Game Wardens Catch Luckless Hunters Sunday

Many From Omaha and Nearby Hunting Without Licenses Are Captured

From Monday's Daily—Wardens representing the fish and game department of the state had a busy time yesterday afternoon at the Platte river bridge north of this city when they staged a roundup of the hunters who might be engaged in the sport of rabbit hunting or other shooting without the formality of having secured a license from the state of Nebraska.

The wardens stopped a large number of cars that were traveling across the bridge and found that there was a very large number of the drivers and occupants of the cars that had been out hunting without securing the necessary license. Under the operation of the new law the wardens took possession of the guns of the luckless hunters and the game as well in cases where they had any in their possession.

One of the cars stopped was found to have a fine young pig concealed beneath the seat of the car and which was discovered to have been shot out on the Platte bottom by the hunters who had been out hunting without the necessary license. The pig was taken away. After the discovery by the wardens of the pig, the hunters proceeded back to the farm near where they had shot the pig and proceeded to make settlement in full with the owner of the hog.

The wardens were operating both here and at Louisville and as the result of their activities they secured a large array of violators of the game law as well as unearthing one driver of an auto who was without a drivers license.

At the two places there were seventy cars stopped and 201 hunters found who had a game bag of 1,193 rabbits shot here in Cass county.

The wardens operating at Louisville also found hunters in possession of pheasants upon which there is no open season in this county.

The wardens who were conducting the work at the bridge here were C. E. Hasbinger, Loren Bunney and Frank DeFry.

This morning the county court was crowded with the various hunters that had been gathered into the dragnet of the game wardens, there being fourteen against whom complaint was filed and these with their friends made a very formidable court room full of visitors.

The hearings in the court took place practically all forenoon and a part of the early afternoon.

P. L. Wright of Louisville received a fine of $25 and costs this covering the possession of a turtle dove. Jack and James Gresham of Omaha were each fined $15 and costs for hunting without a license and in failure to pay the same were remanded to the county jail. F. E. Nemetz was also given a fine of $15 for no hunting license while Art Dyke, well known baseball player of Omaha, who was charged with the possession of two pheasants, received an additional $10 for each bird, this being set by the law.

The other cases are being disposed of this afternoon in the court.

MANY SIGHTSEERS HERE

The fine weather conditions that prevailed Sunday brought many here from counties in this part of Nebraska as well as western Iowa to visit the new Missouri river bridge, despite the poor road facilities that exist in getting to and from the bridge. The bridge had a record of travel over it the greater part of the day and everyone was delighted with the fine span that now crosses the river and makes travel by car much more pleasant and saving a long distance in going to Omaha or Nebraska City to cross the river. The late afternoon sun suffered some inconvenience when the roadway that had been used was closed off and made necessary using another route over Wintersteen hill and which had a number of very bad places in it.

The road work, however, has been going on very nicely the past week and will soon be settled with the completion of the grading, the smoothing up and surfacing of the highway and the placing of the guard rail along the curves that are very numerous at this very picturesque and scenic drive.

Fire Late Saturday Night Wipes Out Elliott Home

Residence of Leroy Elliott in South Portion of the City Is Burned to the Ground

The residence in the extreme south portion of the city, occupied by the Leroy Elliott family was burned to the ground late Saturday evening and but for the fact that neighbors discovered the blaze and aroused Mr. Elliott and son, Everett, who were alone at the house, they too would have lost their lives in the blaze as they had to flee from the room where they were sleeping, with the brands from the blazing roof falling in the room.

The fire was thought to have originated from the chimney and early in the evening shortly after 7 o'clock a small place was burned in the roof near the chimney and which was discovered and put out by Mr. Elliott and his son. They had remained at the home and kept a constant watch for any further outbreak of fire and at 9:30 they had retired, only to be aroused shortly after 11 o'clock by the calls of neighbors and to discover the roof of the house in a blaze.

With the aid of the neighbors and those first on the scene, some of the effects from two of the rooms were saved, but the personal effects of the family were largely destroyed in the blaze.

The residence is beyond the protection of the city water system and the blaze had progressed so rapidly that the use of chemicals on the fire was useless and the structure was entirely destroyed and only a heap of glowing embers was left in a few hours after the blaze is first discovered shooting up over the roof of the house.

