War Mothers on "long, long trail."
The pocketbook seems to be the great American novel.
Fame is much like radio. The more the volume, the more the static.
If more bandits were strung up, fewer citizens would be held up.
1930 will go down in history as the year the first radio census was taken.
"Hoover wants law enforced," says a headline. He can do it—with the regular army.
Complaints help to prove that there are many persons who are poor sports in various ways.
Another thing strengthening some folks belief in a merciful providence is a woman driving a car.
One of the effects of prohibition has been a slump in bottled in bond and increase in bottlers out on bond.
When spring comes the average wife doesn't expect to get a new outfit than a Pullman porter does a tip.
The figures on unemployment developed by the present census will be of value chiefly as a basis for future estimates.
It appears that in the minds of the soviet representative "commercial enterprise" may take a variety of meanings.
Some day somebody somewhere will be moved to utter a warning against the unlicensed multiplication of legal holidays.

Senate rejects Parker, 41-39; President is silent in defeat.
Among the poor that are with us always are poor magazine stories.
Ohio women are going to do without luxuries to save money to fight for prohibition.
There is not much hope for the person who makes work the last expedient for getting along.
Another good way to retain your faith in your fellowman is to make him sign on the dotted line.
It is suspected that some women distrust their intuition when they consider the husbands they picked.
The Springfield News hasn't any doubts but that a pigeon-toed woman started the long skirt on its way back.
"Aw, let's buy a bottle of Jamaica ginger and get paralyzed drunk!" said one boozehound to another. And they did.
Naturally many golfers are opposed to prohibition because the Eighteenth Amendment abolished the nineteenth hole.
The attorney general of North Carolina has ruled that election officials cannot ask registrants for the state primary whether they voted for Governor Smith in 1928.
Among the quaint relics of a bygone age one must list now the country village. At least such is the logic of the census figures, which show these embryonic cities to be losing heavily in population.

A telephone is like whisky, and love; it will make one say things he wouldn't say without it.
There seems to be some difference of opinion as to whether Mr. Hoover is dry enough to squeak or wet enough to gurgle.
Men may not be practical, but they wouldn't wear knee pants and spend their time trying to pull the things down over their knees.
Liars grow cruder with each passing year. Here comes a man who says he has lived fifty-six years with his wife without a quarrel.
Policemen of Berlin now carry a bayonet, a revolver and a mace, which should guarantee that few tourists will ask them foolish questions.
According to a Swiss scientist the music nerve is in the foot and this may be the main reason for the pedals on a piano.
Reports from that night baseball game say it was hard to field fast grounders. We've noticed the same thing in broad daylight.
When the tornadoes let up, then we will be burnt up with the heat, like they are in the east, several deaths caused by heat.
THE PIONEER WOMAN
Oklahoma honors the hardy, but gentle, and loving, brave and determined women who shared with fathers, husbands, brothers and sweethearts in subduing the western, northern and southern wilds of the United States. The memorial is a bronze statue, rising forty feet above the ground, and it is located at Ponca City, Okla., and is the gift of a wealthy oil man, E. W. Marland. It is the work of a New York sculptor, Bryard Baker.
The frontier women exemplified what devoted women can and will do, what they have done, for the men of their hearts. It was the greatest of all virtues which gave them fortitude—love. Mr. Marland deserves the nation's thanks for providing us with a permanent reminder of the peerless greatness of women. There is nothing so noble, admirable or beneficent as women inspired with the finest grace, that of burning love.

THE ARM BOARD'S WORK
The talk given by James C. Stone, vice chairman of the Federal Farm Board, to members of the Chamber of Commerce at the City Club on the conditions of the farmers and the work of the Farm Board was plain and straightforward. A Kentucky farmer himself, he had been through the mill of hard times on the farm. He had suffered with the other farmers from lack of organization and the haphazard way in which crops are produced and marketed. He said that his own experience had demonstrated the value of co-operative marketing.
It was this background of Mr. Stone's that enabled him to paint a vivid picture of the distresses of the farmers and the handicaps from which they suffered. The object of the address was to enlist the interest and co-operation of city business men in solving the farm problem. He wanted the business men to know what the problem is and how the Farm Board is striving to put agriculture on its feet. He emphasized the close connection that exists between industry and commerce and agriculture. If the farmer cannot make a decent living and has no purchasing power, every line of business suffers. Everything that enters into manufacture comes from the soil, and if those who produce from the soil cannot make both ends meet the whole country shares disaster with them.
Mr. Stone referred to the criticisms of business men with regard to the work of the Farm Board, and explained exactly what it is trying to do. The Board is trying to build up an efficient system of co-operative marketing in every line of farm production. He declared that the Board was helping the farmers to do no more than what business organizations do, that is, to organize for their own benefit. He showed the advantage of co-operative marketing, with a thorough business organization managed by men who know the business. He likened the market co-operatives to business corporations in which there are thousands of stockholders, with boards of directors and managers to handle the business for the stockholders. The Farm Board is trying to bring the various small farm co-operative market associations into a national association in each line of production. When the leaders in farm products want to buy these products, instead of dealing with the individual farmer, who is helpless, or with the small co-operative association, he will deal with large nation-wide associations, represented by efficient business men.
Mr. Stone touched upon the purchase of wheat by the Farm Board, which has been the chief point of criticism. He said the Board had no idea of speculating in wheat or of creating artificial prices. But, knowing that the operation of the law of supply and demand depended upon the conditions of the market at the time of selling, the Board felt impelled to make an effort to avoid the selling of wheat at ruinous prices. Its effort had prevented a disastrous slump in prices and had restored them to a better basis, although the price is not yet profitable.
Mr. Stone deplored the lack of active interest by business men in the farm problem, which is the most important problem before the country, and expressed the belief that this lack of interest was due largely to lack of knowledge and understanding of farm conditions and of the methods necessary to bring relief to agriculture. He said it was impossible to accomplish much for the farmers without the co-operation of the business men of the cities. The Chamber of Commerce meeting and similar meetings in other cities are designed to bring about an understanding of existing conditions on the farms and of the methods employed by the Farm Board to improve them.
One of the means adopted and sponsored by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and others, through committees on agriculture, is to organize agricultural clubs among the business men. These clubs will meet from time to time and keep informed on farm conditions and the progress of the work of farm relief. Certainly, the business men who listened to Mr. Stone got an interesting and moving view of existing conditions, of the problem to be solved and the manner in which the Farm Board is working out solutions. As to the success of the Board's plans, Mr. Stone said that was in the lap of the future, but he could pledge the Board to its very best efforts to put agriculture on an equal basis with finance, industry, transportation and commerce. The Government had done much for all of these interests, and the Board intended to do whatever the law permitted it to do for the agricultural interests. With the co-operation of the business men he believed much improvement could be realized.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The machines which are revolutionizing the progressive industry of the world and changing the mode of living were invented in the mind of man. They are creatures of the human brain. They could not be like their makers, we might contend, without being ungrateful; and if temporarily they inflict economic punishment on men, they must be considered true to character.
