The various political piques held July 4th didn't prove anything.

Newest farm relief movement is opening of a buttermilk bar in Bowery.

After all it is not disgrace to have weather, but prickly heat is downright annoying.

Nice of England to provide places here Americans can win all the port honors in sight.

There always ought to be a special thanksgiving day observed when congress finally adjourns!

It must seem like old times out in Nebraska to have a Bryan running for office.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The fact Kingsford-Smith plans to get married soon suggests that he, like Lindbergh wants to put on heels.

The return of the Byrd party from the South Polar regions served as a fine prelude to the celebration of the Fourth of July.

A great fuss was made when a Hindu girl of 16 was jailed, but a lot of our little flappers might be helped by such treatment.

As city bossing goes, it must be a satisfaction to have things so organized that it is not necessary to be on the ground all the time.

Still an old dame rouging and painting in order not to look her age isn't one bit more silly than an old grandpa trying not to act his age.

Some of the back counties are disturbed because the agricultural school is working on a cobless corn. Fears are felt for the meerschum industry.

The chief trouble with senatorial primary expenditures is not the huge sums disbursed, but what the United States Senate usually gets for the money.

The two flying farmer boys who remained aloft over Chicago for twenty-three days report that they did not observe any Hoover prosperity in the upper air regions.

Babies are about the most wonderful things in the world. The tender of heart melt in their unknowing presence and even the hard-boiled soften to their smiles and gurgles.

The prohibition enforcement bureau was moved from the treasury department to the department of justice at Washington on July 1st, but local consumers declare that thus far the change has not affected the price of corn liquor or improved its quality.

If Mussolini were an American he'd be in great demand to make Fourth of July speeches.

Chicago fliers and Chicago police now hold every existing record for staying up in the air.

Train Wrecks Automobile—Headline. When an automobile wrecks a train, that will be news!

What our country needs just now is an army of occupation recruited up to full wartime strength.

Germany is planning to impose a special tax on bachelors and unmarried women. Liberty comes high but some folks must have it.

Kingsford-Smith wants to sell his plane for enough money so he can afford to get married. No doubt he'll try for a non stop flight.

Young Stribling should beware of winning fights in the jaw. It's a thing like this nowadays that makes a boxer appear eccentric.

It is reported the Byrd expedition returned with debts amounting to $100,000. They'll be expected, no doubt, to pay in cold cash.

After all, man is nothing but a worm. He comes into the world, wiggles along for awhile in the dust, and then some "chicken" gets him.

The movies are great institutions. They give the family a place to go after dark, and dad sit at home in peace and read or listen to the radio.

The return of horses is being urged now as a more economical means of transportation than the motor. But the problem of shoes will still be with us.

Fortunately for Admiral Byrd, he returned from the South Pole too late to be deluged with honorary degrees from colleges at June commencement exercises.

The plane that made the record drop in our opinion is the one built last year for the Schneider cup races at a cost of $80,000 and put up for sale the other day for $1.

Nobody knows more about real sorrow and bitter disappointment than a stylish stout who finds she just can't squeeze into a size smaller after her month of fasting, rolling and doping.

Billie Dove, darling of the movies, has been granted a divorce. Unless the camera man is an outrageous flatterer, Billie still possesses a plenitude of pulchritude, and ought to find it easy to put the matrimonial yoke on a new husband.

FIFTEEN MONTHS OF CONGRESS

After nearly 15 months of continuous work, the Seventy-first Congress has adjourned. It has some useful new legislation to its credit.

It would have been better had it stopped there, but it did not. Yielding to the pressure of special interests, it enacted a number of laws which can only do harm to the vast body of our citizens.

The record of the Seventy-first Congress is one in which neither he nor his party can take pride.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The presidential vacation isn't much of a vacation, in the sense of surcease from the cares of state and escape from people. The fierce light that beats upon the chief executive follows him wherever he goes and modern means of communication keep him in constant communication with Washington.

If old Lyncurgus is keeping track of things he is doubtless smiling approvingly on those Hunters of Sparta.

BACK OF NATURE

A great scientist in attendance at the recent impressive Scientific Congress held in Chicago takes us back to spiritual fundamentals.

Professor Compton is a man who works with electrons and atoms, but he does not reject the message of the stars, nor a consideration of the troubles of mankind.

He recognizes that there is room for an effective intelligence behind the phenomena of nature. He troubles not at all about the old evolutionary theory, nor does he see the world of today developing at random out of atomic chaos.

Thus he finds meaning in human life. He does not believe in the mechanistic view of mans consciousness. He recognizes that there is room for an effective intelligence behind the phenomena of nature.

In plain words, the master physicist concludes that God is. This conclusion is emphasized by one of the last declarations of Steinmetz, who said that the most important work for scientists during the next fifty years would be concerned with spiritual things.

But still the stars whisper a message, and the soul of man aspires and yearns to learn the secrets of their immemorial tale.

Uncle Sam, like many individuals, is often slow in paying his debts—but he always pays them.

During the Spanish-American war a troop of cavalry raided the watermelon patch of a negro farmer near Dayton, Ohio. It was a complete job. Nary a watermelon was left in the patch.

A few days ago the treasury department sent to the son of the negro farmer, now janitor of the Federal building at Tampa, Fla., a voucher for $150 in payment for watermelons consumed thirty-two years ago.

Before the measure was presented to House and Senate mathematicians at Washington went into a huddle over the vast economic changes that have taken place since 1898, and finally agreed that $150 would be a fair price, although much larger than the darkey's melon crop could have been sold for at that time.

Time was when the farmer was a typical figure and he bore his trade mark so prominently that he was easily identified. Stage representations of him were so like the actual man in appearance that their naturalness could not be denied.

Progress practically has done away with the innocent rube of other days and economic causes are gradually removing his successor. Automobiles, electricity, telephone and magazines have made the country resident about as sophisticated as the city dweller.
