Ruben D. Stine who might have been born in Union if he had desired, did live in this neighborhood even before there was any town of Union and also when the town was new, tells a story of a political meeting which was staged for an address which was to be given by C. W. Sherman, former proprietor and editor of the Journal, nearly two score years ago. The crowd had gathered and all were in readiness and waiting for the address, but as the evening was lively, they got lost in a meadow near the school which was northwest of town, and as they sat waiting and cracking jokes there was a voice calling from the fog laden meadow "I am lost, I have come to make a political speech, and am lost." Some of the young folks went and piloted the speaker to the school house and the meeting went on as per schedule.

Dedicated to Mrs. G. R. Upton. Dear long-time friend, On this your natal day, September 25th, we've come to show that friendship still survives the test of time. This joy to know that through the years, with hearts aglow with friendship warm, we still may meet, reviewing thoughts and memories sweet, recalling scenes of long ago.

Of pleasure when the heart was young; of reunions so gayly sung, when meeting then at rustic fete, congenial friends together ate. Then from our memories ne're will fade, the simple games together played, through youth and adolescent age, at festival and party.

Most often at the old church door, we met with friendly greeting, with cordial handshake, kindly glance; with naught of pomp or circumstance, to mar our joy in simple living, devoutly listening to the word; so quickly then our hearts were stirred by sacred songs and solemn rite, intoned by clergy who with might and power proclaimed Eternal Life, the recompense for Holy living.

Our paths divergent in that day, each going then her separate way; some soon were wedded, some had died, the first with little souls to guide were soon entrusted, your life a beacon light to lead; your ministering hand to all in need was freely given.

The comfort of that ministry in sickness, death, oft shown to me, leads me to hope that you may wait, should you first near the Pearly gate, till we, your friends here waiting true may comfort then your passing.

Old friends here greeting you tonight, with hearts a flame and eyes alight; with tender memories of the past, with friendship true while life shall last, are hoping still for many years of happiness to gather.

Congratulations, then dear friend, much joy to you till life shall end. Abiding faith and courage high and then, a mansion in the sky, we wish you as we say good bye.—F. P. Eikenyary.

Heavy Damage Done by Rains in Texas
Small Homes Carried Off, Crops Destroyed—Wide Area Is Struck by Hard Storms.

Dallas—Torrential rains which spread from Texas across the Rio Grande into Mexico Monday flooded lands long parched by serious drought doing great damage to property and farm crops but taking no known toll of lives. Brady, Tex., was the hardest hit community when the usually tranquil Brady river spread from three to eight feet of water over several blocks of the business section.

From thirty to forty small homes were carried away, making several hundred persons homeless and merchandise stocks suffered approximately $250,000 damage. About a thousand bales of cotton stored in a shed near the river's banks were washed downstream.

The San Saba river in the vicinity of Menard was the highest in twenty years and the flood waters were spreading over a large area of lowlands. It was believed all livestock had been driven to safety however.

The Rio Grande at Del Rio, where more than ten inches of rain fell, had risen eight feet and still was rising. The Devil's river in the same section was up fifteen feet and still rising. Reports to Del Rio from Mexico said streams on the other side of the international boundary were rampant. Heavy rains were reported in the southern republic.—State Journal.

ATLANTA'S APPEAL HEARD
Washington—Atlanta's contention that it has a population of 300,692 instead of 270,367 was laid before the District of Columbia supreme court Monday where decision was withheld pending further study by the court. Seeking a court order to compel Census Director Stewart to publish the larger figure, counsel for the Georgia city contended the Georgia legislature had a right to increase the area of the metropolis from 34 to 184 square miles. In this area, five corporate cities and fifteen communities totaling about 90,000 population are located.

Government counsel said after congress had authorized the 1930 census, the legislature last year granted Atlanta a new charter to include the communities in order to swell the total population. The borough of Atlanta, Assistant District Attorney Fidelity said, had no authority over the other municipalities under the charter.

Within his knowledge, Justice Sudduth said, no similar charter has ever been granted in this country. It was the intention of the court, he said, to ascertain the object of the legislation, behind the avowed purpose.

