Well, the Marry Month of June is right here with us.

Mines of Sweden are breaking all previous production records.

The most depressing thought of the day. A girl smiled at us but not with us.

Corsets are being extensively advertised again—glad news for fat females.

Today's definition: A person who crosses the street against the light is a jay-walker.

Did you hear about the New York traffic cop who apprehended the mayor for a J. Walker?

Calvin Coolidge is unquestionably our greatest living ex-President. He happens to be the only one we have.

The world is moving along. If you don't believe it, drive out in the country and see what the farmers are doing.

Our idea of a nice summer job would be rechecking figures for the census bureau at some nice bathing resort.

A dress that makes a girl look slim makes a man look "round." That's a punk paragraph but nevertheless it is true.

O. O. McIntyre refers to a New York beauty parlor as "a palace of pulchritude." My, how that boy does love alliteration!

A friendly tip to prospective June bridegrooms: When you get the matrimonial fever you always catch it from some woman.

The modern daughter thinks she has performed a hard day's work if she dusts off the radio empires the ash tray she filled up the night before.

Two members of a Chicago orchestra engaged in a fight and broke their saxophones over the heads of each other. That's the sort of fighting we favor.

One of the best home brewers has sworn off. He offers his recipe and bottle capper for sale at a great sacrifice. Next week he will want to buy both back again.

Because they thought it meant something else, several factions of Chicago gangsters are said to have rushed to the loop to see the demonstration of shorts.

Aprons of simple and child-like faith, a friend tells us that he is now using hair tonic recommended by his barber who still parts both of his hairs in the middle. However, it won't hurt him to hope.

According to the New York Times, the sucker list is responsible for financial losses totaling more than one billion dollars annually. Mr. Barnum lived too soon. If alive in this generation he would triple his estimate.

"Where does the people's tax money go?" plaintively asks a contemporary. Boy for more than two years we have been telling you where it is going—a lot of it into the pockets of people who have no right to take it.

Uncle Sam wants to hire some first class soda jerkers for work at the fountains soon to be installed on our battle ships. That comes mighty close to being our dream of a real job. The soda jerker on a battleship can put two big oceans and all the waves of seven seas to work helping him to shake up malted drinks.

This is one country in which we certainly do love to advertise our criminals.

No husband is so ideal that at times he doesn't become as irritating as a corn on the toe.

Only a few years ago the slogan was "Keep Cool With Coolidge." Now most of us are hot with Hoover.

Let's hope that that Austrian who can play the piano with his feet is capable of producing sole-stirring music.

It wasn't even necessary to tell it to the marines. They know they would have to go back to Nicaragua anyway.

New York barbers are charging 25 cents for shaves. That will make it harder to scrape up money to get your face scraped.

Daylight saving is in vogue in nearly all the large Eastern cities. But what do they do with the stuff after they save it?

One of our best friends is an enthusiastic fisherman. The chief trouble with him is that he can't tell the truth the next day.

"Humor in Ads Found to Attract Women Buyers," says a headline. And those are just the sort of ads which a husband finds anything but funny.

"Police Dog Imprisoned for Attempted Suicide," says a headline in the Chicago News. By Gosh, what's this world coming to when even the dogs want to leave it?

Radio, television, etc., are marvelous, but you can drive out on any country road from Plattsmouth and hear the corn and wheat growing without any electrical contrivance.

Another tip for June bridegrooms: At least pick a gal who can boil a kettle of water without scorching it. Also remember that modern married life covers a multitude of tin cans.

In New York the other day a man swore in court that his wife threw him out of the window after missing him six times with a revolver. Ho-hum! That isn't news in this day and age, even though the incident may have been a bit exciting.

Alas for the frailty of heroic aspirations! A deep pit has been dug beside the pathway that leads to romantic achievement, and nothing is sadder or more melancholy than the way in which those who try to follow that pathway keep tumbling into it.

THE SOVIET TROUBLES

Reports from the eastern provinces of Siberia indicate that soviet authorities are facing a serious revolt of peasants and fishermen in the territory north of Vladivostok. Angered at the Russian policy of collective farming, these non-Russian peasants have been carrying on a guerrilla warfare against soviet authority for some time, it appears. Some of the villagers have been imprisoned, others are still in open revolt and many thousands of others are fleeing into Manchuria.

This is not surprising, for the somewhat visionary projects of Moscow can mean but little to an Asiatic people many thousands of miles from the source of collectivist theory. In European Russia the soviet farm collectivization program has made astonishingly good progress during the last year or two, partly through the spreading of Communist sentiment and partly through the forcible measures of the Moscow Government. The strange thing is that Moscow should be doing in Siberia very much the same thing that Britain is doing in India—keeping an alien population in subjection for a variety of reasons. Yet the widespread sympathy of Americans for the "down-trodden Hindus" does not seem to extend to the Tartars and Mongols of Siberia, who are in a much worse predicament. Perhaps the reason is that very few in America know anything about soviet tactics in the Far East, while the Indians have had in Gandhi one of the best publicity agents the world has ever known.

COLLAPSE OF PASSIVE RESISTANCE

The Gandhi campaign of non-violent passive resistance, was from a religious or philosophical point of view, rather admirable as a means of general protest. It sought to impress on the British people the discontent of the Indian masses with their present status. And it succeeded fairly well in that purpose. But like many another movement in history begun with the best of pacific motives, it aroused passions and hatreds that have no proper place in the movement. Thus it has got beyond the control of the more or less responsible men who headed the movement at the outset.

The quarrels of striking dock workers in Rangoon, the clash of Hindus and Moslems in Dacca, the zest for loot among Afghan border tribes—these and other troubles unrelated to the Nationalist campaign are the real problem for the British authorities. London is confident that a satisfactory agreement can be reached at the conference table, so far as Nationalist aspirations are concerned. But in the meantime there is the more immediate question of enforcing existing law among irresponsible rioters.

It would be interesting to have the frank opinions of Mr. Gandhi, Mr. Patel and Mr. Nehru just now as to the value of their "passive" campaign. Having unleashed so many intense forces of hatred and strife, having brought about the killing of several hundreds of natives, they may well wonder whether they might better have waited until they could meet with British officials in London to thrash out the future of British India with the dignity that becomes civilized nations, rather than embark on a movement that called for more intelligence and self-restraint than their people possess.

WALL STREET AND THE TARIFF

It is not often that you find the voice of Wall Street raised in favor of lower tariff duties. But the current issue of the Magazine of Wall Street presents an editorial which is sharply critical of the pending tariff bill as anything that Senator Moses' "sons of wild jackasses" have ever said.

The editorial begins by asserting that a policy of "protection was needed by this country throughout the early part of its existence, but it adds that times have changed so that protection is not the boon it once was.

"We have had free trade on a continental scale, despite the tariff barbed at the boundaries," says the magazine. "Now we require, not free trade, but greater freedom of trade abroad. The policy that was good for 100 years will be a handicap in the future.

"The new Tariff law will be recorded later as an act of folly—obstructive to foreign trade and contrary to manifest destiny."

If you're inclined to think that the American Legion is simply a social organization in which former army men get together to talk over old times, hold conventions and dabble in politics, it might open your eyes to look into things a bit and examine some of the jobs that the Legion undertakes on the side.