The house and contents were partially insured but this will not cover the loss to the Elliott family in their household effects.

NO HUNTING LICENSE

From Wednesday's Daily—Omahaus who made the mistake of shooting a farmers pig, near this city, may confine their shooting to target practice with an air rifle during 1930.

O. Brown, Jack and James Grisham make application. The four were nabbed on the Platte river bridge and were returned to this city where they paid for the pig and paid a fine as well.

Jack and James Grisham are still in jail here as they failed to pay the fines assessed against them by Judge Duxbury.

County Roads Now Getting in Good Shape

Maintainers Take Advantage of the Fine Weather to Place Roads in Good Condition

From Tuesday's Daily—The extremely fine weather that has made this past two weeks a record breaker in Nebraska for warm and springlike days, has proved a real boon to the road maintaining force of the county and one that has allowed a great deal of the roughness of the roads to be overcome.

Commissioner Parley has had the maintaining force out in this vicinity in looking after the highway and roads and as the result the route of highway No. 75, which has been torn up preparatory to the paving program, has been placed in excellent shape and permitting travel over the old roadway into this city from the end of the paving, the road having been smoothed up and the gravel surfacing replaced for the winter season until spring will permit the resumption and completion of the paving from the south into this city and north to the Platte river bridges.

This will be very pleasing to the residents of the community who have found it difficult in getting in and out of the city without the necessity of a very long detour and the action of the state department of public works and the commissioner in general for the work on the road is to be commended.

FORMER RESIDENT HERE

The January issue of the "American" magazine contains a very interesting story of the life work of Lawrence Harley Whiting, one of the leaders of the younger millionaires of the nation. The chief interest here is the fact that he was born in this city in 1899, but was only six months old when his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Whiting removed from here to Wyoming and later to Kentucky and his graduation in the younger Whiting first made his real start in life and from Peru, Indiana, where his father was engaged in building electric railroads, he entered the University of Chicago. A great business career awaited the son following his graduation and in the world he was one of the heads of the work of preparing the cantonments for the national army and later was a member of the finance department of the A. E. F.

To revert, however, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Whiting themselves had a home in the eighties and first made their home on Wintersteen bill, the husband being engaged in the grocery business with Will Wheeler, but the great railroad strike of 1888 ruined their business and the elder Whiting took up his occupation of farming and which was his occupation until after leaving this city.

Lawrence Harley Whiting was born in the residence property on Granite street now occupied by Mrs. John Weyrich and family and here some two years ago Mr. Whiting came to view the location of his nativity and to carry away a few snapshots of the home which was once his for a few months.

Check of Illegal Hunters Totals A Large Sum

Fines and Costs Total $196.05 in the County Court as Result of Visit of Wardens

From Tuesday's Daily—The visit here of the representatives of the state game warden's office on Sunday resulted in a very neat sum being paid over in fines and costs to the various cases that were developed as the result of the checkup of hunters and out of 201 hunters interviewed by the wardens eight were found to have violated the game laws in some manner and one person unearthing, that had failed to comply with the state law requiring the driver of a motor vehicle to have a license.

The long stream of protests over the reckless practice of hunters from the larger places visiting the countryside here on Sundays and making life a nightmare to the farmers, resulted in the coming of the wardens and who made a check of the hunters from the cities by having a watch kept on the bridges over the Platte and Louisville bridges over the Platte river.

The list of the fines levied under the state law for various violations in the court were as follows: Jack and James Grisham of Omaha, were given fines of $15 and costs each for failure to have a license and also made a restitution for a hog that he had shot at the William Hunter farm west of this city. These two men were sent to jail in failure to pay the fine.

Orval M. Goodman, fined $5 and costs for driving a car without a license. H. Stevens of Omaha, possession of two pheasants, shot out of season, $25 and costs and $10 each for the birds. A. U. Barton, Omaha, $15 and costs for no hunting license. Art Dyke, Omaha, possession of two pheasants, shot out of season, $25 and costs and $10 for each bird. Frank E. Nemetz, $15 and costs for no hunting license. C. L. Wright, Louisville, one turtle dove shot out of season, $25 and costs and $10 for the bird.

