This is certainly a commendable spirit and doubly so because he has never commercialized his generosity as an aid to his business.

Legion men feel a great spot in their hearts for this man whose identity they are sure they know, and who has done numerous other acts for the local post in the past three years.

The annual election of officers occurs two weeks from Wednesday. A good turnout of the members at this meeting is urged, so that the selection may be as representative as possible.

The practice of non-service men and non-Legion members enjoying the privileges of the club rooms nightly, was denounced at the last Executive committee meeting. Hereafter the privileges of the club rooms will be extended only to Legion members in good standing.

Members can pay their 1923 dues at any time now. It is hoped to get the majority of them collected up before January 1st.

CASS CO. FARM BUREAU NOTES

County Wide T. B. Testing If you are interested in having the cattle of the county tested for tuberculosis, write the Farm Bureau office as the board wish to know how many are interested.

$1.32 Per Bushel for Corn Yes, that's what last year's crop brought one Cass county man. R. C. Pollard fed 77 head of 1921 fall pigs which weighed an average of 52 pounds on November 27, 1921. These 77 head were weighed March 22, 1922, and sold. Their total gain was 11,675 pounds, and at $9.25 per hundred, came to $1,090.00. He fed nothing but corn and tankage. The cost of the tankage fed was $120. The total number of bushels of corn fed was 732. Deducting the $120 spent for tankage from the $970 reported the value of the gain leaves $850, and dividing this by the 732 bushels shows $1.32 per bushel realized through feeding. Had he bought corn at 50c per bushel, his feeding would have left him a net profit on the gain of $404, excluding of course his work. If any one else has kept a record and fed hogs or cattle, send it in.

Achievement Day Program The Maple Grove cooking and baking club held their Achievement day program Friday evening at the home of R. Wolph, Nehawka. The program consisted of several musical readings, songs and instrumental music. The history of the club and presentation of Certificates of Achievement and Seal were also included. The members of the club are Mary and Clara Ahrens, Bessie and Emma Chappell and Ruth Behrens. The leader, Miss Evelyn Wolph, has worked untiringly to make the club a success. The parents and friends of the girls were invited and the evening was greatly enjoyed by all. At the close of the evening delicious refreshments were served.
