SOUND WISDOM

Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom: I am understanding: I have strength. By me kings reign, and princess decree justice.—Proverbs viii 14 and 15.

The blooming idiot is not always a wallflower.

Profiteer's note: Render unto seizer the things that are seizer's.

If you want to own the house that Jack built, first earn the jack.

No woman is quite so wonderful as she expects her son's wife to be.

When a man makes his mark in Germany, he doesn't make much.

The scarcity of coal made it easy this year to observe fire prevention day.

A man's definition of a living wage depends on whether he is getting it or giving it.

Difference between classical dancing and taking a bath is you use water in bathing.

The fellow who tries to keep up with the procession often hasn't anything to parade.

News article says "rubber business is on the wane." Yes, longer skirts are coming.

One thing wrong with our homes, is that too many couples think a pair beats a full house.

Dry version of an ancient adage: Satan finds some moonshine still where idle hands may brew.

New long skirt styles are very popular with two classes of girls—those with bowlegs or knock knees.

Divorces are so frequent that the story of a golden wedding party makes exceptionally interesting reading.

Over in England there is a boy who has never laughed. Maybe all that he has ever heard are English jokes.

Let us be thankful that Adam, when he named the animals, was un-influenced by the man who names Pullman cars.

We hear a lot about Europe's interest in the war debts, but we don't see much of the interest on this side of the water.

There are two classes of people—good people and bad people. And the classifying is done by the good people—presumably.

If departed spirits want to communicate with us they should talk—not knock. We get enough raps as it is from the living.

The British voters seemed to be determined to have tranquillity even if they had to take the Bonar Law government with it.

An exchange wants to know "what has become of the old-fashioned family doctor?" He has gone to join the old-fashioned family.

To get a license to run an automobile one has to have had some experience but in marriage the experience comes after the license.

A correspondent says there are two kinds of non-prohibitionists in this country—those who have a little still and those who have still a little.

Oversized ankles may now be reduced by electrical treatment, the women's page announces, and a lot of very shocking ankles may as well prepare to be shocked.

Shoe manufacturers predict still higher prices for shoes. They are in a position to make their predictions come true all right—provided consumers will stand for more profiteering.

The French foreign office thinks it is too bad that Americans do not understand French politics. The average American understands French politics as well as he does his own—and the main thing he doesn't understand is why both varieties aren't stopped.

Some people are always surprised that things don't turn out worse.

We are wondering how long it will be before we will be talking to Mars by radio.

A good mixer is always admired, whether he is a mixer socially, quaffingly or fistificationally.

Only eight more days and then Turkey and cranberries for those who can stand the price.

Congress began its extra session yesterday. It will be the last session to move in special interests.

Useless information: The cat's tail is put on the end of the cat because it has to be put somewhere.

Truman H. Newberry of Michigan has gone glimmering among the senators that were. He has resigned.

"Turkeys will cost the same as last Thanksgiving." Are we to deduce prices or will it be the same because some of the turkeys may be the same?

The Atchison Globe warns the country that if the sculptors keep on making statues of Lincoln, soon nobody will know how Lincoln looked.

The result of the British election probably will recall to Lloyd George the words of Disraeli: "This I know, that England does not love coalitions."

"A married man should never argue," recently declared Miss Janet Thorpe, the American lecturer. But surely he must spend some time in his home.

Clemenceau is in the United States for the first time in fifty years. About the only thing he will find unchanged is the cut of Senator Lodge's whiskers.

The strangest thing is how many times the real issue in an election turns out to have been something the party leaders said wasn't an issue at all.

Humiliation and disgrace seem to be the price of peace with Turkey, and it is gravely to be doubted whether England will be willing to pay that price.

If the people rule, there are going to be fewer millionaires in the United States senate in the future, Newberry preferred going out before being kicked out.

"We are just now beginning to look a dollar in the face," says Lloyd George. We have been on more familiar terms for a long time. We have been kissing them goodbye for years.

