Reed Urged to Make the Race for Governor

Former Missouri Senator Suggested as Best Democratic Hope; Seen as a Sacrifice.

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 20.—Former United States Senator James A. Reed was urged to become a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor here today by State Senator A. L. McCawley, author of Missouri's "bone dry" law and consistent prohibitionist throughout his public career. McCawley placed party need above personal principles.

"I am convinced that Senator Reed is the one party leader in Missouri who could be elected governor and carry the remainder of the ticket to victory," McCawley said. "If he would make the necessary personal sacrifice that such a race would mean to him, I would give my best efforts to aid him in securing the nomination and election."

In 1932 we will have to elect not only a governor and a United States senator, but a full state ticket, including three judges of the state supreme court. The nature of the democratic party in Missouri hinges largely, in my judgment, on the result of that election. Behind Senator Reed as its leader the party could and would make a great fight or restoration of power in state government.

"I haven't the slightest idea that Senator Reed would entertain a suggestion that he stand or the gubernatorial nomination. It would be a great day, though, for Missouri democrats if he would say he would consent to lead them out of the wilderness."—World-Herald.

Business Good, Payment is Slow, Say Credit Men

Chicago — Business conditions throughout the United States are generally good, but collections are a little slower than normal. This was the consensus of the board of directors of the National Association of Credit Men, meeting at the Edgewater Beach Hotel here, according to Bruce Bennett, manager of the central division.

This seemingly contradictory situation is generally credited, Mr. Bennett said, to widespread investments in the stock market, tying up vast sums of money. Business men are using their money to make more, he added, and although many are a little slow in paying their bills their credit is good. The credit executives saw little cause for alarm in the present situation, he reported, but warned that a prolonged break in the market would be reflected in a large degree on business in all parts of the country.

Reports of department heads, submitted to the directors showed satisfactory progress during the past year, especially in credit protection work, Mr. Bennett declared. Maxwell Mattuck of New York and E. J. Hess of Chicago, directors of this organization, reported that in four years the department had placed 793 commercial crooks behind the bars, obtained 1700 indictments with 600 still pending, and had recovered concealed assets worth $1,400,000.

The department, organized to check fraud, to aid in the conviction of law-breakers and to stem the losses of creditors, was financed by popular subscription. The $1,250,000 originally raised met the expenses of the work for 4 1/2 years; a new campaign for $1,750,000, designed to finance the department for five years beginning Jan. 1, 1930, is now under way.

"The commercial crook," Mr. Hess said, "was operating an organized 'racket,' obtaining credit under false pretenses, staging fraudulent bankruptcy cases and victimizing business through unethical and illegal practices. The success of our work is indicated by the fact that we're receiving fewer complaints than ever before but as a rule the cases we get now are larger than before. In other words, we've driven all the 'amateurs' out of the 'racket,' only the more daring operators are left and we're finding it extremely difficult for them."

When the credit men entered the field, Mr. Hess continued, the local and state authorities were none too cordial in their reception, as the belief was general that the association would be interested in recovering assets but not in punishing the law-breaker. This attitude has been broken down, he said, and the officials are co-operating wholeheartedly in prosecuting cases turned over to them by the credit protection operatives.

The collection department reported to the board that its field has been materially extended through a working agreement with the International Society for the Promotion and Protection of Trade, Ltd., of London. This arrangement, completed a year ago, has been found beneficial to business men in both the Old World and the New, the report stated. The United States organization also co-operates with the Canadian Association of Credit Men and is working toward similar hookups in South America.

Cattle Movement to Feed Lots Takes Drop

Early Shift This Year Is 30 Per Cent Below That of Last Year, Statistics Indicate.

Early movement of cattle to the feedlots is 30 per cent below that of last year, says the state and federal division of agricultural statistics. Shipments of feeder cattle into corn belt states points to some reduction in cattle feeding.

