TRY TO REORGANIZE BANK
Chicago—Efforts of a bondholders' committee to bring about the reorganization of the defunct Kansas City joint stock bank were temporarily deferred at the close of Tuesday's meeting. W. Edwin Stanley, committee member said. The project has been tabled for at least thirty days, he said.

"It is necessarily slow work," Stanley said, "and whatever our decision may be it will have to be referred to the federal farm loan board, for approval or rejection."

Members of the bond holders' protective committee have been in session here and have heard proposals of various banking groups who seek a solution of the tangled affairs of the defunct institution. Representatives from Detroit, Cleveland, New York and Chicago financial houses attended the meetings held at Mitchell, Hutchins & Co., who bought two series of the joint bank's securities.

The meeting conferred in detail over the proposal of A. C. Stewart, San Francisco, who, with his associates, offered to take over the financial tangle. Walter McLeas, Kansas City, is chairman of the bond holders' committee.

FIRMLY FOR THE DRY LAW
Des Moines—A message congratulating President Hoover and the national prohibition administrator on enforcement of the dry law was dispatched Tuesday by the general assembly of the United Presbyterian church. Attention of the assembly again turned to the prohibition question Tuesday afternoon during the closing session, when it was discussed by several delegates. A report attacking "wet propagandists," and endorsing prohibition, was adopted earlier in the session.

A long list of appointments to church boards was announced by the committee on nomination of which John A. Gregg of Boston is chairman.

A loan of $60,000 to Tarkio college of Tarkio, Mo., was approved. The fund is to be used to construct another building replacing that which burned down last January.

KANSAS CITY BANK ROBBER
Kansas City—Three men robbed the Victory State bank at Eighteenth street and Minnesota avenue here of $3,049 Tuesday and escaped despite a cleverly devised bandit alarm. The bank is at a busy outlying street intersection and merchants in the vicinity had planned to protect it in case of a holdup. The merchants kept their weapons loaded and in each store is a bell that rings when a $5 bill in the cage of the bank teller is disturbed.

The bill was in its accustomed place, but was about the only piece of currency the bandits passed up on their looting after compelling two bank employees and a customer to lie face down on the floor. The robbers fled in an automobile they had parked at the curb.

Dickinson Far Ahead in Iowa Senate Race

Plurality Over Hammill of More Than 75,000 With the Count Nearly Complete

Des Moines—Congressman L. J. Dickinson piled up a lead of more than 75,000 votes Tuesday afternoon against Governor Hammill for the republican senatorial nomination, with returns almost complete. Unofficial counts in 2,198 of the state's 2,434 precincts indicated that Dickinson carried all but twelve of the ninety-nine counties.

The farm vote apparently swung to Dickinson, who campaigned for the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill. Hammill ran better in the cities, although Dickinson swept Des Moines. Rural precincts also ran up large majorities for Dan Turner, who polled more than twice the vote of Ed Smith for the republican gubernatorial nomination. His lead over Smith passed the 100,000 mark Tuesday afternoon, when about 325,000 ballots had been counted. The total vote was expected to run slightly below the 1928 total of 369,000.

Dickinson's vote remained at about 55 per cent of the total cast for four candidates. Besides Hammill, who opposed him for his tariff views, Frank J. Lund and W. O. Payne were in the race. Together they polled about 50,000 votes.

Turner, who has been identified with the progressive wing of the Iowa republican party, had received more than 62 per cent of the ballots counted. Smith's opposition to an income tax brought him a sizeable city vote, but Otto Lange of Dubuque, third candidate, split some of this with him on a platform assailing chain stores.

Dickinson will run against Senator Daniel F. Steck, first democrat to represent Iowa in the senate for more than seventy years.

All state officers, aside from Smith, who is secretary of state, were nominated and ten sitting congressmen held leaders over their opponents.

Returns from 2,279 of the 2,434 precincts in Iowa had been reported in the republican secretary of state nomination vote as follows: Saunders, 81,319; Greenwalt, 78,812; Hammett, 62,742; Hindley, 53,513. Sanders had polled 21.1 per cent of the total vote and Greenwalt 30.2 per cent of the total, with 35 per cent necessary for nomination.