Germany is talking about a coalition government, although one would think a thing as British as that country's political education has progressed considerably beyond its present point.

Probably it really wouldn't make any difference if the Turks did bolt the Lausanne conference. They apparently have no intention of carrying out its findings anyway, even if there are any findings.

Figures may not lie, but they begin to waver considerably from the plumb line of truth when they indicate that a man is financially even just because he owes people no more than other people owe him.

Historians now say that Nero, instead of playing a fiddle when Rome was burning, was really playing a bagpipe, as fiddles had not yet been invented. If anything, this makes it worse for the poor Romans.

The new Italian Fascista premier told parliament yesterday what he was going to do and that he didn't want any back talk. A good many American presidents have felt that way about congress, but haven't said so.

While not discounting the value and importance of foreign mission work, it is gratifying to note that all great church organizations are planning to spend more money for home mission work the coming year. The crime record of the nation indicates that we need a lot of mission work at home.

CITIZENS OF TWO WORLDS

In the 11th psalm David described a good citizen of Zion, and the qualifications set forth are equally good for a citizen of today. Listen to what David said:

"Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in Thy Holy hill?"

"He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaks the truth in his heart."

"He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor."

"In whose eyes a vile person is condemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not."

"He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved."

The monuments of men last for a little time, or a long time, and then perish. Their laws become obsolete and useless. Their critics crumble into dust. Their books are eaten by moths, and the great thoughts they contain drop into oblivion. Their foundations sink. Change and decay are a part of everything. Death is written on the brow and in the body of all that lives.

To be a good citizen in two worlds, this one and the next, is a high ambition, one worth while and one that is possible of attainment. By the help of God's holy spirit a man may love all that makes us worthy, and by the same aid he may hate all that God abhors. Such men become the saving salt of the communities in which they live, and will one day be permanent citizens in the New Jerusalem.

And they will feel comfortable and at home among their neighbors in that fair city.

THE PENALTY OF TREASON

If you are a traitor to any cause you have sworn to uphold, you must inevitably pay the penalty.

Just as remorse forced Judas, who betrayed his Master for $15.00, to go out and hang himself, just so will conscience surely get any man who is not true to his faith.

Benedict Arnold died the death of a dog in a London garret begging to kiss the flag he had attempted to betray.

Bear this in mind all Nebraskans who are turning your back on the democratic party that has served you so faithfully and so well—the party that has fought always for the highest and noblest principles of government.

You cannot be a democrat and at the same time vote for a man who has been a traitor to democracy. When you give a man of that sort your support you are putting yourself in the same class with him.

If you are a democrat—or think you are a democrat—then try to be a self-respecting one. Stand squarely on your feet like a man and face the issue.

Last night we had a dream that somewhere within the board confines of this great county of Cass, a fine gobbler is roaming whose owner has already made up his mind that he is going to put it into a crate and ship it to the editor of the Daily Journal.

It was only a dream, of course, but sometimes dreams come true. We are going to put our faith in this one until there is no longer hope for its verification. If the turkey doesn't arrive by the afternoon of November 29th it means that we will again have to take chances at the meat market on getting a duck or goose, and we don't like to do it. Buying a turkey in a butcher shop takes all the romance out of Thanksgiving. It is hard to look a $7 turkey in the face and still be thankful.

Mr. Harding believes the prohibition question will continue to stay in politics for many years, just as it has been an issue for the last half century. He is inclined to doubt that it will be divorced completely from politics. It was stated that the president's recent letters regarding prohibition and the election were merely observations and it was emphasized they did not represent any change of attitude on his part. It is probable that the White House will not make public any of the letters.

John S. McCarty, a well known lawyer and democrat, died at his home in Lincoln Sunday, November 19th. The deceased was very prominent in political affairs and well known throughout the state as an able and upright gentleman. The writer knew John S. McCarty long before he removed from Auburn to Lincoln and he was several times spoken of very prominently as a candidate for congress and for several years was county judge of Nemaha county.

