Yes, we make it for you as you want it, or tell you how to make it yourself.

Guy Rood and family, of near Burr, where they make their home, were visiting for the day last Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Anderson.

On Monday of this week Jess Dodson moved to the forty acres which he has recently purchased east of Nehawka and where the family will make their home.

Albert Wolfe and daughter, Miss Gladys, were visiting and looking after some business matters in Omaha last Monday, they driving over to the big town in their car.

R. M. Taylor, who has resided on the place which Jess Dodson purchased, late last week moved to the tenant house on the Henry M. Pollard farm northeast of Nehawka.

Burl W. Woodrum, of Neligh, was compelled to stop for a while and have his Model T Ford repaired, as a loose connecting rod got away and went through the block of his motor.

The two Misses Vanhorn, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Vanhorn, were kept from school on account of having the measles, they however are getting along very nicely with the malady.

Albert Anderson and family were guests for the day last Sunday and remained for over Monday, they visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Anderson and family, the boys being brothers.

Mr. Hall Pollard is reported as being very ill at her home southwest of Nehawka. Mrs. C. D. St. John is caring for the patient and this is an absolute guarantee that she is getting the best of care.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy, of Omaha, were visitors in Nehawka for the day on Tuesday, they being guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Fulton, Mrs. Hardy being a niece of Mrs. Fulton, which insured all enjoying a very good visit.

One car load of gravel is being used in Nehawka to maintain the excellent condition of the streets about town which have previously been treated to this sort of improvement and which will keep them in the best of shape for a long time to come.

C. D. St. John and family, R. D. Taylor and family and Eugene Nutzman and family found time last Sunday to journey to the neighborhood of Iowa point, which is east of Union and a little south, where they enjoyed the day, and also a fine picnic dinner which they took along.

Mrs. James W. Magney, who makes her home in Lincoln at this time, and where she has been for some time, was a visitor in Nehawka for over the week end, and was a guest of Mrs. Edna Tucker, the ladies being friends for many years. Mrs. Magney visited with other of her friends also while in Nehawka.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Noell, residing west of Murray and north of Nehawka entertained at their home last Friday evening and had some of their friends as their guests and a most pleasant time was had, with all on their departing for their homes wishing that the time would soon come again when they should gather under this hospitable roof.

Receives Severe Injury

While working about the stable and with the trusty horses which had been gentle and never kicked since man could remember, E. C. Giles had the misfortune to receive a kick from the very gentlest horse, which broke his nose and lacerated his face and cheek very badly. He also received some injury and when he had been patched up, looked like he had been out to an Irish wake or a Bohemian ball. He is getting along very nicely now, however.

A Good Looking Bunch

The Senior class of the Nehawka High school journeyed to Lincoln last Saturday, where they presented themselves to one of the leading photographers and had their pictures taken. They were a happy bunch and at the same time a group of pretty girls and handsome young men. You will see when they have received the pictures, which will represent the graduating class of the Nehawka High school for the year 1930.

Enjoyed Family Gathering

On last Sunday, at the home of Robert Troop and wife, living north of Nehawka, and west of Mynard, was gathered many of the relatives of this popular couple, when they all enjoyed one of the finest of dinners as well as a most pleasant visit. There were there for the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Troop and Mrs. Mary Voodrie of Plattsmouth, W. O. Troop and family of north of Nehawka; Victor Wehrlein and wife, of west of Murray and Mr. and Mrs. William Gordier and their little daughter, of Plattsmouth.

Good Roads the Watchword

The three mile strip north of Nehawka on the detour, which was created last year while paving was being done on U. S. 75, was given another coating of gravel last week, thus preserving this excellent strip of roadway running into Nehawka, and at the same time making a good cross country short line to the Omaha and South Omaha markets.

The Devil May Care

Another excellent show was given at the Nehawka auditorium on last Saturday night, and was attended by a large and greatly interested audience. The management of the hall and shows are to be congratulated for the excellence of the shows which they are getting. Remember night, "So This is College." It has the show for the coming Saturday a very fun provoking cast. Talking, dancing and singing. Also "Hotter than Red Hot Potatoes," a fine comedy. Better be there and see it.

Henry Pollard, Nehawka Pioneer, Called to Reward

Member of One of Best Known Families of Eastern Nebraska Dies Last Night

Henry M. Pollard, one of the group of sturdy men and women that came west from the Green Mountain state of Vermont, many years ago and settled at Nehawka, passed away last night at 7:30 following an illness of some duration. Mr. Pollard had been at Omaha taking treatment for some time but recently returned home and had gradually failed until death came to end his long life.

Henry Pollard was born July 25, 1868, near Ludlow, Vermont, and spent his more youthful years in the old New England home, later coming west to Nebraska where in pioneer days relatives of the Pollard and Sheldon family had settled in the vicinity of Nehawka. Mr. Pollard has largely made his home in this community since that time and was married at Nehawka to Miss Mollie Switzer and following their marriage they made their home on the farm near that place for many years. Mrs. Pollard and one son, George M. Pollard, merchant at Avoca, survive the passing of this highly esteemed gentleman, as well as one brother, Ernest, and one sister, Clara, both living at Ludlow, Vermont.

