"Interference" Coming; Manager Tells How Scenes Are Made; At Parmele Three Days

Just how talking motion pictures are filmed at the motion picture studios was explained today by Manager Seydlitz of the Parmele theatre when he announced the playing of the Paramount all-talking movie, "Interference." He announced the dates of the picture as Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The picture features four well-known film players in the principal roles, Evelyn Brent, Clive Brock, William Powell, and Doris Kenyon.

"The filming of talking motion pictures, differs greatly from the ordinary producing method," he said. "Many technical problems have to be solved. The method now employed at the Paramount studio and which prevailed in filming the scenes for 'Interference' is something like this: "We will assume that we are watching the shooting of a scene for 'Interference.' We see Roy J. Pomeroy, the director, sitting in a chair giving last minute instructions to the players. Giant doors swing shut at Pomeroy's command. A peculiar silence dominates the stage. Now and then a whispered conversation is heard. Voices trail off strangely. Incandescent lamps flood the set. Strange camera 'snaps'... sound-proof booths... crouch on the edge of the set. Microphones are suspended over the players' heads. Silence. It grows oppressive, stifling.

"There is a man located in a tiny room at the top of the set. He watches the position of the players on the set and regulates their voices. He hears everything that is said thru giant horns. He is known as the 'mixer.'"

"The old familiar cry of 'camera!' has been supplanted by 'Interlock!' meaning the cameras and recording machines are to be synchronized and set ready to go. A bell rings. Everything quiet. The scene starts. "Every word spoken by the players is recorded on film disc. The slightest noise made by tripping over a chair or knocking on wood is picked up by the sensitive 'mikes.' A tiny light cell, a photo-electric cell, transmits the eloquent nuances of the players' voices into unimpressive, minute lines of gray and black and white. Tiny lines, less than one tenth of an inch in length, delicate shadings of light; warm voices on cold film is the result," he concluded.

Rotarians are Guests of Lewiston Civic Center

Men of Lewiston Community Center Are Hosts to the Visitors From Plattsmouth

From Wednesday's Daily—
Last evening the members of the Plattsmouth club of the International Rotary motored down to Lewiston, one of the pioneer landmarks of Cass county where the club were invited to be the guests of the men of the Lewiston Community Center. The visit being a good will treat given by the men in acknowledgment of the visit there some time ago with the Rotary when the club entertained the community center.

The occasion was one that will long be pleasantly remembered by those who took part and the men who were fortunate enough to be present enjoyed one of the dinners that can only be found in this part of the world and prepared by the skillful hands of the Cass county housewives.

Following the dinner which was served by the ladies of the community center, the members of the dinner party enjoyed a splendid program that made the event one of the greatest enjoyment.

The program was presided over by Albert Young, one of the well known residents of that section of the county, in his very clever manner.

Mrs. Major Hall was heard in a very charming piano number that proved a very delightful feature of the program. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hall, Dick and Joan, also were on the program in a delightful vocal duet and these two little folks have a very brilliant musical future as was evidenced by the manner in which they gave the song. Mrs. Hall served as the accompanist for the number.

Mrs. L. R. Snipes of Weeping Water was present and gave the members of the party a real treat in two dramatic readings that everyone appreciated to the utmost.

Frank A. Clodt and Lynn O. Minor, two of the musical stars of the Rotary club gave the very beautiful duet number, "Neopolitan Nights," in the usual artistic manner of these two gifted singers.

L. R. Snipes, the county agricultural agent, was called upon for a few remarks and gave a very interesting talk along the lines of the common community interests of all sections of the county, the good will that is felt among the residents of all parts of the communities and the common aims and purposes of the merchant and business man and the farmer.

The Rotary was much disappointed that William Baird, one of the popular members of the club, who was to have given a Scotch song on the program, was unable to be present and Frank A. Clodt gave the number "Annie Laurie" in a most delightful manner.

Howard Bigger, fieldman of the Journal-Stockman of Omaha, was present and gave a most interesting address, interspersing his remarks with several original poems, one of which was a tribute to the pioneer woman of the west. Mr. Bigger discussed the opportunities of today and the past, comparing the geniuses in the field of invention and chemistry with the pioneer geniuses of the past who had come to the west and founded a new nation on this continent and in turning the wilderness of the great west into cities, farms and homes. For those who sought it, the present held as a great opportunity or even greater than that which had been in the past.

As the meeting was closing Searl S. Davis of the Rotary club presented to the Lewiston Community center a large American flag that will be a part of the fitting of the community building and as the flag was presented the audience joined in the singing of "America" as the meeting adjourned after the expression of appreciation by Mr. Young on behalf of the Lewiston people.

Loses Life, Helping Victims of Flood

Eastern Nebraska Hard Hit by Torrential Rains; Twister Near Madison.

