REST FOR THE LAND

Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard and gather in the fruit thereof; but in the seventh year shall be a Sabbath of rest unto the land, a Sabbath for the Lord: thou shalt neither sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard—that which groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes of thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land.—Leviticus xxv, 3 to 5.

Early to bed for the youngsters now. The curfew is on. And it is a good thing to keep the boys off the street where they have no business.

Senator Moses says the coming congress will do a lot of talking, but not much else. Not much else can be expected of a congress that lasts into presidential year.

A list of the sums due the United States by the various nations of Europe looks strangely familiar to the man who glances at his annual tax, coal and clothing bills.

An investigator has figured that a bee, to gather one pound of honey must travel 43,776 miles—which reminds us we ought to be thankful the bee does not have to be paid on a mileage basis.

That both the republican and democratic national parties are striving to precipitate Henry Ford into a third party movement and thereby rid themselves of a potential candidate and undermine their adversaries with independent electioneering in uncertain states, is asserted by leaders in both regular camps. With Ford financing and heading a third party campaign next year, much strength would be drawn from both old line parties in doubtful states, each side concedes, and though each believes such a situation must aid its ticket, both agree that an elimination of the auto maker in their regular plans. Only if the supporters of Bob LaFollette and Clifford Pinchot threaten to line up with a new party, can such a movement be considered anything but beneficial to the old party machines, the bosses appear to agree.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

President Coolidge has joined the Congregational church, making his confession by faith by telegraph to a pastor at Springfield, Mass., and will hereafter worship at the First Congregational church in Washington.

Politics from present indications will be considerably jumbled up next year. And the people will not support candidates for president who are not right in head and heart, and stand up for the rights of the common people as well as for the "up-pertens."

When the American Federation of Labor was considering the Volstead act in its convention at Portland, a Boston delegate asked a question which none tried to answer. It was this: "Is it because a man gets drunk that he's no good or because he is no good that he gets drunk?" Either way, it is undisputed that a drunk man is no good.

On Fifth avenue, New York, it looks as if the derby hat has gone out of style. "Soft" clothes are favored by men. They want comfort. Gone is the "iron hat" that checked circulation in the region of the scalp. Gone is the starched collar, injuriously pressing the jugular vein and neck arteries. When we look at the easy, comfortable and healthful garments worn these days by men and women, we can be convinced there isn't an undercurrent of sound sense.

OUR CUSTOMERS

Europe still is our best customer. She's buying a little better than half of our total exports. Her purchases of American raw materials, manufactured goods are more than our sales to Canada, Mexico and South America combined.

Maybe you get weary of reading about the European situation. But any business man would be highly concerned if his best customer, buying half of his total sales, were in financial difficulties and other troubles up to his ears.

Manufactured goods lately have been making up two-fifths of our total exports. They've been averaging at the rate of 1,500 million dollars a year. This represents quite a large part of the output of our factories and mills—enough to pay a million wage earners $1,500 a year apiece. Rather obvious, that the foreign situation is closely connected with the average American pocket-book.

FIRE PREVENTION

In some of the western states fire losses this past year totalled more than the entire amount of taxes collected, showing the imperative need of more protection.

What recently happened at Berkeley, California, when 650 homes in one of the finest residential districts of the city were completely destroyed by fire in scarcely over an hour is a drastic example of this need.

Adequate fire stopping in dwelling construction is almost as rare as a well spent life. There are many more dwellings which contain no evidence of installation of fire stopping details than there are persons willing to assume responsibility for the omission of those details.

Many architects, engineers and contractors after they have satisfied themselves on matters relating to style, plan and cost, devote their energies to insuring the structural adequacy of the buildings they erect.

The stability of the foundation, the rigidity of the walls and roof and load carrying capacity of the floors are essential considerations. But they are not all. At least one other essential requirement of sound construction has received but scant notice in the building of small houses.

The average carpenter and builder does not realize the extent of our national fire losses or else he considers the possibility of fire as quite remote. Usually the home owner does not have the experience to know what is required. The designer, the superintendent and the contractor, jointly, should assume the responsibility of securing careful consideration of those inexpensive details which greatly reduce the fire hazard.

Construction expedients which will help reduce the excessive toll of the fire loss to the country should be peculiarly worthy of study. The lumber industry is anxious too, not only of material and labor, but too often of life, caused by fire in the United States. It is co-operation with the National Board of Fire Underwriters and the Underwriters Laboratories to awaken the public to the advantage of guarding against fire.