Less Amount of Liquor Drunk as the Years Go By

Prohibition Bureau Finds Consumption Gradually Diminishing

Washington—The prohibition bureau Saturday estimated the per capita production of beverage alcohol at .692 gallons for the last fiscal year and offered for purposes of comparison internal revenue bureau figures placing such production in 1914 at 1.705 gallons. The estimate for 1930 was based upon an extended study of the consumption of corn, sugar, grapes, hops, malt and other commodities used in the manufacture of illicit liquor, the amount of industrial diverted into bootleg channels and intoxicating smuggled into the country.

Detailed figures, together with conclusions drawn from them, were set forth in an eighty page monograph, prepared by E. A. Grant and E. P. Hanford in the bureau's division of research and public information. It was intended as the first of a series of similar reports. The statement was repeatedly made that the figures for 1930 had to do only with possible production. From these must be deducted seizures and other factors before an index of consumption can be reached. The research division is now engaged in this task.

Growing Less Each Year
"Statements made from time to time that the consumption of alcoholic beverages is greater today than it was prior to the adoption of the eighteenth amendment are unwarranted," the monograph said. Again after reviewing estimates of production during the last few years made by organizations and individuals both favoring and opposing prohibition, the bureau said "it appears that consumption of alcoholic liquor in the United States is growing less from year to year."

Estimates by interested parties were not considered in the compilation of figures for 1930. These gave the possible production for the year ended last June 30 at 23,386,718 gallons of spirits, 118,476,200 gallons of wine and 684,447,800 gallons of beer, a total of 876,320,718 gallons of all beverages.

For 1914 the following figures on beverages withdrawn, tax paid, for consumption, taken from the records of the internal revenue bureau were given. They show 143,447,227 gallons of spirits, 2,056,407,108 gallons of malt liquors and 52,418,430 gallons of wine, a total of 2,256,272,765 gallons. Reducing these figures to quantities of absolute alcohol, the bureau said that in 1914 the production was 166,983,681 gallons and in the fiscal year of last July 307,831,172.

Complete Figures Lacking.
The report pointed out that the internal revenue bureau's figures did not give a complete picture of the amount of liquor consumed in 1914 as they do not include beer and wine made in the home and illegal traffic in spirits.

"However," the monograph said, "leaving out of consideration the fact that more liquor was consumed in 1914 than the internal revenue figures indicate, the bureau estimate of possible production for 1930 shows that only about 40 percent as much liquor would have been produced in 1930 as was withdrawn, tax paid in 1914."

In conclusion, the report said: "The bureau reiterates that the foregoing work is only an estimate. It is based upon such known facts as are available, and upon the reports and opinions of those dealing directly with enforcement of the law. The bureau acknowledged the weaknesses of such an estimate, but it is desirous of acquainting the public with the truth so far as it is able to ascertain that truth."—State Journal.

HYBRID CORN GIVEN TEST
Despite the fact that hybrid corn appears to be yielding favorably in corn variety tests over Nebraska, the college of agriculture is not yet ready to recommend it to farmers, Paul Stewart and D. L. Gross, agronomists at the college, announced Monday.

In practically all tests over the state, hybrid corn has shown up well, Gross declared, but it has not proved itself to the extent that it can be recommended. Nebraska 110 and 111 are the hybrid varieties showing up well in tests.

Late corn in all tests has appeared to show a better yield this year than that planted early, according to Gross, altho weather conditions put the early corn to a disadvantage this year. Corn planted about May 18 showed up much better in tests than corn which was planted earlier in the month.

LOST MONEY GAMBLING

Omaha—Don T. Kearns, Salt Lake City youth, lost his money in a poker game and was not robbed as he claimed. Chief of Police Pzanoski declared after an investigation.

En route to Chicago to enter a university, young Kearns arrived here Sept. 17. He had $17 in cash and checks for $60 and $250.

That evening he wired the Tracy Loan and Trust company of Salt Lake City that he had been robbed and asked it to stop payment on the $60 check.

Proceeding to Chicago he wrote his parents a harrowing tale of his adventures, claiming that two men had pressed a revolver to his side and robbed him as he waited for a bus.

The check, endorsed by Don D. Pool, eventually was returned here after payment was refused at Salt Lake City. Pool thereupon wrote the trust company, stating he had received the check in a business deal and demanding payment.

Secretary N. C. Ellis of the Trust company Monday night asked local police to arrest Pool, who Chief Pzanoski said, is a well known gambler here. Pool and his partner, Charles Wood, told the officers that Kearns had been inveigled into the game and lost.