Torrential rains which flooded many homes in low lying districts, inundated highways and railroad tracks, drowned many head of livestock and caused the death of one man, swept portions of east central Nebraska Monday night, according to reports. High winds and lightning, accompanied the downpours and did considerable damage.

Donald Green, 23, was drowned at Albion where the storm struck with great fury. In less than three hours 6.19 inches of rain fell there.

Green was assisting in rescuing persons from inundated homes when he was sucked into a whirlpool and swept away.

The heavy rainfall sent Beaver creek over its banks and raging thru the lower section of Albion. Between 30 and 40 families were driven from their homes. Crop and livestock losses will run into thousands of dollars, it is estimated.

Some of the residences in Albion were submerged to the second floor and the water coursed through the business section, filling basements and piling the streets with debris.

A small twister struck the farm of Joe Kilmer, two miles north of Madison, unroofing the farm buildings. Joe Duffield of Madison, playing golf on a course near the farm, took refuge at the Kilmer farm and was slightly injured. After striking the Kilmer farm, the twister rose, hitting again at the Schwank farm, two miles northeast, uprooting trees and doing other damage.

Another storm struck in the vicinity of Scotia, northwest of Grand Island.

PRESENT DELIGHTFUL RECITAL

From Wednesday's Daily—
Last evening the voice pupils of Mrs. E. H. Wescott were heard in a very delightful recital at the auditorium of the Plattsmouth public library and a very pleasing number of the friends of the artists were present to enjoy the event and making their appreciation known by the hearty encore given each number.

The decorations were simple and were the flowers of the late summer season and made a very pretty touch to the scene.

All those who participated in the program showed a most artistic touch in their work and the voices showed the excellent training that has been given by the teacher, one of the gifted vocalists of the city.

Those who took part in the program were Eugene Bushnell, Vivian Moore, Margaret Shallenberger, Mrs. D. O. Dwyer, Mildred Hall, Gladys Bushnell, Mrs. Margaret Todd, Hilda Epler, Warren Taylor, Jean Hayes.

The numbers largely comprised vocal solos with one duet number by Miss Hall and Miss Bushnell being featured.

The accompaniment was given in a most artistic manner by Miss Helen Wescott and which aided in the great success of the recital.

MOTION NOT ARGUED

From Wednesday's Daily—
Yesterday morning County Attorney W. G. Kieck of Cass county and County Attorney George H. Heinke of Otos county were called to Omaha where it was stated to have the plea in abatement in the case of the State of Nebraska vs. George O. Dovey argued before Judge Leslie. The attorneys for the defense, T. J. McGuire and W. C. Ransey were also ready to submit the matter to the court but Judge Leslie was unable to hear the arguments.

The plea in abatement will be argued here when the case is called for trial before the district court on Thursday and will require some time to be heard by the court.

Your ad in the Journal will be read, and they sure do get results.

'Kitty' Grips Spectator by Subtle Charm

Poignant Sentiment Brings Tears to the Eyes and Happy Smiles; Cast Is Excellent.

The romantic charm of Warwick Deening's famous novel "Kitty" is reflected in the film of the same title which will be shown at the Parmele theatre Sunday and Monday. It is a talking picture and the dialogue adds greatly to the effectiveness of the production.

The appeal of this popular writer, the author of the film success, "Sorrel and Son," lies in his poignant sentiment. The story tears the heart strings and brings tears as well as smiles to the eyes.

Kitty Falls in Love.
Kitty is just a shop girl, but she falls in love, and is loved, by a young aristocrat who has just received his commission in the flying corps. Secretly married, the boy's mother is not informed of the wedding until the son writes her from France.

The patrician mother is furious and tries to break up the marriage, believing that the girl is merely a "gold digger." She spies on Kitty, exaggerates a trivial friendship into falsity of heart and writes her son that the girl is not true to him. The boy receives the letter from his mother just before he is ordered to take the air. Stunned, he is unable to guide his plane and crashes to earth.

Kidnaps Husband.
He is brought back home, his mind blank and his legs crippled. The mother through money and influence is able to keep the two apart for a time, but the girl manages to kidnap her husband, supports him and by her faith brings him back to health.

The picture is most notable for its simplicity and appealing characterizations. The background scenes of the famous English castles, the quaint London shops and the beautiful scenery along the River Thames are most effective.

Direction Effective.
The direction of Victor Saville is most effective, he having successfully translated Deening's stirring love romance to the screen. As to the portrayal it is notable as an interesting instance of team work in all departments. Estelle Brody, who plays the title role, wins the sympathy of the spectator from the start and grips them with her charm and loveliness throughout the picture.

Dorothy Cumming, an artist of strong screen personality, who played a leading role in "The King of Kings," brings sincerity and conviction to the part of the anguished mother. John Stuart is most happily cast as the victimized son of his mother's ambitions. Marie Ault and others in the cast give a strong char-