MIND AND CHARACTER

"Our minds learn far more quickly than our characters change, so that the social and political structure of the world has not kept pace with the growth of its knowledge."

This bit of wisdom is taken from the recent speech of Premier Stanley Baldwin at the opening of the British imperial conference. The thought is not wholly new. A man Paul, long ago, found a law in his body warring against the law of his mind and cried out, "The good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do."

There are probably few statesmen today who do not believe that the destructive results of the late war could have been speedily counteracted, through the application of modern methods in finance and industry, than was possible in the case of any great war in the world's previous history. But for some reason or other, the knowledge that had been worked out has not been applied, and a large part of the world still lies in confusion and stagnation, five years after the war itself came to an end.

Premier Baldwin is right about the great nations of the world today, as Paul was right about his own problem of conduct nineteen centuries ago. We have not paid any too much attention to the improvement of the mind, but we have neglected to keep our ethical progress up with the intellectual. The tendency to drop the moral element out of education shows its natural effect in sterilizing out intellectual achievements.

FOOTBALL NOTES

Now that the world's series is over footballers come to pass.

Football players are among the few who are cheered for kicking.

Zuppke of Illinois is a football coach even if it does sound like a foreigner asking for soup.

While Zuppke writes, football plays he is not a playwright. He writes so they won't play wrong.

The best football players come from the broad open spaces where men are men and women are girls.

While the football season ends on Thanksgiving this is not the original excuse for Thanksgiving.

Learning football is no easy matter. Arguing with traffic cops and policemen is fine training.

An excellent way to learn football is by kicking every lap dog you see and then running.

Football players must be tough. They must be tough as cafe steaks. Eating cafe steaks will help them.

Never feed a football player on raw meat. It is dangerous. He may bite off his girl's nose.

Looking for needles in haystacks will train a football player's eyes to see the point.

Football is better than golf. Everybody knows where the ball is.

Best way to train a footballer is make him fall in love. Then he will fight like a bedbug.

What's a little rouge between a girl and a football hero? Nothing, if it is on her lips.

Footballers must know open field running. Dodging autos helps in this. Never stiff arm a limousine.

Everybody should know football. A good football player can trip a collector and step in his face.

Football enables one to kick a burglar in the eye and take his watch and pocketbook.

Women should learn football. It would help in bargain counter rushes and opening tight windows.

Never play with your mouth open. When you brush your teeth you may find an extra ear.

Teach the family football. No neighbor would dare talk about a family of football players.

Buy the baby a football. Tell him football players don't cry. Saves you lots of singing.

This whole town needs football. If everybody could lick everybody, they wouldn't have to do it.

If everybody in the United States learned to play football we could chase the book agents ragged.

Facts most motorists know

Protective lubrication keeps motors powerful

Any modern motor shows plenty of power when it is new. But after several thousand miles of service, it may develop vibrations and hesitate on grades that it formerly took easily on high. This is a sure sign of poor lubrication.

With Polarine of the right grade—flushed out every five or six hundred miles—many months will pass without the slightest failure in power or any tell-tale knocks or vibrations.

Polarine isn't the most expensive motor oil you can buy. But it is the most perfect that years of painstaking experiment and test have produced. Polarine protects. It is made to one high standard of quality in five grades—light, medium, heavy, special heavy and extra heavy—a grade that provides protective lubrication for every make of automobile motor.

Consult the Polarine Chart. Buy the grade of oil recommended and your motor will stay powerful and cost you little for repairs. Buy where you see this sign.

ENJOYED FINE MEETING

From Friday's Daily—

Yesterday afternoon the members of the Ladies Aid society of the Methodist church held a most delightful meeting at the church parlor and which was very largely attended by the membership of the society. The regular business session of the society was held and the members then enjoyed a very interesting talk on southern California, given by Mrs. Elizabeth Beeson Hawkins, and in which she related many personal incidents of her recent visit to the golden state and the former Plattsmouth and Cass county people who make their home in that portion of the country. At a suitable hour the hostesses, Messrs. V. E. Arn, Rasmus Peterson, C. C. Wescott and Benjamin Dukes, served a very dainty and delicious luncheon that was very much enjoyed by all of the members of the party.

WEATHER BRINGS CHANGES

From Friday's Daily—

The cooling weather of the late fall season has been making the residents of the city spend less time on the streets in the evening and by the time the curfew blows there are but few persons to be seen darting along the street and these are evidently headed homeward. Even the usual sign of the approach of winter is at hand—that of the men who are making their way on the freight trains toward the south and stop off for a night's lodging at the city jail.
