Rheumatic Pains, Indigestion Gone

"After 20 years suffering the Sargon treatment took right hold of my case, fixed me up in fine shape and I'm feeling just great."

FRED F. FOUNTAIN

"Constipation and indigestion gradually grew worse with me, and finally, I went through a course of treatments that gave me some temporary relief, but nothing lasting. Then rheumatism came on and my left knee hurt so bad I could hardly walk. A few weeks ago I started Sargon with Sargon Pills, and I'll tell anybody this is a wonderful treatment! My appetite is fine now, my indigestion is over and every rheumatic pain in my body is gone! Sargon Pills regulated me perfectly, toned up my liver and rid my whole system of poisons."—Fred F. SUES OFFICER FOR $30,000

Lincoln, Dec. 9.—Irwin Reed of Marshall county, Kansas, put a price of $30,000 in federal court Monday on the alleged humiliation of arrest by an officer who was without a warrant.

He filed suit for that amount against Sheriff Roy E. Avery of Pawnee City. He avers that the officer stopped him on the highway that forms the Kansas-Nebraska line. Without a warrant, the petition states, Avery took Reed to the county jail and lodged him there an hour. The purported arrest occurred in front of Reed's own home.

Bess Streeter Aldrich, Writer of Pioneer Life

Gifted Elmwood Lady Outstanding in State Literary Life in Her Western Stories

Bess Streeter Aldrich—author home maker, mother—now steps forth as distinguished Nebraska citizen, by virtue of the Lincoln Kiwanis club awarded to her conferred Friday noon, says the State Journal. Mrs. Aldrich was chosen for this honor because of what she has done thru her writings to make Nebraska more favorably known both to its own people and others. An Iowa by birth, she has absorbed the Nebraska tradition and atmosphere thru many years and made them her own. In turn she has portrayed them so ably and interestingly as to give the reading world a more accurate idea of Nebraska than it might otherwise have.

Countless men and women have been touched by the keen and tireless interest of Mrs. Aldrich in the pioneers who brought their civilization and ideals into the midwestern prairies. Expressing her admiration for these early day adventures in freedom and prosperity thru her books, she has taught others to remember what they had always known but tended to forget—the debt of Nebraska to its first settlers. No one can read the story of Abbie Deal without sharing her creator's feeling for her, and for the prairie wives and mothers she typified. Not the least of Mrs. Aldrich's rewards are the appreciative words of reviewers in distant sections, who have seen what she was working for and have praised her achievement. One eastern critic, for instance, said: "We have crossed Nebraska many times and were always glad to pass over what seemed to us just a dry, monotonous plain. After this we shall view Nebraska with different eyes—the eyes of Abbie Deal."

Hugh Fullerton, the syndicate writer, said: "Mrs. Aldrich has done a big thing for her state. Outsiders will understand the people of that section better because of her books."

It was this sentiment that led Lincoln Kiwanians to choose Mrs. Aldrich as the recipient of their medal. This, and a feeling that flowers are more appreciated by the living than by those who no longer can see them. Once before this distinction has gone to a woman, the late Carrie B. Raymond, recognized leader of musical development in Lincoln for many years. In the company stand Charles H. Morrill, friend and benefactor of the university; J. E. Miller, merchant and city builder; George Holdrege, railroad builder and first aid to the homesteader; Colonel Majors, a pioneer himself; Samuel Avery, chancellor of the university for nineteen years; and A. L. Bixby, newspaper columnist and poet. Their common bond is a love for their state, a devotion to its highest interests.

A Memorial Novel!

The story of this Nebraska writer's life and work is set forth in a little brochure reprinted from the Transcript, from which some excerpts follow:

"Ever present in the memory and imagination of Mrs. Aldrich were pictures of days when her grand mothers and grandfathers were pioneers; when they traveled over the lonely trails in arduous and unadorned ways and hardship with undaunted courage. For years she planned to write a novel which should be a memorial to her mother and other pioneer women of Iowa and Nebraska. After the erection of the monument in Oklahoma to the Pioneer Mother, Mrs. Aldrich's long cherished desire began to grow. She would raise a literary monument to such women, typified by her own mother and supplemented by tales of those early days from the reminiscences of other families. She asked over the radio, for extracts from journals and letters, for family traditions, and she received many responses; so that, in a way, "A Lantern in Her Hand" became a composite work of daughters of pioneers.

"For fourteen months she gathered material for this memorial story. When she was ready to write, what more fitting title than that selected by Joyce Kilmer:

Because the road was steep and long
And thru a dark and lonely land,
God set upon my lips a song
And put a lantern in my hand
"Abbie McKenzie Deal, clasping in her arms the calfskin covered box brought by the schooner wagon to Cedartown, is the ancestress of the author, with a few adaptations."

The same critic describes Mrs. Aldrich as a romantic realist and praises the bubbling humor of her creative work. Three qualities defining her work as a novelist are given as sincerity, sympathy and humor. "The first never becomes preachment, the second is sanely balanced by insight and knowledge of

PROTEST A PRICE ADVANCE

New York—The board of directors and the newspaper committee of the American Newspaper Publishers association Monday night announced they had decided to inform newspaper manufacturers that they see no justification for an increase in the price of newspaper paper. A resolution was adopted directing the officers of the A. N. P. A. to "take up with federal authorities the question as to whether there is any redress open in this situation thru federal government action."

Called upon by the president to voice their opinions of the proposed increase in newspaper price, the publishers were unanimous in declaring that the present rate of $5 a ton was adequate for the manufacturers.
