Robert McQuinn and wife of Harding, Ark., and cousin of Mrs. James Fitzpatrick were visiting here for a number of days last week, and also visited in Omaha for a few days, returning to their home in the south on last Monday.

Dr. D. E. Hansen of Nehawka, who recently located there and having formerly been located at Omaha, was a visitor in Union on last Tuesday morning and was a caller on his brother physician, Dr. W. W. Claybaugh, these gentlemen having been friends for some time.

Finds Four Skeletons.

While working on his home near the Union schools, which is underlaid by a ledge of stone, W. L. Stine found four skeletons which he calculates must have been there for more than a thousand years, which would place the one who lived there and were buried on the ledge of rock as living in the tenth century or only half of the Christian era. This would place the lives of the people who lived at that time among the dark ages, but as there was not anything known then of America, it is still much in doubt from his calculations what kind of people they were. They may have been Aztecs who later were credited with the having of the semi-civilization of Mexico. Sufficient that the skeletons were in a good state of preservation and indicated that care had been exercised in the burial of the bodies.

Will Spend Winter in Southwest.

Stirling Harris who has not been in the very best of health for some time past owing some to the injury which he sustained some time ago

Mrs. Roddy has the sympathy of her many friends in her hour of sorrow. A more detailed account of the life of the father of Mrs. Roddy will be given in the paper the coming week.

Place Shower Bath in School.

The Board of Education of the village of Union recently had a shower bath placed in the Union school to accommodate the ball players who after the practice and their games like to have a shower bath and a rub down.

Some Read, Some Don't.

Yes that is a fact, some people read and some are not. Recently the enterprising grain dealer, Geo. A. Stites had placed a sign on his elevator, not afraid that some one would run off with it, but that it is a mark of ownership. While the sign is plain and high on the elevator some are seeing and some are not.

D. Ray Frans also has a neatly painted sign on his lumber office, his name painted and many see it still some do not seem to notice it. We were fortunate in having our attention called to it, else maybe we would not have seen it either. This is significant in that the title of the firm is now "D. Ray Frans" and not "Frans Bros. Lumber Co." The world please take notice.

Arthur B. Kinsolving, the rector.

The heir of his grandfather, John Carter Brown, for whom Brown university at Providence, R. I., was named. Brown was known as "the richest baby in the world" upon his birth in 1900. He was graduated from Harvard college in 1922.

Public Warned to Call Halt on Rising Taxation

Bankers Shown Per Capita Tax in 1923, $22.66—In 1928, $77.39

New Orleans, La.—The "Let George do it" attitude of the public is costing American municipalities future revenues now being spent on luxuries, while administration of these municipalities is being entrusted to politicians who have no business ability, said Silas H. Strawn of Chicago at the concluding session of the Investment Bankers' Association of America convention here Wednesday.

Cities must adhere to their budgets, said Mr. Strawn, who was head of the Citizens' Committee which rescued Chicago from financial difficulties this year, in warning the investment bankers on the present great increase in the nation's tax burden.

Public indifference is the principal cause of the increase in municipal taxes, which is more than 100 per cent to every 20 per cent increase in population, the Chicago attorney said.

"The average business man is so engrossed in his own affairs," he said, "he does not know our public expenditures absorb 14 per cent of our national income and that our per capita taxes in 1923 were $22.66, as against $77.39 per capita in 1928. If he is a stockholder in a corporation, he probably has no thought of the fact that 30 cents out of every dollar of its profit goes for taxes."

"How much larger can the tax burdens become without taxation?" the bankers were asked. "Has not the time come when the taxpayer must have more concern about the manner in which his rapidly increasing tax contribution to the cost of government is spent? Public officials are more often concerned about getting budget increases than decreases."

"Now is the opportune moment for every municipality to get its house in order by consolidating its tax consuming units, by putting its taxing machinery on a natural scientific basis, by carefully preparing and observing its budget, by incurring no unnecessary obligations and by inaugurating and pursuing a plan of most rigid economy. This imposes on the banker the task, if not indeed the responsibility, of taking an active and vigorous part in the governmental affairs of his city."