Early shipments of cattle into Nebraska feeding sections this year have been 71 per cent as many as a year ago. The movement was unusually early last year. Cattle feeders have hesitated somewhat for several reasons. In the first place the outcome of the corn crop was uncertain until late. Feeder cattle prices had a downward trend in contrast to the upward trend last fall. Less profitable results last year, due in part to high feeder cattle prices, made cattle feeders determined to buy them right this fall. Then too, there was the lack of speculative activity which stimulated prices last year.

Movement of cattle into corn belt states was 20 per cent below that of last year, and 13 per cent below the five year average. Heaviest reductions are apparent in Kansas and Missouri since the corn crop is very short in those states. A stronger demand is expected in the corn belt since the corn crop is somewhat above earlier expectations and the price prospect more favorable to feeding. It seems likely the late movement of cattle to feeding sections may exceed that of last year in view of the more favorable situation for feeding and the unusually low late movement last year.

FARM LIVING CALLED BEST. Ames, Ia., Oct. 20.—A plea that farming should be regarded not only as a "way of making a living," but as a "way of living," was made by Mrs. Charles W. Sewell, national director of the home and community department of the American Farm Bureau federation here before the rural youth section banquet at the American country life conference.

"Today rural community problems are looking for local leaders and there is no end of opportunity for the rural-minded young man and woman to serve in as large or as small a capacity as he or she chooses in the immediate community," Mrs. Sewell told the youths and directors of farm boys' and girls' activities.

She appealed to college students to spend their energies toward development of closer unity and co-operation in the field of agriculture. Washington — Despite President Hoover's emphatic objection to the export debenture plan of farm relief, the senate approved it Saturday for the third time since the special session began, and the bounty provision now rests in the tariff bill.

Twice the senate inserted the controversial proposal in the farm relief measure by a margin of three votes, but receded in the face of an overwhelming ballot against it in the house. The victory Saturday for the democratic-western republican coalition was by a majority of eight—42 to 34. Disposition of this amendment, sponsored by Senator Norris, Nebraska, put the senate in a position to begin consideration of the fifteen rate schedules early next week, the eighth to be devoted to the tariff by that body. Administration republicans were placed in a greater predicament than ever in their efforts to whip a tariff bill into a form acceptable to the president.

Senate Votes a Farmer Bounty Into the Tariff

Norris Debenture Amendment Is Given Approval by Forty-Two to Thirty-Four

Washington — Despite President Hoover's emphatic objection to the export debenture plan of farm relief, the senate approved it Saturday for the third time since the special session began, and the bounty provision now rests in the tariff bill.

Twice the senate inserted the controversial proposal in the farm relief measure by a margin of three votes, but receded in the face of an overwhelming ballot against it in the house. The victory Saturday for the democratic-western republican coalition was by a majority of eight—42 to 34. Disposition of this amendment, sponsored by Senator Norris, Nebraska, put the senate in a position to begin consideration of the fifteen rate schedules early next week, the eighth to be devoted to the tariff by that body.

Administration republicans were placed in a greater predicament than ever in their efforts to whip a tariff bill into a form acceptable to the president. Already the conferees on the revision measure face a hard struggle on the flexible provisions which the senate eliminated. The president wants to continue in the new law the power now enjoyed by the executive to raise or lower duties. So does a majority in the house, in the opinion of republican leaders.

Now that the debenture plan has been placed in the bill, the general consensus is for a tussle to the finish in conference. Should the issue simplify down to a point where it was evident the bill would fail unless the republicans receded on either of the two propositions, it is believed the majority would take the minority substitute for the flexible provisions instead of the debenture. This, however, is something the future must decide.

Fourteen republicans and twenty-eight democrats joined today in supporting the Norris debenture rider, while thirty-one republicans and three democrats voted against it. Two republicans who voted against the principle in the farm bill contest—Stutling of New Mexico, and Thomas of Idaho—cast their lot Saturday with the debentures. Senator Kendrick, Wyoming, who was paired for debenture last Many, voted against it along with Senators Wagner, New York, and Walsh, Massachusetts.