Mr. Pollard has been a member of Nehawka lodge of the Mel and the I. O. O. F. and Rebekahs at that place for many years and active in the work of the three orders.

The funeral services will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 from the late home. The Masonic lodge of Nehawka will have the ritual services at the grave for the departed friend and brother.

KONJOLA ENDS SEVEN YEARS OF SUFFERING

Grateful Lady, Again Well and Happy, Gives High Praise to New Master Medicine

MRS. GEORGE O. DRYSDALE

"I want to tell you what Konjola has done for me," said Mrs. George O. Drysdale, 1606 Fifty-seventh street, Kenosha, Wis. "I had suffered for seven years with liver and stomach trouble. Liver patches appeared on my face and neck. I had had dizzy spells, one after another. My stomach was so disordered that nothing I ate seemed to do me any good. My appetite was very poor, and I lost weight, strength and vitality.

"When I read that cases similar to mine were being treated successfully with Konjola, I decided to try it. Much to my surprise, Konjola went right to the causes of my trouble. I have taken five bottles and am now in perfect health. My complexion has cleared up; my appetite is good; I sleep well, and can eat anything I want without discomfort. I have gained back my lost weight, and I certainly am happy.

"Each of Konjola's 32 ingredients—22 of them the juices of roots and herbs of medicinal value—has a special duty to perform on the ailing organs. Many who have given it a fair trial (six to eight bottles) have declared there is no other medicine like it.

"Konjola is sold in Plattsmouth by Maury Drug Company, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Rationalization of World Trade is Successful

Conference on Unemployment Held by League of Nations Union—Workmen Displaced

London, April 3.—Politicians, industrialists, trade union leaders and economists discussed the effects of rationalization on industry at a three days' conference on "World Aspects of Unemployment" held here recently under the auspices of the League of Nations Union, and attended by members of the International Labor office from Geneva.

Harold B. Butler, Deputy Director of the International Labor office, said that unemployment was inevitable in the early stages of rationalization, but that it was followed by expansion. As an example of the success of rationalizing industry, he quoted the case of the Ruhr mines.

"Without any increase in hours, the Ruhr produced last year 10,292,000 tons of coal per month, as against 3,695,000 tons in 1928, while the number of men employed had fallen from 411,000 to 354,000. Eighty-five per cent of the coal was now mined by mechanical methods."

Mr. Butler described as a "dangerous exaggeration" the argument that a solution of the international currency problem would of itself automatically regulate employment. He also emphasized the importance of close co-operation during rationalization between employers and employees in working out schemes of reorganization as had been witnessed in the American clothing trade, and the Saar mines, and as advocated in the Mond-Turner conference.

Sir Oswald Mosley, one of the ministers in charge of unemployment in the British government, said that a long-term program of rationalization, which everyone admitted to be necessary, would be accompanied by a short-term program of constructive works for the unemployed.

Lord Eustace Percy, Education Minister in the late Conservative Government, urged the necessity for the formation by industry, within itself and in co-operation with the technical colleges, of a read education policy for boys and girls between the ages of 14 and 18.

There must, continued Lord Eustace Percy, also be rationalization of the methods of the recruitment of manual labor from the schools.

There was a tendency on the part of employers to advertise for young people and to pick them out from the streets six months or a year after they had left school.

Arthur Pugh, general secretary of the Iron and Steel Trades conference, said that Labor did not oppose rationalization when it was rightly conceived and applied with a true objective. In the iron and steel trade, however, where there had been a great increase in production since 1927, the number of workers employed had decreased, and the unemployment figures were now over 20 per cent, without taking account of short time.

"The scientific application of rationalization," concluded Mr. Pugh, "must cause temporary displacement, but what is now going on shows little evidence of plan or vision."

FUNERAL OF JOHN H. WILES

Last Thursday afternoon occurred the funeral of the late John H. Wiles at the Sattler funeral home, 4th and Vine streets, Plattsmouth. The husband and father having passed away last Tuesday night after but a short illness. All that loving hands and the best of medical attention could have been done. But the life of this dear one went out and returned to the Maker, leaving the hearts of his dear ones torn and sore. They realize though that the dear husband and father is only waiting for them on the other shore, for the time when he shall welcome the wife, mother and children, after the turmoil of this life is over.

John H. Wiles was born December 2, 1856, and passed this life on April 1, 1930. The Rev. W. A. Taylor, of Union speaking words of comfort to the bereft wife, mother and children. Raymond Cook sang two beautiful hymns, "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and "We are Going Down the Valley." Mrs. Roy Cole serving as accompanist.

The pall bearers were Ed Spangler, G. W. Minford, Ernest Shoemaker, Will Sporer, H. M. Soenichsen and J. A. Pitz. Interment was in the beautiful Horning cemetery south of Plattsmouth, where the dear body will sleep the sleep that is peaceful and which shall have its awakening in that other world where there is no more sickness, pain or death.