After giving the bankers a picture of the situation handled by his committee in Chicago, where he declared, "a state of anarchy was imminent," Mr. Strawn added:

"May I indulge the hope that our Chicago experience may result in the organization of citizens' committees in other cities, not in an emergency to meet a crisis, but to commence their work early and pursue it with vigilance to the end that the holders of municipal securities may confidently rely, not only upon the legality, but upon the soundness of their investments. Such committees are already at work in several cities, among others the city of New Orleans."

"We will soon catch up," an overbuilding, the result of "easy money and business optimism," the report of the association's real estate securities committee declared when accepted Wednesday.

NORRIS ON "IRREGULARITY"

Nebraska City—Completing their second address for Tuesday, Senator Norris and Attorney General Sorenson spoke here Tuesday night. They, with Governor Weaver, had been heard by voters at Auburn during the afternoon.

The senator devoted most of his talk to his record "as an irregular in the senate." He said it did not get him anywhere at the pie counter, but that he had protected the interest of the people of the country.

He told of his part in the Balingier-Pinchot controversy in the Alaska coal field investigation during the time he was a member of the lower house, and of his fight against Joe Cannon as speaker of the house.

Mr. Norris said his democratic opponent, Gilbert M. Hitchcock, was a member of the house at the time of the Alaska coal field inquiry, and had been given credit thru his newspaper recently for turning a whitewash investigation into a real inquiry.

The senior senator explained his vote against the tariff by saying sugar, lumber and cement boosts were unnecessary and increase the price of paving of highways $1,000 per mile in cement costs.

Mr. Sorenson spoke of his record as attorney general and said if elected he would continue in the same manner.

Wickersham Group Break is Rumored

Stories Gain Credence at Judge Kenyon's Offer of Resigning; Judge Is Silent.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Recurrent rumors that the Wickersham commission is on the verge of an open break on the prohibition issue gained fresh credence in the capital today following published reports that Judge William S. Kenyon, of Fort Dodge, La., a dry member, recently submitted his resignation to President Hoover.

Judge Kenyon, according to the story being repeated among those close to the commission, offered to withdraw from the group several weeks ago when the dry law debate approached the showdown stage and the president persuaded him to remain a member. It was said further that the impending cessation of the dispute was the question of industrial alcohol control and that the commission since has agreed with Judge Kenyon's ideas.

Reached by telephone Saturday at Omaha, where he has been sitting in the Eighth district federal circuit court, Judge Kenyon was quoted as refusing to confirm or deny the reports, explaining that he could not talk about the affairs of the commission.

The commission at present is not in session. After a series of meetings the last two weeks it adjourned Friday until after the November elections. Prohibition was known to be the outstanding question at issue during the meetings, but Chairman George W. Wickersham studiously avoided any commitments as to the trend or outcome of the discussion while the other members referred all inquiries to him. Wickersham said, however, he hoped a prohibition report would be ready for congress in December.

Turmoil Indicated.

Despite the cloak of secrecy drawn around the commission's proceedings, signs have turned up from time to time strongly indicating inward turmoil over prohibition recommendations, the disputes centering upon these questions.

Does the commission have authority to report on the wisdom or unwisdom of prohibition or should it confine its work to methods of better enforcing the dry laws?

If it finds prohibition unenforceable should it say so?

Should it deal with prohibition as the chief objective of its investigation?

Or should prohibition be subordinated to studies of general crime conditions.

Mr. Wickersham has stated that so far as he is concerned he believes if the commission finds prohibition unenforceable it should say so. The only other member who has made a public statement is Kenneth Mackintosh of Seattle who recently declared that the commission ought to "go to the guts" of the prohibition question. Other members are understood to have divergent views.—World-Herald.

COAL COMING FROM EUROPE

New York—Continued shipment of anthracite coal from Russia, Germany and Great Britain, to be sold in competition with the American product, was described Tuesday as a menace to the United States coal industry by Eliot Farley, president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Coal company. The recent barring of Russian coal by the Canadian government will tend to increase the large tonnage shipped to eastern ports, he said "and will have the effects of destabilizing the American industry and of throwing a large number of American miners out of work at a time when the nation is already facing a business crisis."