The Vote on Debenture. Senator King, democrat, Utah, paired against it before was paired for it today. The roll call follows: For debenture, republicans: Borah, Brookhart, Cutting, Frazier, Howell, Johnson, LaFollette, McMaster, Norbeck, Norris, Nye, Pine, Seball, and Thomas of Idaho—14. Democrats: Ashurst, Barkley, Black, Bratton, Brook, Broussard, Caraway, Connally, Dill, Fletcher, George, Harris, Harrison, Hawes, Hayden, Heflin, McKellar, Overman, Pittman, Robinson of Arkansas, Thomas of Oklahoma, Trammell, Walsh of Montana and Wheeler—28. Total for 42.

Against debenture, democrats: Kendrick, Wagner, Walsh of Massachusetts—3. Republicans: Allen, Bingham, Capper, Couzens, Gillette, Goldsborough, Gould, Greene, Hale, Hastings, Herbert, Jones, Keam, Krivos, McNary, Metcalf, Moses, Oddie, Patterson, Phillips, Reed, Robinson of Indiana, Sackett, Shortridge, Snoot, Steiwer, Townsend, Vandenberg, Walcott, Warren and Watson—31. Total against, 34.

What Norris Plan Provides. The Norris plan is different from that issue in the farm bill debate in that it would guard against speculation in the certificates by permitting the secretary of the treasury to redeem them at not less than 98 per cent of their face value. The certificates would be issued by the treasury on recommendation of the federal farm board whenever, in the board's opinion, the farmers were entitled to them. They would be issued only on exports and in an amount equal to half the tariff on similar imported products.

They also would be issuable on exports of products manufactured from farm commodities and in the case of cotton, on which there is no duty, the debenture would be two cents a pound. The debentures would be receivable at their face value by any customs collector in payment of articles imported by the debenture holder. To discourage overproduction of a commodity on which the debenture has been operative the plan provides a graduated scale of debenture reductions which production shall have increased more than 20 per cent. Senator Brookhart, who had a substitute plan whereby the issuance of debentures would be made mandatory and not left to the opinion of the farm board, withdrew his proposal before the conference adjourned, if necessary, he would offer it later. Commenting on the vote, Senator Harrison, Mississippi, said that the president could "not afford to veto the tariff bill because of the adoption of the debenture amendment."—State Journal.

Double Guards for County Jail at Lamar, Colo. LaMar, Colo.—Following close on the burning of a fiery cross before the residence of Alfred Todd, associated with I. W. Cunningham in the defense of Ralph Fleagle, bank bandit, a farmer's story indicating the possible presence in the vicinity of Lamar of armed outlaws has led to doubling the guards at the jail where Fleagle is held. Friday night Lamar was treated to a sensation in connection with the bank bandit trials when the cross, apparently soaked with gasoline, was ignited before Todd's home. A car, loaded with men wearing no regalia, was seen to drive away as the flames ate at the cross. Todd holds jointly with J. C. Underwood the office of county attorney. Both men are on the legal staff chosen by Cunningham, a Colorado Springs resident and a judge on the old state circuit court of appeals, to defend Fleagle, the last of the bank bandits to go on trial in the Powers county district court on a charge of slaying A. N. Parrish, president of the First National bank at Lamar. In this case the district attorney, not the county officer prosecutes.

Held Up by Band of Men. Saturday night Charles Oswald, a farmer living ten miles northwest of here, told Sheriff Alderman that he had been held up near here by three carloads of men, apparently all armed, who quizzed him closely as to the strength of the jail where Fleagle is held and the number of guards surrounding it. Fleagle will go on trial Tuesday for his life on the first degree murder charge. Monday Byron G. Rogers, chief of defense counsel in the trials of George J. Absher and Howard L. Royston—both sentenced to die for their part in the holdup of the bank—will argue for new trials before Judge A. F. Hollenbeck in the district court. Rogers alleges numerous errors in the conduct of the two trials, and has announced that he will take an appeal to the state supreme court, if he is unable to obtain new trials. Fleagle also will be brought into court Monday, when three new state witnesses in addition to those used in the Absher and Royston trials, will be endorsed on the information charging him with murder.—State Journal.
