TURN ALSO THE OTHER CHEEK

Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, That ye resist not evil, but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek turn to him the other also.—Matthew v, 38 and 39.

The same old wages of sin still prevail, though some deaths come higher than others.

Three Detroit men poisoned by eating hot dogs, so we suggest the hot dogs went mad.

We hope the Egyptian craze lasts. The Egyptians were forbidden to eat onions or garlic.

The average man expects his wife to have more sense than she shows by marrying him.

Nothing is so bad as it could be. Suppose bedbugs sang all night long like mosquitos do?

It was nice of a German police dog to locate booze in Washington, but we claim he should be at home biting Frenchmen.

The difference between our president and vice president is that nobody knows where or when Coolidge takes a vacation.

Since so many young women are marrying nowadays "so I can do as I like," why is divorce spoken of as getting one's freedom?

One reason why we wouldn't belong to a bachelor's club is because we would hate to hear marriage and divorce discussed all the time.

Of course it is none of our business, but sometimes it looks like marriage may be saved to the world by the movie stars and the Vanderbilts.

And now some of the works of Nebuchadnezzar have been exhumed in Babylon. Do any of them deal with his extraordinary vegetarianism?

Now the old saying is: If it rains on Easter Sunday it will rain seven successive Sundays. The pioneers of the country claim that this assertion has proved quite true.

Easter Sunday is always looked forward to, especially by the children, as the time for colored eggs, and, fortunately, eggs were cheap enough for them to enjoy this event.

"Beautiful Hair is Every Woman's Rightful Heritage," says Mme. Jeritza. Heritage seems to be the right word, although many take their heritage in the form of an annuity.

"CAT COME BACK"

The birds that build their nests near your house this spring probably will be the same ones that camped near you last year. So claims H. Knight Horsfield in his new book "Sidelights on Birds."

Patriotism, or the instinct of seeking old homes year after year, is highly developed in birds, "the very fields and woods which constitute home for them being resought year after year."

How do they find their way back? Horsfield writes that the stranger way—finding power of migratory birds is leading up to the idea that there exists in birds an occult power which may be classed as a food-finding sense, separate from and additional to the five senses possessed by people and animal life.

Some of us, who are considered "queer," merely have a sixth or psychic sense.

Birds are very human, Horsfield comments. He thinks the lure that makes them return to former homes is their "passionate attachments for their native lands—their true home—in which the most fascinating period of their lives is spent."

Horsfield also claims that certain bird families have distinct sense of the rights of property. Sometimes they fight and drive out invaders of what they consider their exclusive territory. "With rooks it is clear that a given belt of trees is marked out as the property of a particular colony. In other words, a fence."

All of us have recognized, in cats and dogs, this instinct which brings birds back to their former homes. As the old saying goes, "The cat came back."

But the cat will not come back unless it has affection for its old home or kittens that need its care, according to Prof. F. H. Herrick of Western Reserve university.

The cat, says Herrick, returns home by the power of orientation, a sense of direction. "This power of orientation is a keen sense of muscular feeling, far keener than that possessed by the human body. By it, a cat knows instantly in which direction home lies, through the feeling of its muscles. It is sense of direction in its most acute form."

A dog owned by Frank Farrow recently was sold and sent by express from Denver to a town 700 miles away. It returned home, limping, Vaudeville now will "stand by." Turn to more important, though possibly less interesting, world events.

THE LEVIATHAN

The steamship Leviathan after a thorough reconditioning is again nearly ready for service. According to officials of the shipping board she will be faster and safer than when she was originally constructed and even more elegant. All of which we can readily believe when we learn that more than $8,000,000 has been spent in reconstructing her.

For a little while as last attention will be focused on her elegance and her ability to meet such liners as the Mauretania and the Majestic in a competition, particularly a competition of speed. But interest in that aspect of the situation will be short lived. With this giant liner in the hands of the shipping board the question of most conspicuous interest will be that of its profitable operation. If the contentions of the board itself and of the president in connection with the higher costs of American ship operation are well sustained the Leviathan is destined to be a burden upon the treasury from the start.

But in the Leviathan America is to have for the first time a liner that is in any sense comparable to the best that England and our leading maritime competitors have to offer. It is accordingly not inconceivable that she can operate on much more favorable terms than the smaller shipping board vessels which as a result of lack of speed and accommodations of the very best type have been unable to compete for the most lucrative trans-Atlantic traffic.

But even if the Leviathan should prove a money loser it would be improper for the shipping board to decide promptly to dispose of her at a sacrifice price. During the war the Leviathan made forty-two voyages across the Atlantic carrying thousands of soldiers on every trip and contributed very substantially to our success in bringing the war to an end in 1918. If there is any argument for a merchant marine as a naval auxiliary to serve the nation in time of emergency a vessel that has a war record like the Leviathan ought somehow to be retained.

Ex-President Wilson has asked the governor of Colorado to appoint Huston Thompson to the United States senate and Ex-Secretary McAdoo has asked him to appoint Morrison Shalfer. Looks like a chance for Governor Sweet to compromise by appointing his own choice.
