Some men believe in luck because they never have any.

An egg in the hand is worth more than the hen in the bush.

Fifty million maps were used by the Allied armies during the World War.

Everything looks lovely and the goose hangs high. Thanksgiving not so far away.

Admission prices to motion picture theatres in Sofia, Bulgaria now range from three to 14 cents.

Russia and China seem aware that arguments are very expensive when fired from field guns.

Pupils in public schools of Lincoln, England, are to be given a course in the use of the telephone.

The people are learning very rapidly that nothing is made by going away from home for supplies.

More than $3,000,000 worth of cottonseed oil was sent from the United States to Canada last year.

In the first four months of this year China sent $430,800 worth of fre crackers to the United States.

Dawes is proving popular as our ambassador to Great Britain. We always did think that job was a pipe.

In England the Prince of Wales creates fashions, but unfortunately we can't all go fishing like Mr. Hoover.

We believe the radio has done much to elevate the public appreciation of good music and to stimulate the demand for it.

The laziest man has been discovered. He paid admission to the Boston rocking chair tournament to watch some one else rest.

When prohibition was first put in operation moonshine whiskey was practically unknown in the major portion of the United States.

We wouldn't so much mind the battle between the bulls and bears if they weren't always killing smaller game just to keep in practice.

Increased from the United States for the wares has aroused the hopes of linen workers of Ireland, who have been experiencing scant times.

Owing the failure of the wheat crop in Canada, prices of breadstuffs have increased in Great Britain. But what about our great surplus?

A California woman mayor has ruled against the sale of liquor to miners. That's a good measure; wonder home she happened to think of it.

The flat has gone forth, that Americans who work in Mexico must live there. However, this will not meet with a counterblast from this country.

The legislature of Wisconsin, which convened Jan. 4, is still in session. If that isn't an endurance record it ought to be, but we don't know whether to acclaim the sturdy lawmakers or tender condolence to the people.

Using your head is one way of staying ahead.

Perhaps after all, it was next year that the prophets were sure was to be a year without a summer.

More than $1,500,000 worth of radio apparatus was sent from the United States to Argentina last year.

The Cubs have signed a 13-year-old infielder. Other managements merely look for arrested development.

When the wife begins to describe your vacation to the neighbors, you begin to really wonder where you were all the time.

At one time, while over Texas, the Graf Zeppelin radioed that she did not know where she was, another tribute to the size of Texas.

Today's fable: A man wrote one of those wish-you-well postals and inclosed a check to pay his friend's transportation to the place.

Chairs have been provided in the library at Sing Sing so the prisoners can read sitting down. Still that's not such a great inducement.

The small boy in the suburbs already is manifesting his opinion that one day is totally insufficient time in which to celebrate the Fourth.

Ohio farmers are driving to Columbus to see the state fair agricultural exhibits—if there's time for more than a lemonade between races.

According to the cynic, modern politeness consists in doing something unpleasant to people every few minutes and saying, "I'm sorry."

The papaya is coming into general use, says a writer. But even the lovely kumquat might have achieved popularity with all that publicity.

Quincy, Mass., policemen will not be allowed to talk to citizens except in the line of duty, which is the one time nobody wants to converse with a cop.

Plattsmouth merchants have evidently had their share of patronage so far this summer, and are now looking forward to an early fall trade.

Much is being written about a paper suit for man, to cost two dollars. There is a chance to determine whether a two-dollar bill is really unlucky.

Good schools will bring just the kind of people we want in Plattsmouth. We have as good schools as any city of the size of Plattsmouth in the west.

There should be many people here at the opening of the Missouri River bridge. We then can look to a contract in the opening of the Pontoon bridge which went down the river, with the breakup of the ice the first winter.

Those former residents who have not visited the old home for a number of years express themselves surprised at the way improvements have been made since they lived here. There have been many big improvements, and the measure in business has been wonderful also.

AL SMITH: BUILDER

Alfred E. Smith has a new job. He is to be head of the company that will erect and manage the tallest building in the world. It will be built within the next year and a half on Fifth Avenue on the site of the old Waldorf Astoria Hotel—the heart of the island of Manhattan. It will cover two acres of ground, hold 60,000 people at one time, have 80 stories of offices, and rear its proud tower into the sky to an even thousand feet. It will be named the Empire State Building, but we feel sure that the policeman on the corner will say, "Oh, you mean the Al Smith building," and the kids playing over the Jersey bank of the Hudson Bay will sometimes pause to look into the distance and say to one another, "see that; Al Smith did that, and when my dad told me that he was licked back in 1928 I went upstairs and cried all night, and I'm proud of it, too."

UNPREPARED IN THE AIR?

Despite all the progress America has made in aviation in recent years, the nation cannot yet consider itself prepared in the air, in a military sense, according to Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of aeronautics in the U. S. Navy.

Admiral Moffett told Culver Military Academy summer school students the other day that Germany, despite her defeat in the World War, leads the entire world in aviation, both in expenditures and progress. He urged an unbuilding of Uncle Sam's aerial defense, remarking that the navy needs at least four more modern aircraft carriers.

Probably it is a surprise to most of us to hear that our military aviation is not yet up to standard. There is one comfort, however; we are undoubtedly making vast progress. The quick development of a huge air force in time of war would be a far easier task now than it was in 1917.

A few very painful accidents have occurred the past few days. We do not believe the officers are observing the speed law as close as they ought to in the city limits. It is unnecessary to speed in the city.