In the Tenth congressional district Fred C. Gilchrist, present state senator, appeared certain of the nomination to succeed L. J. Dickinson in the national house of representatives. With 300 out of 318 precincts reported Gilchrist had 18,515 votes, Frederic Larrabee of Fort Dodge had 14,548 and S. G. Goodrich of Boone, had 10,207. With only one precinct missing in the Fourth district, Gilbert N. Haugen, co-author of the McNary-Haugen farm bill, was leading C. A. Benson, present state senator, 16,060 to 12,748. The closest congressional race was in the Third district, where T. J. B. Robinson had a narrow lead over 15,011 to 13,320, with 197 precincts out of 229 completed.—State Journal.

Denver is Ready to Start Work at Boulder Dam

Federal Bureau There is Waiting the Word from Washington to Start Work

Denver, Colo.—Plans for the first units of the $165,000,000 Boulder Canyon federal power project on the Colorado River have been completed at headquarters of the United States bureau of reclamation here. The bureau's vast organization is prepared to launch the preliminary construction work immediately the starting signal is fired in Washington, according to Raymond F. Walter, chief engineer of the bureau, and S. O. Harper, general superintendent of construction.

While Congress had before it President Hoover's request for an initial appropriation of $10,669,999 Walker K. Young, who has been named chief construction engineer for the Boulder project, made ready in May to leave Denver and establish his office at the dam site. As soon as funds become available, his staff of engineers are to follow. Mr. Young has been in charge of the Klamath division of the bureau's Yakima project.

For the most responsible positions the bureau plans to draw on its own engineers of long experience in such work, according to Mr. Harper, recruiting outside technical men to complete the organization. Besides the force of bureau men actually at the dam site, the staff of designers at the Denver office must be more than doubled as the work progresses.

Several projects must be undertaken and completed before the actual pouring of concrete on the 709-foot dam can start. First, a complete modern town site must be laid out about two miles from the canyon rim above the dam site. The bureau needs $225,000 for the actual construction of the building and quarters for government employees. The private contractors who are awarded bids for the actual construction work must house their own men.

A railroad is to be built to the canyon rim and thence down the cliff to the base of the dam, both upstream and downstream, a real engineering feat. It probably will come in from the northern side of the river, a branch coming to the site from the main line of the Union Pacific Railroad south of Las Vegas, Nevada, although there has been discussion of bringing in a road from Colorado, Arizona. The bureau estimates $2,500,000 will cover this item.

Another $300,000 is needed for building a road from the town site to the dam site, or, rather, to the rim of the canyon. Later, inside railroads will be needed to the river bed in order to carry workmen back and forth.

Electric power for the town and the project must also be provided at an estimated $1,750,000 for a temporary power plant, or to carry in transmission lines from an outside supply. The bureau has asked $500,000 for reimbursing owners of ranches and mines to be inundated by the 115-mile-long lake to be formed by the dam.

Four great diversion tunnels, each 50 feet in diameter, must be completed before the work of excavating the dam foundation and abutments can start. These tunnels, which, with a capacity of 200,000 second feet, will take the water out of the river above the dam site and carry it around through the solid rock of the canyon walls, returning the water to the canyon below the dam during construction, will take approximately two years or more to complete. The sum of $5,000,000 is needed for this phase of the work.

Although this enterprise is known as the Boulder Canyon dam project the actual site of the dam is in Black Canyon, about 25 miles southeast of Las Vegas, Nevada, and 20 miles downstream from Boulder Canyon. Provisions will be made for developing 1,000,000 horsepower at the hydroelectric plant included in the project, the entire work to take approximately seven years.

The cost estimate includes the All-American canal for carrying irrigation water from the lower Colorado River to the Imperial Valley of California. The lake above the dam will, when full, hold between 26,000,000 and 28,000,000 cubic feet of water, or sufficient to cover the State of Kentucky to a depth of one foot, engineers calculate.

Sale of power generated at Boulder Dam is intended to repay the Federal Government in full within 50 years at 4 per cent interest. Western states, cities and private interests presented bids for use of more power than can be supplied. The allocation of power has been announced on the following general basis: Nevada 18 per cent, Arizona 18 per cent, California 64 per cent.

FINE PAVED ROAD

The Nebraska Masonic Home is located on one of the first paved roads in the state of Nebraska, highway No. 75 passing the Home grounds and which will furnish a great highway from Kansas City to Omaha as a part of a transcontinental route from Mexico to Canada. The highway from Omaha to Plattsmouth is now partially paved and in the coming summer almost all of the small units still unpaved will be cared for and making a fine system of roadway.

The highway that comes through the Home grounds from Elm street to the city limits, has been named in honor of John R. Webster, member of the Masonic Home board, by the city of Plattsmouth.
