IN THE REALM OF SCIENCE

That bontany is more than the aesthetic science which the majority imagine is to be demonstrated by the successful experiments conducted by Dr. George W. Carver. Incidentally, but significantly, it should be mentioned that this scientist is a Negro, who is connected with Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala.

Dr. Carver has discovered food-stuffs and commercial by-products in large number in peanuts, the sweet potato and Alabama and Georgia clay. Egyptologists say that the deep-blue pigment which he has found in clay is a color which was lost for centuries.

Education develops the Negro into the savant class. He advances from the rank of labor to that of professions. But there is no need to worry as to serious economic or social consequences. Racial colors will not commingle, nor will racial society harmonize. The man has done good work. Give him credit for that.

THE GOLFER'S DREAM

Bill Perkins loved a game of golf Far better than his wife. He wasn't good, but nibbicks, cleeks And mashies filled his life, Until one night he dreamed he died And sought the spaces high. And found, behold! the Milky Way A fairway through the sky.

The stars were balls, the comets clubs The blue a putting green. And all the asteroids were tees And hazards in between; And what a round from taking off To perfect final score! But lest he break the record, lo! Bill Perkins plays no more.

THE WEEK-END ON THE RAPIDAN

Mr. Hoover went out to spend the week-end at his camp on the Rapidan. He needed an outing. He has had a trying time of it lately. He ought to get away from Washington, completely away from official associates, and look back on things in the perspective of impartial criticism. He is aware, of course, that his prestige today is at its lowest ebb since he moved into the White House. His administration is now in its second year. When Congress next assembles in regular session his administration will psychologically be on the decline. There is still time to retrieve it, still time for him to show the qualities of leadership with which public opinion endowed him and which aroused such high expectation among his followers in the campaign. He has made mistakes of commission which he can never undo, but which he can avoid repeatedly. He has made mistakes of omission—such as his silence on the tariff bill—which he can correct. The week-end on the Rapidan should have given Herbert Hoover a fine opportunity to do some uninterrupted, straight-from-the-shoulder talking to President Hoover.

HUMOR FOR PRESIDENT HOOVER

Senator Borah has the reputation of being an opportunist with regard to climatic situations in Congress on public issues, and, therefore, when he raises his voice or gives an interview, he is sure to be conspicuous by his declaration. But he may have made a mistake in calling the attention of the Senate to utterances by Andrew Gerard, political editor of Echo de Paris, and Wickham Steed, of the London Times, at the dinner of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in New York City.

Both foreign editors criticized American isolation in international affairs. President Hoover was near them at the speaker's table and delivered an impromptu address. Provided they discussed our foreign policy with due propriety, their comments are scarcely open to condemnation. Mr. Steed, it must be admitted, was a little facetious. He said that our representatives have to cable back to the secretary of state, and the secretary has to confer with the president, and the president consults Senator Borah.

Mr. Steed appears to have adopted the style of Will Rogers in order to make himself understood thoroughly. President Hoover may have hung his head for a moment to conceal a smile. But the affair was not so funny to the Idaho senator. If the Senate gives its attention to the matter, arrangements should be made to broadcast the proceedings.

CONTEMPT AND INJUNCTION

Encouraged by assertions upon the conservative side in the Parker debate that we should look to legislation rather than to the courts for protection against "yellow dog" contracts and abuses of the injunction, Senators Borah, Norris and Walsh of the Senate Judiciary Committee are planning to bring the reconstructed Shipstead bill to a vote. Introduced two years ago by the Minnesota Senator, the bill has been rewritten by members of the committee. It would outlaw "yellow dog" contracts, of which Senator Borah observed in the Parker debate that "no Senator has soiled his lips to defend them." It would also outlaw injunctions to preserve order except where peace officers testify that it cannot be preserved by ordinary means; and injunctions restraining peaceful persuasion of workers to join unions or go on strike. It provides for jury trials in cases of criminal contempt arising from violation of labor injunctions, requires applicants for injunctions to show reasonable effort to settle controversies, and prohibits the issuance of injunctions where it can be shown that they would aggravate rather than compose difficulties. Nor is this the whole field covered by the bill. The practice of sometimes silencing newspapers by citing the editors for contempt before the offended Judge, as was done recently in the case of the Cleveland Press, would end. No judge would be permitted to hear a case of contempt involving his own court un-

GALLUSES AND BELTS

Approaching humidity brings forward once more the controversy between those two schools of male thought that divide on whether to wear galluses or a belt. But delicacy as well as fairness counsels against going too fast on this point. In this great agitation between the men the women doubtless will be content to remain in a position of neutrality. So one can not countenance the desperate efforts of the minority to claim the women for their side simply because the modern tendency in feminine attire is to suspend the garments from the shoulder.

Galluses or belts? A perfectly proper question and entitled to an answer. Study the question from every angle, with fearlessness as well as thoughtfulness, and then be guided without hesitation by the truth as disclosed. If the truth is for the belt, then obviously the belt it is, but if it is for suspenders then just as surely the galluses win.

The United States christened its newest cruiser Chicago for the same reason that other countries name theirs Terror, Destroyer, Scorpion and Dauntless.

A West Virginia exchange says that if Mahatma Gandhi were in America, he would sell his picture with one pound of salt for $1. If he had a radio station and a few million saps with receiving sets, it would be twice as easy.

