One pretty good reason why a man marries is some woman.

At that, a back seat driver is no worse than an arm chair housekeeper.

Not being a member of the mounted police, Diogenes never found his man.

One of the greatest problems of the day is how to dispose of used chewing gum.

Very patriotic young man, Bobby Jones; at any rate he's making the eagles scream in England.

Bishop Cannon claims he's being persecuted, and the poor man also has been a martyr to the market crash.

After David killed Goliath that time, we supposed somebody asked him to indorse some kind of shaving cream.

It is said that wild life is vanishing in the wide open spaces. Maybe most of it has gone to the cities to carry on.

Things have gotten to that stage where a trip on the Graf Zeppelin has all the thrills of a ride on a street car.

The altar is the hospital where those who are love sick are sent, but when love dies the divorce court is the cemetery.

It's hard to tell whether great men read detective stories for relaxation or because they were licked for doing it as kids.

If M. Briand's scheme for a United States of Europe falls through, the continent will be spared the possession of a Senate.

Americans are forgetting how to walk, one writer says. But the walkers are learning how to jump, and that helps some.

Chicago—and some other towns—would have been a heap safer if that guy, whatever his name was, hadn't invented gunpowder.

Many of our highways failed in the recent rough weather, but it is understood practically all of the billboards pulled through.

Some New Year's resolutions probably will be kept. For one thing, you can't play the stock market without any money.

Seven languages are spoken among members of the Chicago police force. However, you can say what you think of them in one language.

It isn't evolution that makes an automobile turn turtle, but when it does it proves evolution had tire trouble in the case of the driver.

It seems whispering also, has almost become a lost art since it no longer is considered improper to tell such stories right out in mixed company.

Considering how many other faults a man has, a woman thinks Nature was rubbing it in to construct him that he would snore most of the night.

It is unfortunate the British tax in India had to be on salt. We believe if it had been on two-pants suits Mr. Gandhi might never have known.

A drive to put the finishing touches on the tariff bill in the Senate by the end of the week and wind up the legislative session June 14, was started by Administration leaders the other day.

It takes a mighty big man to stay in the limelight these days.

Little Dorothy thinks that Baton Rouge is a new kind of cosmetic.

Some things may be settled by an election but not in the state of Pennsylvania.

The only place dad gets a "personal" mention is on the front side of an envelope.

In Brazil they are using alcohol for motor fuel. In this country we need it to tank up too.

Wall street is said to be alarmed because haberdashers near Dartmouth College are selling shorts.

Recently we've been wondering whether the delegates to these conferences get time-and-a-half for overtime.

About all that golf now offers Bobby Jones is the privilege of sitting down and having a good Alexandria cry.

Children are to be admitted to membership in the Parent-Teachers' Association. It's only right that the directing voice in the modern home should be represented.

New Brunswick, N. J., has revived its blue law code of 1793, one provision of which forbids a man to kiss his wife on Sunday. This is the year's best effort to promote domestic affection.

In the fruitful processes of nature there is one vital element which is easy to destroy, and by so doing brings disharmony into the whole course of the seasons. This is the tree, which is helpless before the greed and thoughtlessness of men.

Not in a long time has the country been heartened as it was by the Associated Press announcement that Mr. Hoover remains open-minded as to the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill and will subject it to analysis by experts and heads of departments.

If this is true, it was mere political pretense upon the part of administration leaders in Congress to say that if the flexible clause were altered the President would not object to the bill. The country has never altogether believed this. Despite what the politicians were saying, almost the entire press and virtually all of the big industries have stoutly held to the hope that Mr. Hoover will not sign the bill and have urged him to veto it.

If Mr. Hoover does remain open-minded, the tariff bill is doomed. It may pass the Senate by a narrow margin, as seems probable; but it can never survive analysis by experts and the heads of Government departments. If the President subjects it to such examination, and abides by the result, he will exercise his right of veto with even more emphasis than he used in condemning the debenture. And why should he not do so? Could a man who had so much to do with building up our great foreign trade deliberately destroy it? Could a man of Mr. Hoover's training and experience, acutely aware of the necessities of a great industrial nation, close to our manufactured products those foreign ports which we have only opened at the expense of great energy and persistence? We have never believed it, and we will not believe it until he has actually signed the bill.

It was a striking coincidence that on the day it was denied that he will sign the bill the President himself sent to the Senate, in response to a resolution, 170 protests against the tariff bill from almost every country in the world. Of these nine have come from the Netherlands, seven from Switzerland, five from Canada, four each from Spain and Italy, and three each from Austria, Egypt, France, Germany and Norway. The reprisals already afoot in some of our best foreign markets, and still others threatened by such large consumers of our manufactured products as Canada, Argentina and Australia, cannot have failed to make a great impression upon the mind of a man who for eight years before he entered the White House was engaged in developing our foreign trade.

If Mr. Hoover is open-minded, he can say of such a tariff bill only what more than 1200 other American economists have said about it. They have said that it will increase the cost of living, that it will not help the farmer, that it will destroy our foreign markets, and that it will benefit only a few people at the expense of many. Every one of those more than 1200 trained men would, if he could, veto the bill, and we believe Mr. Hoover will veto it.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
