Slavs Showing Growing Signs of Improvement

Principal Cities Have New Factories, Railroads and Automobile Highways

Belgrade, Yugoslavia — Frequent visits to Yugoslavia leave the observer with the impression that in the realm of material improvements the country is steadily advancing. Since the South Slav people united in a state of their own they have gone ahead faster than ever before.

This is first of all evident in the larger cities, may be said that this country has five capitals, which are the economic and cultural centers of the chief racial groups, and practically all of them have grown remarkably during recent years. The chief one, Belgrade, has been completely transformed. It has wide, straight, well-paved streets, beautiful parks and a very large number of fine, new buildings. Skopje, too, the chief city in Macedonia, has been largely rebuilt, and though an old and famous place, has never before in its history, Zagreb, the principal city of the Croats, is also greatly enlarged and filled with very substantial and excellent modern buildings.

Electric light is being installed in a large number of places. New water systems are continually being created. The improvement in hygienic conditions is one of the most remarkable changes that has taken place in southeast Europe since the war. There has been a striking advance in methods of communications. Not only have a commendable number of new railroads been built, but a whole network of automobile roads has been constructed.

Every visitor also is struck by the large number of new factories which he finds in all parts of the country. A whole system of athletic parks has been created. Homes for rest and recreation have been placed in many a beautiful mountainous district.

All this is not the work of the dictatorship. It has not been accomplished in one year. It represents the fruits of the toil of the people through a whole decade. The dictatorship, however, has pushed all these projects with much vigor. At the end of the war the Serbs and some of the other south Slavs found very vital age-old dreams realized. They were all freed and united and given an outlet to make their own fatherland a good place to live in. And their efforts have not been in vain.

This pride of achievement has also been morally expressed, and there is an effort being made to strengthen discipline. Many scholarships are given to promising poor students. Chambers of Labor have brought some help to the workers. The temperance crusade is growing. The youth were never so well organized. Measures for the restriction of vice are rigorously applied. The movement against illiteracy is bearing fruit.

STATE CHEMIST TELLS OF TESTING LIQUORS

Lincoln, Neb., April 16.—Students of experience are Nebraska makers of illicit liquor, relates Lee J. Cramer, state chemist, who tells of a decided change in the quality of the hooch of today and that of five years ago.

Necessity, Cramer believes, is the motivating factor that has wrought a drastic change in these illicit methods and in the product. Within the past year, Cramer says, bootleg whisky tested in his laboratory, has been unusually free from poisonous substances, though in many instances hydrochloric acid and even fly has been used in the process of fermentation.

High acidity, however, is almost definite assurance that stomach complications, particularly ulcers, will afflict the constant user of any bootleg liquor, Cramer believes. From the standard of testing quality disclosed in sample after sample, the state chemist is led to believe the bulk of Nebraska consumed hooch is the product of the larger distilleries.

Most of the beer tested by the state chemist contains between 6 and 8 per cent alcohol, considerably over the content of the beer of the pre-World War era. Some is as high as 11 per cent.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT WINS

Berlin—The government of Chancellor Heinrich Brüning Monday carried its financial program against opposition. The votes were close in most instances, the government getting a majority of only four on the turnover tax and only six on the sugar tax bill. The agrarian program, which has developed much opposition heretofore, carried on the third and final reading by a vote of 250 to 204.

Another argument for retaining Muscle Shoals is that the American Cyanamid Co., spent $168,706 in efforts to lease it from the Government. That's what one private company thinks of it.

TALE OF UPRISING DENIED

Managua, Nicaragua.—Both American and Nicaraguan officials Wednesday denied with emphasis a report published Tuesday in the newspaper El Sol at Tegucigalpa, Honduras, to the effect that a revolutionary movement was in progress in this country. They said there was no foundation for the report.

The rumors had it that general Pedro Altamirano had taken control of the departments of Jinotega and Segovias and was threatening Matagalpa. But American marines and national guard commanders asserted their reports from the numerous outposts scattered in that northern sector of Nicaragua said that everything was quiet Wednesday. There are thirteen marine posts in that region and there is continuous radio and plane communication with the capital.

Bird Specimens in Chicago Area Put on Exhibit

Enlarged Photographs of Natural Habitats Provide Panoramic Background

Chicago—A systematic collection of all the birds in the Chicago region, comprising about 600 specimens, has been completed and the exhibit is now open to the public at the Chicago Academy of Sciences. The collection includes birds which have been within a 50-mile radius of Chicago during the last 75 years, according to Alfred M. Bailey, director of the academy.

Being on Lake Michigan and also in the Mississippi Valley, the Chicago area is in the heart of a wonderful bird country," Mr. Bailey said. "From the sand dunes along the lake shore southeast of Chicago we get the piping plover, sandpipers, and gulls during migration. From the marshy regions west of Chicago come the red-wing blackbirds, rails, least bitterns, coots, grebes and American bitterns. The year-round residents include cardinals, blue jays, crows, horned owls, and screech owls.

The robins, wrens and bluebirds are our early summer residents. The winter visitors coming down from the colder climates are the pine grosbeaks, evening grosbeaks, crossbills, longspurs, snowflakes, and several species of water birds. A host of tiny larvae migration give us but a short acquaintance with their song and plumage."

A series of lectures on these birds especially adapted for school children, many of whom have had no opportunity to see the birds in their natural habitat, is given at the academy. After observing the specimens, the children are taken to a classroom where the same birds are shown in life by means of motion pictures.

The academy, which was founded in 1857, has developed a unique method of exhibiting its groups of animal and bird life. Instead of painting the back wall of the exhibit to give color and atmosphere to the group, the academy uses huge photographs of scenes actually taken in the region where the specimens were obtained. The photographs taken on 8x10 in. plates and later enlarged, are joined in sections to form a panoramic background sometimes measuring 95 feet in length. The foliage of trees and flowers of the foreground is made of wax and celluloid.

One very effective exhibit consists of an immense photograph of the Indiana sand dune regions with the blue waters of Lake Michigan in the distance. The characteristic growth of flowers and bushes in the foreground makes a natural setting for the box turtles, white-footed mice, and water birds coming from the marshy areas between the dunes.

To present the wooded region west of Chicago, a photograph of the old hickory, oak and ash trees looms up behind the foreground of crab tree and undergrowth of bushes, through which roam the Virginia deer, the moose, seen in Illinois, the woodchucks, prairie wolves, or coyotes, once so plentiful and now found only occasionally near Chicago, and the beaver, now extinct in this locality.

As the visitor to the academy looks into the cases and then glances at the photograph in the background, he can hardly tell where the little stage setting finishes and the photograph begins, so unified are they.

READY-TO-SERVE CHICKEN LATEST

Lincoln, April 14.—No longer will the housewife have to stand over a hot stove in order to serve broiled chicken. A new method is being tried at the University of Nebraska agricultural college, according to Prof. F. E. Grundy in his campaign for the republican nomination to succeed himself in the United States senate.