Writing was the next great invention, enabling people to communicate over long distances, without coming face to face.

Then came printing. With it, the germ of real civilization.

Next was the telegraph, evolved from the primitive system of communicating long distances by relays of toms-toms or puffs from beacon fires.

The telephone crowded close on the heels of the telegraph.

Now it's radio.

The next step may be mental telepathy.

"Worth one-half million dollars," is the way the movie interests described the Arbuckle films which were scrapped this week. Still, it is doubtful whether the movie folk can fairly be charged with extravagance in this action.

A millionaire should never be allowed to represent the common people in the house or senate of the United States. Their purpose in going there is but to serve the interests of millionaires.

The president is said to regard the recent election as indicating a change in sentiment toward prohibition. To others it indicated a change in sentiment toward the president.

DEMON'S SPEED

An airplane with a speed of 500 miles an hour will be developed "within a comparatively short time."

So predicts Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, assistant chief of the army air service.

Then, says Mitchell, a business man will be able to leave New York City early in the morning, fly to England, have lunch, transact business, and return home before dark.

If so, what would happen to prohibition? A picture rises of a rum-hound flying over to London for a spree, back the same day.

In flying at terrific speed, such as 500 miles an hour, the chief problem would be supplying air to passengers and crew.

Mitchell tells of experiments, being conducted by the army, using oxygen tanks to furnish air for the people in an air tight cabin of the flying craft.

Fast planes in another generation or two will be as common as autos are today. Devices such as oxygen machines will be needed then. And they will be monopolized by patents.

About 20 years ago a writer in the old Argosy magazine wrote a story, "A Round Trip to the Year 2000," in which he pictured earth's inhabitants going about with meters attached to their noses. A trust had monopolized the aid and was making people pay for the privilege of breathing. Maybe this writer was more of a prophet than a "romancer."

Interesting problems will rise when airplanes making 500 or 1,000 miles an hour, or more, come into general use.

The frontiers of countries then will virtually disappear. The flying machine, conquering time and geography, will literally place the far corners of the earth at Mr. Average Man's door.

Prohibition or most other attempts to regulate individuals' conduct will be futile then, unless the laws apply only in one country, when men will be able to evade it by flying to another country in a few minutes or hours.

What, for instance, would restrain a murderer who could kidnap his victim in secrecy, rush in a flying machine to an iceberg or jungle, commit the murder, dispose of the body and return? Once home, even if his crime were discovered, he could not be made to answer any charge except kidnapping or assault with intent to kill, the actual murder being committed outside his own country.

The airplane will steadily lessen the effectiveness of many laws within any given country, and international laws will become the most important statutes in the world.

RADIO FUTURE

A New York City department store has just sold 350 "Western Electric receiving and broadcasting stations" at $495 apiece.

This was at a special sale. The outfits are described as "built for the U. S. navy. Adopted by the U. S. government as standard. Now in successful use on government ships. Sets that have never been used."

This sale is a history making event. It is the forerunner of best grade radio at a low price.

The add offering these sets for $495 says "the estimated cost of producing these sets today is $1,565, and the estimate is conservative."

The production cost, however, will be reduced eventually. Cheap radio of the best grade is inevitable. Remember, watches were almost prohibitive in price to the average man until Ingersoll set out to make them for a dollar. So were autos, until Henry Ford put on his thinking cap.

Another prophetic vision of radio's future comes from Wellesley, Mass., where Roger Babson, business expert, backs a movement to build a "wireless community church."

In this church, at different hours each Sunday, religious services for all denominations will be conducted by radio.

For instance, Presbyterians would get their service 10 to 11 in the morning, then would follow hours for Methodists, etc.

What Babson has in mind is eventually a national radio service by which isolated communities will get the best music and the best preaching available.

The services will be picked up in the homes by other millions of people when high grade radio outfits become cheap.

