THE UTMOST FARTHING

Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out then, till thou has paid the uttermost farthing.—Matthew v. 26.

Any business that is hurt by excess profits taxes ought to be hurt.

With only a few more days of 1922 to play, the score shows the coal dealers have won.

Does the army of employees who watch the clock know it can't mark time and get anywhere?

We can learn from others. In the Philippines, women are not allowed to hold boxing matches.

Hitting the ground is much easier than hitting a golf ball because the ground is so much larger.

These heavy earrings the girls are wearing are artistic and besides they keep the ears from flapping.

Why doesn't an auto maker put out a 1923 model with ready bend fenders so it always will look new?

The Turks will continue to dominate Armenia, which assures the Near East relief of a permanent job.

A foreign dispatch says there's no government in Shantung. Of course not, Shantung is part of China now.

Here is something else to make the farmers snort. A wire company has just declared a 300 per cent dividend on its common stock.

Mrs. Clare Phillips, the hammer welder, seems to have sunk completely into the earth. Even the movie people haven't been able to find her with a contract.

Texas should not boast because she has built the most miles of new roads this year. According to the territory she has to cover, she should be making this record every year.

Speaking of zero weather and the propriety of wearing car muffs with a derby hat, it is time also for a decision on whether a baldheaded man should remove his hat in a draught.

The banks that Kid McCoy has gone into bankruptcy calls the attention of old timers to the fact that a nickname like "Kid" can get out of date in the course of a quarter century.

The trouble with some of the aliens who knock at our gates, says a Washington writer, is that they intend to knock at our government. A privilege we are all more or less jealous about.

Lady Astor probably doesn't object to being howled down by a British audience. She believes in the political equality of the sexes, and that's what happens to male party speakers right along.

It is cabled that German printers hope to turn out enough marks by the end of the year to make an even trillion in circulation. Some people like to make records whether they mean anything or not.

Charles M. Schwab paid 10 cents for a raffle ticket at a church fair and drew a Guernsey bull valued at $1,000. When fortune favors people, she favors them and there's no use in expostulating with her.

The Americans are becoming a pessimistic people, unable to view an altruistic act on the part of a public man without suspecting him of a selfish motive. And they are right just about often enough to keep them suspicious permanently.

The Irish Free state is an actuality, but that is no assurance that professional patriots will not be selling the bonds of an independent Irish republic in this country. It is hard to relinquish a good thing, even in the interests of permanent peace and rest.

An elephant in the Seattle zoo has been complaining of sharp pains in the stomach, and it is discovered that he had been eating some double edge razor blades. Perhaps a few bottles of hair tonic administered now wouldn't relieve the condition, but it would prevent the blades from being a total waste.

The flapper style is said to be going but it is also going some.

"Merry Christmas" has past, now give us a "Happy New Year."

Let the hand that casts the ballot be the hand that builds the fire.

It is pretty hard for most men, even with good eyes, to see you when you are broke.

There is a great shortage of preachers in France. Our great shortage is in their pockets.

A foolish man seeks the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow while a wise man enjoys the rainbow.

Absolutely honest men don't need to advertise their honesty because their scarcity does it for them.

Home helps: A splendid way to make a husband stay at home at night is to stay there with him.

General Pershing is worried about our army and it might be better if the general's views were general.

In an effort to get to the bottom of things a party has sailed to measure the deepest part of the ocean.

Beauty secret: Your eyes can be made bright and shiny by always having them on something you like.

The idea of some patriots seems to be, if we ever get out of this place we will never get into another one.

Say what you will about Ismet Pashin, few diplomats have been able to absorb more ultimatums than he.

What's in a name? A millionaire whose real name is A. B. See says higher education for girls is useless.

A Pittsburg man married, and two days later eloped with his wife's sister. Some families are simply irresistible.

As to the Long Island motorman whose wife was a conductorette and who named their son Transfer. Fare enough?

There is nothing a woman enjoys quite so much as telling the world how patiently she bears her burdens in silence.

Radio messages traveled 5,200 miles in four minutes and eighteen seconds, but Christmas comes faster than that.

Our position simply is that if Santa Claus hadn't given us a limousine without plush upholstery, we would not have had it.

As we understand it, Mr. Chaplin's next marriage has been postponed, pending word from the lady's husband in Europe.

Chicago university is trying to select its most beautiful man. What would you suggest they do with him when they find him?

And the reason why it is so easy for a man to quit smoking is because one woman never notices another's woman's hat.

It is reported that Chancellor Cuno has a new plan for settling Germany's debts. Germany has never been willing to try the old plan.

A scientist says the earth is growing smaller. This accounts for the greater difficulty men experience these days when they start out to buy a farm.

The mayor of Indianapolis will hold a sanity test on all persons arrested for speeding. Now we shall see if "speed maniac" is a mere figure of speech or not.

