No. 16—This beautiful duet and chorus occurs in the fourth act of the opera. Il Trovatore means The Troubadour.

The scene is laid outside Alfiereia Palace, where Manrico, defeated by Count di Luna, is confined in the dungeons. Here Lenora comes to be near her lover, and she is terror-stricken at the solemn tolling of a deep-toned bell and the mournful chorus of the priests chanting for the soul of the doomed prisoner.

Pray that peace may attend a soul departing.

Whither no care or thought of earth can follow; Heavenly mercy allays the pangs of parting.

Look beyond this life's delusions hollow. Then follows an impressive series of chorals in the orchestra leading to a sobbing lament of Lenora.

What voices of terror, for whom are our prayers? With omens of fear unknown, they darken the air. New horrors assail me, my senses are straying.

My vision is dim, is it death that is near?

In this scene breaks the beautiful air of the Troubadour sung within the prison, followed by a joyful cry of devotion from his beloved, Manrico—

Ah! I have sighed to rest me; deep in the quiet grave Sighed to rest me, but all in vain I crave. Oh fare thee well, my Lenora, fare thee well.

No. 17—Mendelssohn was inspired to write this overture by reading the Shakespearean comedy with his sister Fanny. It opens with four long chords which some one has called the boundary line between the real and the ideal. The overture closes with the same four mysterious chords. Following this music comes the daintiest of fairy music, the dignified theme of the Duke, the romantic theme of the lovers and the braying of the donkey (in allusion to Nick Bottom).

This delightful overture was written when Mendelssohn was only 17 years old. Seventeen years later he completed the incidental music for the rest of the play.

Chiropractic

The great health science that removes the cause of disease. The CHIROPRACTIC idea is that the cause of disease is in the person afflicted and the adjustment is correcting the wrong that is producing it. Any impinged nerve by a subluxated vertebra causes to function properly and the result is disease. The CHIROPRACTOR knows how to find and properly adjust this vertebra relieving the pressure and allowing nature to make you well.

It will cost only a little of your time to investigate CHIROPRACTIC in our office and it may mean the return of your health.

No embarrassment in taking an adjustment as only the spine is exposed to the CHIROPRACTOR. Private dressing rooms are provided.
