REJUVENATING RURAL AMERICA
The American Farm Bureau Federation has prepared a plan that offers valuable suggestions to localities seeking to replace their present muddy, semi-impassable farm roads with year-round, improved secondary highways.

First, a road committee must be formed. The committee must study local problems, consider population and location of farms, agricultural production and the distance to the marketing or shipping point and other such factors. Then, by working with the county engineer, the state highway engineer, or the United States Bureau of Roads, it can plan a serviceable and economical highway system for its locality.

The type of road surface to be used varies with local conditions and materials available. Grading and draining are practically the same for any type of improved surface. In many parts of the country it has been found that one form or another of asphalt or oil gives satisfactory results in providing a low cost waterproof surface for secondary roads.

There has been too much hit-and-miss and "political" road building, resulting in waste. Farming areas can be given good roads in a reasonable length of time if the problem is scientifically studied and worked out along practical lines.

HAS FINE OFFICES
The law offices of Dwyer & Dwyer in the building owned by Mr. Dwyer, are as fine and attractive a suite as can be found in the city and arranged for the greatest comfort and convenience of this law firm. The rooms have been remodeled, a partition that formerly made one large office and one very small one has been moved so that there are now two fine and convenient private offices for D. O. Dwyer as well as Mrs. W. L. Dwyer, both members of the firm having a very convenient consulting room for their individual needs. The entrance is through a large reception room and outer office and where the clients are received. The rooms have all been renovated and repainted and papered and give Mr. Dwyer a fine opportunity for handling his large law library.

GREAT TERMINAL MARKET BENEFIT TO THE FARMER
Efficient Service has been the slogan of the Omaha Grain Exchange for twenty-five years. It has built the great inland terminal market of the central west. It has assisted in the development of Nebraska and surrounding territory. It has put complete radio stock and grain market reports in every farm-house in the middle of the greatest agricultural area in the world, thus assuring the farmer a choice of markets and enabling him at all times to avail himself of the best market-place and the highest possible prices for his products when he is ready to sell.

The farmer is cordially invited to visit the Exchange during business hours (9:30 to 1:00 o'clock) of any business day and acquaint himself with the up-to-date methods used in marketing his grain to best advantage. Its chemical laboratory is complete in every detail and its inspection department is supervised by government inspectors, insuring entirely satisfactory service to both seller and buyers. Send for its pamphlet on "Orderly Marketing," containing a survey of grain movement during every month of the past 25 years, and showing the percentage that moves in 2, 6 and 9 months. Other valuable information is also given. Sent free on application. Address the Omaha Grain Exchange, Omaha, Nebraska.

the NEW Polarine

THE MODERN MOTOR OIL

WINS ON PERFORMANCE

Fulfilling every promise and expectation —the fast-growing popularity of the new Polarine is solidly based on performance.

Less than half as much carbon deposited in the motor.

Superior resistance to thinning by heat and thickening from cold.

Oil that stays clean and retains its full lubricating value longer.

These amazing qualities of the new Polarine come from a new process of refining selected paraffine base crudes.

You can pay more for motor oil. But you can't buy more satisfying lubrication than the new Polarine provides. No advance in price.

Amos and Andy
Are in Weeping Water

See them in the west window of the Variety store. Their taxicabs are there, too. They have checked and double checked the bargains on the inside. Andy says to Amos: "Shu, Sho! Everybody is looked at our Taxicab business." The taxicabs are there in large numbers. See them in the window. They shimie and, like all taxi cabs, cause much trouble. Ask for a real demonstration. Amos and Andy are at your service.
