Is this weather cool enough to suit you?

A lot of those speakers in the Senate are loud, but not dynamic—Just full of static.
Another trouble with the world is too much face and not enough baking powder sold.

Go to work, Mr. Hoover tells the people. Go to work, the people shout back at Congress.

The reason men no longer strike matches on their pants is because modern pants won't stand it.

Some of the half-long skirts look as if they were designed to match the half-long hair in ugliness.

Don't start the anvil chorus against Congress until it seems justifiable. Give the boys one more chance.

As far as the wet and dry question is concerned, 1930 looks like the year of the big wind—blustery palaver eh?

The scales used to be the symbol of law and justice. The modern spirit, however, is better expressed by the padlock.

Another thing that we are sure of is that if there were an East and West Pole Admiral Byrd would fly over them.

Perhaps the man who quit a job at the Philadelphia mint after 64 years finally got tired of saving to start a mint of his own.

After a few years of married life a wife's birthday gets to be just something else a husband gets bawled out for forgetting.

A period of icy pavements is one of the few remaining things in which motorists and pedestrians alike may take an interest.

The flappers' skirts have shrank to almost nothing, but, believe it or not, their undie skirts have done even a bigger job of shrinking.

Alimony is a $10,000,000 a year industry and the outlook for an active season is good.

Apparently women who spend their energies pursuing the whim of fashion are in for a good lining.

The Balkan States of Europe are buying increased amounts of United States automotive rubber goods.

The golden wedding anniversary is the day set aside for celebrating payment of the last installment on the wedding ring.

Between spasms of praising California climate those annual football broadcasters once in a while mentioned the game.

Wife of a Massachusetts Mayor lost a $15,000 bar pin when attending a policemen's ball. That made her a plain-clothes woman.

It might be wise to remember in investing that the bottom may drop out of a market, but it seldom falls away from a house and lot.

One of the penalties of prosperity is that every time a man spends a dollar for this his wife turns around and spends a dollar for that.

And the long-feathered wing-tip, which used to do service as a duster around the house long after the festive occasion was forgotten?

Nice sense of distinction is exhibited by a Chicago apartment landlord who has refused to lease to "musicians and saxophone players."

The law-makers should not tear their shirts over any of the pending problems, even though they have a haberdasher within their membership.

Co-operative marketing associations are beginning to feel the inspiration handed out by the Farm Aid commission in form of drafts on the treasury.

If a wife thinks her husband is something the Lord provided to earn money for a woman to spend you can bet your last nickel that her idea of a wife isn't something the Lord provided to cook, scrub and mend for a man.

DISARMAMENT AND REGULATION

In bidding our delegation to the London naval parity farewell Mr. Hoover asks us to be patient with the progress of the conference, which he thinks would do very well to accomplish anything in less than three or four months.

The country must also bear in mind that the chief objective of the parity is the regulation of war vessels rather than immediate disarmament. The Washington conference of 1921 contented itself with the regulation of capital ships. The London conference will attempt to add cruisers, destroyers and submarines to the category of regulated craft. The most encouraging feature of the conference to begin in London this month is that after nine years' experience with the regulation of capital ships the naval powers of the world should be disposed to extend the same regulation to lesser war vessels. Mr. Hoover says the conference begins in a fine atmosphere of international good will, and in that respect it has an advantage over the Washington conference. If the Washington conference, which was far from enjoying an atmosphere at the outset, could regulate major war craft, the London conference should be able more easily to do something about the as yet unregulated lesser war craft.

Mr. Hoover says this is the most important of international conferences in a great many years, as it probably is also the most important for years to come. That is true in the respect that what can be done about little fighting ships has never been formally discussed among nations. It probably presents difficulties not encountered by the Washington conference. That is, the 5-5-3 ratio to which Great Britain, the United States and Japan agreed in 1921 was not a matter in which either the French or the Italians, both regulated by the same conference at 1.75, were greatly interested. Their interest is in their own territorial waters and the Mediterranean, and in those waters the lesser fighting craft are necessarily more important than they are on the open seas. Both France and Italy therefore assume a stature at London which they did not enjoy at Washington, and to satisfy either is going to be one of the chief difficulties of the conference.

As for the conference itself, its significance to civilization could hardly be exaggerated. The President points out that "the importance and gravity of the occasion have been recognized by dispatch to London of the leading men of every country." Indeed, the conference approximates a focus of the best intelligence of our time upon earth's profoundest problem. The cost of war, and the cost of those great armaments which all the nations maintain in fear of one another, runs into a staggering total. The economist cannot help contemplating the things in human betterment which might be accomplished with all that wealth. Mr. Hoover himself has expressed this thought in telling us that 72 cents of every dollar we pay the Government goes for war. Such a gathering as that now assembling at London is the nearest approach history has known to that international society which Aristide Briand, whom Ramsay MacDonald has characterized as having a "passion for peace," has said is the only foundation upon which real amity can ever be built. It gets the world, with all its fears and suspicions, its dreams and its aspirations, around the council table. Only in that intimate relationship can trust conquer distrust, as within that limited circle alone can wisdom at last dispel folly.

Mr. Hoover says the nations participating in the conference have the will to bring about an end to competition in construction of naval arms and so lessen the burden of these great armaments upon themselves. If they persist in that will they cannot disappoint him, however great the difficulty and however tedious the way.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SLIM PICKING FOR THE BIRDS
Plattsmouth and vicinity now are host to many species of birds, which enliven the wintry scene. These birds are able to withstand the cold, and ordinarily their foragings yield enough food to sustain them. But snow and sleet, particularly the latter, cut off the food supply and are likely to take a heavy toll of feathered life. A sleet storm covers the ground and coats trees and bushes so the birds cannot get their usual food supply.

A few crumbs and scraps from the table, scattered in the back yard, will bring relief at a time when, in the words of the lamented Briggs, "a feller needs a friend." Birds of many species will gather to such a feast, and watching them as they feed will repay one for the slight trouble. Let's feed the birds.

NOISE AND YET MORE NOISE

Each step in human progress has increased the world's output of noise. Only the occasional roar of a mammoth and the sigh of ancient winds disturbed the primordial calm until man came along and began chipping flints, beating drums and shouting tribal chants. Gunpowder brought new efficiency to the hunt and the battle, attaining its perfection in deep-throated artillery which can reduce the stoutest nerves to quavering shell shock. The industrial revolution introduced the crash and clangor of machinery to pastoral landscapes. Dray horses jolted over cobblestones until the motor truck thundered along and drowned out their clamor. Man's first ventures aloft were in noiseless gas balloons, but now the air is given over to the plane with its familiar reverberations. Radio is another great milestone, and adds its din to the general cacophony. The motion picture takes a stride forward with sound effects, making the film theater altogether useless for the whispered confidences of lovers.

The jarring riveter supplants the patient stonemason, the limited express roars where poney express hoofs were thudded, the printing press sings a thunderous symphony unknown in the copyist's day. All items of progress, then; each swept on the stage with a shrieking crescendo of new noises.

Now, when our prophets tell us that new mechanical marvels are to come, the world can only hope that nerves and ear drums will stand the strain of progress.

Cards are supposed to be a form of amusement, but after a bad session at the bridge table with his wife, you can't make a man believe they are anything but a casual belief.