CUBA AND THE SUGAR TARIFF

By the action of the House, the proposed tariff rate on Cuban sugar remains at 2 cents a pound. In the original bill as it came from the House, the rate was 2.4. Sitting as a Committee of the Whole on Jan. 16, the Senate adopted the Harrison amendment to keep the sugar duty at its present rate, namely, 1.76 cents a pound. On March 5, Senator Smoot's amendment to increase the rate to a flat 2 cents was adopted by the Senate.

Representing an increase of .24 cents, or approximately 14 per cent over the Fordney-McCumber rate, it remains to be seen what will be its effect upon Cuba. Already that island, our natural source of sugar supply, is in distress. According to the United States Sugar Association, Cuban sugar companies are in "a deplorable situation" and only one out of 23 Cuban companies "has shown any substantial earnings." Since sugar is Cuba's chief source of livelihood, further depression of the industry may precipitate a general economic collapse.

A coupasse in Cuba would affect immediately American capital in the amount of $750,000,000 invested in the Cuban sugar industry. It would also affect home industry. In fact, the Cuban depression has already had a marked effect on Cuban importations from the United States. Exports to Cuba dropped from $160,500,000 in 1926 to $155,400,000 in 1927 and to $127,000,000 in 1928.

In the meantime, it is possible that the domestic sugar industry, clamoring for higher and yet higher tariffs on Cuban sugar, is drawing up its own death warrant. We refer to increased production in Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands, whence sugar enters the United States duty free. In 1919, for example, the Philippine Islands furnished only 1.78 per cent of our sugar supply. In 1928 they furnished 8.59 per cent. In the same period the percentage of sugar supply from domestic sources actually diminished. In 1929, 26.07 per cent came from Continental United States; in 1928 only 20.82. It would seem that the domestic sugar industry is suffering from ills which a tariff cannot cure.

Cuba remains our best and most dependable source of supply. Since 1919 approximately 50 per cent of our sugar has been imported from that island, of which Philip Wright, an economist, has written:

Cuba has vast areas of land better adapted, perhaps, than any other region in the world both with respect to soil and climate for the production of sugar. Nowhere can a considerable quantity of sugar be produced with less expenditure of human effort. So admirably adapted to the growth of cane are the soil and climate of Cuba that the cane may often be profitably ratooned (grown from sprouts of cane planted in an earlier year) for 10 years or more.

In short, Cuba and the sugar problem is one of the most perfect examples of the soundness of the free trade principle. Its violation here will not only increase the cost of living to the American consumer; it will, by contributing to Cuban depression, react upon American industry which lists Cuba as one of its best customers.

less committed in his presence. It must be recalled that nothing is proposed by this bill which has not been in good political repute in the United States or years. The Republican party said in its 1928 platform:

We believe that injunctions in labor disputes have in some instances been abused and have given rise to serious questions for legislation. The Democratic platform of the same year said:

Investigations have shown the existence of grave abuses in the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes. Injunctions should not be granted except upon proof of threatened irreparable injury and after notice and hearing, and the injunction should be confined to those acts which do directly threaten irreparable injury.

It is likely that if the bill reaches the floor it will pass. Abuses of the injunction in the United States are a phenomenon of the last quarter century. They are unknown in any other country sharing the tradition of the British common law. As for the impropriety of a Judge who thinks himself unfairly criticised acting as Judge, jury and prosecutor when the offender is brought before him, there cannot be the last doubt.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A CROWN FOR A MOTHER

Once in a while a woman goes forth to high conquest, led by voice that whispers of fame and laurels and far, glad things that wait for those who ride gallantly down the highways of the world. To the privileged few comes the clarion call, but to a myriad army an older, lovelier dream, soft as voices of little children at story-telling time, brings a challenge as simple as it is beautiful.

mended, bruises to be bound, tears and laughter and sacrifice and sympathy to be fostered in the brave eyes of little boys and the trusting eyes of little girls. Mother Goose and her fairy crew come back; knights who have been victorious on far crusades climb the garden wall to show the paths to children who are preparing for the day when they, too, shall go forth to win an accolade. And all the while the one who opens the door to the glorious world of make-believe makes another pudding, retrims an old hat, and buys a flowered ribbon or a new cap to surprise the child she has given the shining vision.

She teaches her children to sing through the twilight when the morning is far away; she tells them that there is a land where dreams come true but only those who are faithful to the trust of simple things will find it; and she repeats again and again that life is a gay adventure to those who will wear the scarlet plume of valor, chivalry, and loving kindness.

To the mothers of the world; the old-fashioned mothers and the laughing young mothers, the mothers who have vanished down the winding streets of memory, and the widowed mothers who fang their heads against the wind and went out to take a father's place, coming home at dusk to be mothers again, the world offers tribute.

It does not matter so much if a woman comes to the ending of the way with trumpet songs in the dusk, stars in the packet of visions that she has fulfilled, and laurel leaves on her hair. If the crown of mother love is not there she has missed the happiest path on the long crusade.

Many a man never would have listened to the wedding march if he had known how unreasonable a wife can be about dragging a husband away from his own fireside in the evening to see how reel heroes treat members of her sex.

Men in the United States are said to use $1,000,000 worth of "beauty preparations" a year. And judging from the way they get along with women it seems some make-up is essential.

After watching a cutie making up her face in public we are surprised at the self-control she shows in not pulling another dress out of her compact or purse and changing her costume in public, too.