Mustapha Kemal is establishing the Turkish capital at Angora in order to be out of range of foreign warships. The man seems unduly suspicious and may be about to start something.

The decision of the United States supreme court that violators of the liquor laws can be prosecuted under both state and national laws is quite a jar to the local bootleg colony. The doctrine, "once in jeopardy" does not hold.

JOHN WANAMAKER

A big, broad minded, constructive American passes in the death of John Wanamaker. One who raised himself from small beginnings to power in the mercantile world, who turned his back on political preferment, who wrought mightily for his community and state and now dies in the fullness of age personally mourned by thousands.

"Thinking, trying, toiling and trusting is all of my biography," Wanamaker wrote to one inquiring into his personal history. Important as the observation is, the world will insist on its expansion to proportions more fitting the career of one whose individual achievements comprise so large a part of the business history of half a century.

Beginning active life as an errand boy and door knob polisher for a Market street store in Philadelphia at $1.50 a week, Wanamaker made himself the biggest merchant of his time. He was credited with originating the idea of the modern department store which has expanded to become one of the dominant influences in merchandising. And while thus building his business ventures into the structure of American progress he found time for increasing activity in philanthropy, church and social betterment work. He was the first paid Y. M. C. A. secretary in the United States.

Wanamaker served as postmaster general in the Harrison administration with credit to himself; and in 1897 he let his name be used at Harburg as a candidate for the senate against Quay. He could have had the vice presidential nomination with Taft in 1912 but refused the honor.

It may be doubted whether America will ever see another "merchant prince" of John Wanamaker's calibre.

THINK OF THE HORSE

These days when the country is much exercised over the subject of military preparedness. But one large increase just made in the country's military establishment will call for general consideration. President Harding has just appointed Irvin S. Cobb a major in the officers reserve corps.

Administration critics may contend that the appointment is a funny one. There are some who will insist that Cobb will be the most humorous addition the army has ever had. Certainly, he is one of the largest additions, weighing something less than 300 pounds. But there is a serious side to the affair, an element of cruelty, not at all in keeping with the new traditions of the American armed forces.

A major is a field officer, booted, spurred, and entitled, nay, obliged to ride his charger during all the terrific heat or bitter cold of the days on which the reviews are held. And that's the serious point of commissioning Major Cobb. Think of the horse.

COST OF PUNCHES

It looks at last as if Jack Dempsey and Jess Willard will again fight for the world's championship, if they can just get some promoter to hang up a purse four or five times as big as the salary of the president of the United States for a year for their struggle which may last from one to thirty minutes.

Of course, if no promoter don't come forward they won't tangle. It will be beneath their dignity to battle for no more than the president of a great railroad system gets for one year's service and their dignity must be upheld. They may not uphold it in all other ways, but when the supreme test comes—when financial consideration is up—they always do. The honor of holding the championship is something of course and they also have heard talk of a thing called sportsmanship, though nowadays that latter word is much more often applied to yacht racers than to prize fighters. But the big thing they're out for is the dear old bale of yellowbacks.

One can't blame Jack and Jess for wanting to get all they can. But it does seem, sometimes, as if the so-called sport loving public were putting entirely too high a value on pugilistic achievement. It is out of proportion to all the other things which go to make up the life of a nation, some of which are even more important.

However, it must be confessed that just now it certainly pays to raise your boy not to be a soldier, but a prize fighter.

SHIELDING WOMEN

A man in New York State who admits murdering a friend, said on the witness stand that he did it reluctantly, after being urged to it for a year by a man and woman. When first asked why he had not mentioned the woman in the first confession before the trial, he replied: "Because she was a lady."

She must have been more than that. She must have been a "perfect lady." It is a fine thing to put women on a pedestal when they are worthy of such elevation, but it is just as important a thing to the welfare of society to put them in jail if they deserve to be in jail. A woman who will commit a heinous crime or urge another to do it deserves no protection from anybody and no consideration of her sex from those who try her. She then ceases to be a woman and becomes a beast, an enemy to society. No man facing a tiger in the jungle stops to inquire whether it be male or female before shooting to defend his own life or make the lives of others safe. And rattlesnakes are killed on the same principle.

The New York man may think he played the part of a true knight. He didn't. He played the part of a plain darned fool.

President Harding had a talk with a number of state governors the other day on the matter of prohibition enforcement. At first we feared the White House might not hold all the governors in the country who were keenly interested in the enforcement of the Volstead act, but it did. The number responding to the call was fifteen.

President Harding is certainly in a position to contribute vastly to the welfare of Europe and the restoration of world confidence. It is to be hoped that he will not be persuaded to desist by the sort of statesmanship that regards Idaho as the hub of the universe.

Miss Elizabeth Bajek, the teacher, who has been very successful in her school work, had charge of the program and is well pleased with the splendid results.
