Save $20,000 for Ottawa Man After Tip-Off

R. A. Robinson Does Not Thank Omaha Detectives for Seizing Large Draft.

Omaha—Meddling of Omaha police in his get-rich quick scheme cost him $20,000, R. A. Robinson, a retired Ottawa, Kas., grocer, insisted Saturday.

Police on the other hand believed they had saved the Kansan that amount of hard earned cash.

The local department had been asked to intervene by Robinson's home town banker after he had hurried home to obtain a draft for $20,000 with which to beat the market.

Robinson said he had met a trio of men at Hot Springs, Ark., and accompanied them here. Tuesday his friends were talking about a certain stock and one of their number was given a huge amount of money to invest.

In a few hours he returned with a report that the stock had advanced in price.

"We're rich," he told his associates.

Robinson then demanded that he be "cut in." The men were agreeable. It seemed in order to get their winnings, deposited in an Omaha bank they would have to scrape together $150,000 and they only were able to get hold of $130,000. Could Robinson supply the additional $20,000?

He could. He made a hurried trip to Ottawa and obtained, over the protest of his banker, a sight draft for that amount. He told the banker his story but the latter could not stop him from making his "investment," so he wired Omaha police to take a hand.

Detectives met Robinson at Union station and relieved him of the draft. But he insisted there was no "catch" to the deal and that he was too smart to be taken in by city slickers.

Robinson Saturday was threatening court action to secure the draft so that he can complete the transactions with his new friends.—State Journal.