Man's greatest invention is the art of communication. Its first form was speech. People began coming out of their separate and individual caves and congregated in small settlements as soon as they were able to trade ideas and disarm each other's suspicions by exchanging words.

Writing was the next great invention, enabling people to communicate

GEORGIA WOMAN IS GIVEN SEAT IN THE U. S. SENATE

Mrs. W. H. Felton First Woman so Honored—Term Will Last Only One Day.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Mrs. W. H. Felton of Georgia took the oath of office today as the first woman United States senator.

It was said that her term probably will be only for a day, but the ceremony occurred with success the day after the 27-year-old judge made to "blaze" the path for American womanhood" in the senate, and it was indicated that she would be content to step aside tomorrow in favor of Walter F. George, who was elected November 7 as her successor to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Watson. It was to the vacancy caused by his death that Mrs. Felton was appointed last September to serve until the November elections.

The seating of Mrs. Felton attracted a crowd to the senate which rivaled that which greeted President Harding a short time before in the house where he addressed congress in joint session. She was at once showered with congratulations upon the signal honor.

When she was directed to proceed to the rostrum for the administering of the oath of office, her face broke into a smile. On the arm of Senator Harris of Georgia, and lifting her gown daintily, she walked down the center aisle and up to the vice president's desk, where Senator Cummins of Iowa, president pro tempore, was presiding in the absence of Vice President Coolidge.

As Senator Cummins motioned for her to raise her right hand, she exhibited the only sign of unfamiliarity with the proceedings, waving her hand to Mr. Cummins and smiling as if receiving a familiar salute. Senator Harris nudged her arm, however, and she then raised it, gazing intently at Senator Cummins as the oath was delivered and giving her response in a low voice.

NATIONAL GUARD MAY GO TO FORT RILEY THIS YEAR

Officers in Session at Omaha Do Not Look with Favor on This City for Next Encampment.

The question of where the Nebraska national guard would hold their 1923 encampment was one of the subjects that occupied some time at the meeting of the officers of the seventh army corps area at Omaha the last of the week.

Some of the officers at the session did not look with favor on the location at this place on account of the lack of sanitary sewerage and the lack of grounds suitable for the increased number of men who will be present at the next encampment and much preferred the proposition of meeting at Fort Riley, Kansas, with the Kansas national guard and where they would use the government military reservation for target practice and drilling which makes up the training program of the guard.

National guard officers have favored the expenditure of some $15,000 at Ashland where there is a site for a range but the state legislature as well as the federal government has not looked with favor on this proposition and no appropriation has been made for the work so that the only available range in the state is the government range at this place.

Since the experience of the troops training at Camp Dodge in 1921, the state authorities have not been keen about sending their troops into another state to train, but the recommendation of the guard officers will probably go a long way in deciding the place where the next encampment will be held.

HULL SAYS HARDING SEES NEWBERYISM REPUDIATED

Adds that Credit for Any Action by President Nullified by Insistence for Ship Subsidy.

Washington, Nov. 20.—Cordell Hull, chairman of the democratic national committee, in a statement today, said "the first fruits of the recent nation-wide democratic victory at the polls are seen in the resignation of Truman H. Newberry, which amounts to a confession of moral guilt of the offense charged."

"If Senator Newberry's resignation," he added, "is the result of administration pressure and advice, President Harding has made a good beginning, and it to be complimented therefor. It would be evidence that he, at least, understands that Newberry and Newberryism were repudiated utterly by the people on November 7th, last."

"In whatever degree, if any, President Harding is responsible for Newberry's resignation, the credit is largely nullified by his insistence upon the ship subsidy bill. The ship bonus bill and the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill were as utterly repudiated at the polls November 7th, as Newberryism."

"There is as yet no evidence that the administration has learned this fact or intends to profit by it, but there is the possibility and the hope that the assembled members of congress who have just returned from personal contact with their constituents in the campaign have learned this face and will act upon it accordingly."

"Ascensionism is no less obnoxious than Newberryism."