Seek Candidate to Beat Norris

Poll of Republican Voters Said to Have Disappointed—Both Parties Seeking Suitable Man

While politicians on both sides of the fence are busily engaged in the quest for "someone to beat Norris," there have been no developments as yet which point toward a solidification of his opponents either in the republican primary next August or at the November election.

Emerson R. Purcell of Broken Bow during the past week put a quietus on the talk of his coming out as a democratic candidate for senator. He said in a statement made to newspaper men at the capitol that "under no circumstances" will he run for that office. Mr. Purcell admitted that he had been approached by democratic friends on the matter, but he gave them to understand that they will have to look elsewhere.

In the meantime, the reported results of a secret poll taken among republican voters in a number of counties are said to have been disappointing to those who engineered it, in that the sentiment appeared to be strongly for Governor Weaver and somewhat indifferent toward S. R. McKelvie, member of the federal farm board, in connection of the senatorship. The supposed plan was to work up a boom for the latter and bring him into the race with a big blare of trumpets, as the national administration's candidate. If such was the purpose, it seems to have miscarried already.

Story Tellers at Work.

Among the many rumors in circulation is one that an Omaha banker had received $50,000 from Washington to be used in organizing Nebraska for an anti-Norris candidate for the senate. There has been a good deal of eager curiosity among s. o. p. workers in many counties as to the distribution of this fund, but thus far none of the money has been seen and the identity of the banker who was to supervise its expenditure has not been disclosed.

State Treasurer Stebbins and Lieutenant Governor Williams are both laying the foundation for their senatorial campaigns, with each one wishing that the other would pull out and give himself a clear field. Nobody takes seriously the candidacy of the Madison county octogenarian, Aaron Read, but he will at least scatter the anti-Norris vote in the primary.

Democratic leaders are up against it almost as badly as the republicans in hunting for somebody to run for senator. Their trouble is that Norris has attracted such a large democratic following because he supported Al Smith for president in 1928 and has been fighting the Hoover regime at Washington on nearly everything, as to make the outlook discouraging for a democrat who might have thought of running against him.

Among those who have shied away from the senatorial nomination on that ticket when their names were proposed are former Senator G. M. Hitchcock of Omaha, former Congressman A. C. Shallenberger of Alma, former Governor Charles W. Bryan of Lincoln, and Congressman John H. Morehead of Falls City. Bryan is expected to file for governor while Morehead and Shallenberger will try again for congress seats. Hitchcock is "out of politics" and enjoying himself in traveling and other private pursuits.

What Will Weaver Do?

The key position in Nebraska politics is undoubtedly held at present by Governor Weaver. He could, if he saw fit, run for re-election to the gubernatorial office with no opposition in his own party and an excellent prospect of winning in November. He may fit to enter the senatorial race, he would have formidable backing for that office. There are some who think he possesses sufficient personal and political strength to defeat Norris.

It is by no means certain, however, that Mr. Weaver will do either thing. He is not altogether enamored of public life and the constant turmoil of politics. He thinks more of his family and friends than he does of holding office. He has done absolutely nothing toward building up a personal organization to bring about his renomination and re-election, and he has given no encouragement to the talk of drafting him for senator. The impression is that he would just as soon turn over the business of government to other hands and go back to his home, his farms, orchards, and other interests at Falls City.

However, the G. O. P. politicians will not listen to anything of that kind. They regard Weaver as too big an asset to the party to let him retire in a year when the ticket will need all the votes it can get. With his name up at the top of the list they figure that Nebraska can be held in the Republican column this year; but without it they would not feel so confident. All kinds of pressure, therefore, will be brought to bear to persuade the governor not to follow his own inclination, but to stay with the ship and pilot it through the troubled waters.

Three Presidents Converse via Long Distance Phone

Hoover in Telephone Greetings to Ibanez of Chile and Compiegne of Uruguay.

Washington—Bridging an air gap of more than 5,000 miles over land and sea, President Hoover and the chief executives of Chile and Uruguay Thursday established telephone connections which inaugurated a new communications system between the North and South American continents. Just before diplomats and guests assembled at the cabinet room of the executive offices to listen in on the presidential conversation, President Yrigoyen of Argentina cabled Mr. Hoover that he was indisposed and could not adhere to plans for him to take part.

President Hoover spoke to President Carlos Ibanez, of Chile, at 11 a. m. He recalled his visit to that country two years ago, saying the reception accorded had been "inspiring and cordial."

Similar friendly greetings were exchanged between President Hoover and President Juan Campesguoy of Uruguay. Mr. Hoover spoke of "the increasingly numerous ties, created thru the co-operation of scientific endeavor and commercial necessities" between the two nations.

The program included exchanges of greetings by Joseph P. Cotton, acting secretary of state, and Ermosilla, Chilean minister of the interior and Rufino T. Dominguez, Uruguayan minister of foreign affairs. Cotton also spoke to John Campbell White, counselor of the American embassy in Buenos Aires, forming the only contact of the program between Washington and Buenos Aires.

Among guests who gathered in the cabinet room to hear the day's con-