The total of the fines and costs was $196.05 and which was a very costly venture for the hunters for their Sunday invasion of the farming communities.

ENJOY CHRISTMAS PARTY

The Riverview club members and families enjoyed Christmas evening at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Potts.

The home was nicely decorated, a large Christmas tree standing in the dining room gave things a very Christmas like appearance, each guest bringing with them a present which was placed on the tree.

The evening was spent in playing games. Everyone joined in the fun making and a very good program was given which was enjoyed. As the name of each guest was called they were presented with some gift. The weather being very cold and road conditions bad, kept many from attending, although some forty guests attended this pleasant event.

At the close of the evening refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Major Hall, Wilma Potts and Thelma Hutcheson. The guests departed, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Potts for their hospitality and feeling that the evening had been well spent.

James Stander Teacher of the Bible 45 Years

Notable Record of Service in Sunday School for Distinguished Louisville Man

Few laymen have a record of interrupted service to the church as has James Stander of Louisville, Neb., as the sketch in the magazine section of the World-Herald Sunday tells. Mr. Stander has taught Sunday school in the Methodist Episcopal church in Louisville for 45 years. At one period during that time he established a record of six and one-half years' continuous attendance without a single break. Every time there was a session of Sunday school in that time, Mr. Stander was there to conduct it.

Mr. Stander is a native of Cass county. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stander, who came to Cass county in 1858. He was born on a farm there on February 19, 1862, and has lived continuously in the same precinct ever since. He was born on Section 35, reared on Section 34 and now lives on Section 22, that portion of the county on which the town of Louisville was established in 1862.

Mr. Stander is a successful business man. He owns about 19 thousand acres of land and in addition manages a hardware-furniture and real estate business. While his vocation has brought him in a considerable fortune, his avocation has made definite demands on that fortune. When finances are running low in any religious or philanthropic or educational activity in connection with the Methodist Episcopal church, Mr. Stander can be counted upon to go into his pocket and quietly and unobtrusively meet the deficit. On a conservative estimate, this gentle, soft spoken man estimates that he has expended about 50 thousand dollars along these lines.

It is doubtful if any Sunday school knows his Sunday school lessons as well as Mr. Stander does. He is never separated from these lessons. He reads and interprets them in his leisure moments, so as to be the better prepared to give a vivid exposition each Sunday.

Mr. Stander's activity limit itself to this teaching. He travels extensively attending state, sectional and national and international Sunday school meetings. In 1904 he made a trip to the Palestine with a group of Sunday school workers. So well had he studied his map before making this trip that he had visualized in advance just what that land of religious antiquity would look like. He spent three weeks in Palestine, and 17 days in Jerusalem and so zealously did he expound the scriptures during those 17 days, that he became as familiar with that city as with his own town of Louisville.

That trip in 1904 lasted four months. During his life time Mr. Stander has visited 22 foreign countries and has attended Sunday school meetings in 48 states of the union. Mr. Stander is himself a bachelor. He is one of 14 children, 11 of whom are still living, eight sons and three daughters. He has a flock of nieces and nephews, two of his nephews being enrolled at the present time in his Sunday school class.

During his period of service to the Louisville M. E. Sunday school, Mr. Stander has seen more than one thousand young people pass through his classes. They range in ages from 15 to 18 years. He has taught many young folks who are, themselves, now parents, and whose children are now attending the same Sunday school. Indeed, Mr. Stander is prepared to carry on to the third generation as his interest, physical vigor and enthusiasm remain undimmed.

CHANGING OFFICES

The office arrangements of the third floor of the court house are being adjusted with Sheriff Bert Reed and District Judge James T. Begley making a "swap" of office rooms. Sheriff Reed will have the present private office of Judge Begley at the south end of the corridor, while Judge Begley will take the present sheriff's office at the southeast corner of the building, this opening off the library and will be more convenient for the Judge as well as more privacy as the visitors at the sheriff's office now have to go through the library to reach the office. The room between the present sheriff's office and that of the clerk of the district court will be used as the office of the district court reporter.

The rooms are to be touched up and Jack Brittain and son Earl, are preparing to make the rooms bright and attractive for the new occupants.
