

GREENWOOD

R. E. Matthews was looking after some business matters in Ashland on Wednesday last week.

Leo Peters, who is hustling into his corn gathering, has four teams in the field and all making good progress toward getting the crop out.

E. L. McDonald and wife were called to Lincoln on last Tuesday, where they drove and were looking after some land sales which were being made.

Word was received here by Mrs. Nannie Coleman of the birth of a 10-pound girl born to Mr. and Mrs. George Coleman of Jennings, Kans., on October 22nd.

O. F. Peters, who has been building a shed on one of his farms near Greenwood, has just gotten the roof on and will have the entire structure completed in a short time.

Mrs. E. S. Smith and the children were visiting at Ithica for a few days last week at the home of her brother, E. A. Owens and family, where they enjoyed a very fine time.

Mrs. J. C. Lemon and Mrs. H. B. Schroeder returned home from California on Tuesday. They have been away several weeks on account of sickness of Mrs. Lemon's sister.

Rex Peters was a visitor in Murdock, Manly and Plattsmouth where he was looking after his business matters and meeting his friends before the contest of next Tuesday.

Mr. Gromlich, of Papillion, came down to J. C. Lemon's on Monday of this week in an airplane to watch the corn picker work on the Lemon farm. He stayed about one hour.

White and Bucknell and the families were enjoying a visit on last Sunday when they with their car made a trip over near Raymond where they visited with friends for the day.

Mrs. P. A. Sanborn was a visitor in Omaha on last Monday and Tuesday, where she was attending a program at Brownell Hall school, where her granddaughter, Miss Margaret Moon, attends school.

Miss Pearl Brackhage, of Murdock, who is attending the University of Nebraska is one of twenty-one students in teachers' college to be awarded a tuition scholarship by the university for this semester.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. McDonald were guests at Omaha on last Sunday for the day and dinner with their cousin, Miss Hazel Tubbs and who also is an accomplished nurse and was caring for Mrs. McDonald during her recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, of Omaha, spent Sunday afternoon visiting at the O. F. Peters home. Mrs. Peters and Mrs. White were college chums and this was their first visit at the Peters home since they had left Yutan. The visit was very much appreciated by all.

Monday night some unknown party or parties broke two windows at the Lincoln Oil company's station on the south edge of Greenwood, evidently trying to get away with some of the belongings of the station. Had it not been for the dog on the inside of the station they probably would have made the effort good.

Carl Hoffman was called to Plattsmouth Friday to testify at the inquest of Paul McCauley, who died in the automobile accident on the Laughlin bridge between here and Ashland. Clarence Christenson was also called. They were accompanied by Mrs. Hoffman and Milton and the Misses Irene and Pauline Jensen.

Warren Alfred Bucknell celebrated his tenth birthday by entertaining the pupils and teacher of his room with a party after school on Wednesday evening. Individual cakes decorated with Jack O'Lantern faces and Halloween candy favors were served. All departed wishing Warren Alfred many more happy birthdays.

and which with all the improvement brought just $20,000 or $104.17 per acre, and that seems very cheap for the farm and its improvements.

Sells Two Heatrolas.
The hustling firm of White and Bucknell have just sold and delivered two Heatrolas each going to a school and two which purpose they cannot be exceeded, one going to the Greenwood school and the other being taken to District No. 36.

Joseph Daniel Ballenger.
John W. Ballenger, our townsman, received the sad news last week of the passing of his brother, Joseph D. Ballenger at Haddon, Kansas, where he has been engaged in farming for a number of years. Mr. Ballenger was born in Missouri in 1859 and when two years of age came to Greenwood with his parents to live.

There was no Greenwood here but they resided in this territory. After residing here for more than twenty-five years. He was united in marriage nearly forty years ago. Near that time they moved to Kansas where they engaged in farming and have been quite successful at the time of his death he was possessor of a good farm in Kansas. Mr. Ballenger has been in poor health for some time and on October 27th passed away with pneumonia. The funeral was on last Tuesday at Haddon, Kansas, and interment made there.

Mr. John W. Ballenger of Greenwood, when advised of the death, prepared to go to the funeral but receiving a subsequent message telling of the inability of the body to be held until he could get there the funeral was held and Mr. Ballenger did not get to attend. There were five of the family, two brothers and two sisters. Besides Mr. Joseph D. Ballenger leaves a wife and three sons and three daughters. Mrs. Ballenger was formerly Miss Della Maston.

NATIONS LEADERS URGE ALL CITIZENS TO JOIN THE RED CROSS
The objective of the American Red Cross is obtaining the necessary funds is not so much the matter of generous giving but rather to enlist the cooperation of the great masses of the people, by the annual Roll Call of $1.00 per member.

"The only aim of the Red Cross is for the good of humanity. It stands for all the people. In its disaster relief work it aids sufferers on the basis of actual needs, so that it is the sufferer without personal resource for recovery who is helped back to normal life.

"The Red Cross is the greatest relief organization in existence."—James A. Davis, Sec. of Labor.

"The Red Cross is known to all the world as 'The Great Mother' in time of war, or other serious calamity. Few perhaps are aware of the constant service of that organization to the veterans in our hospitals through the provision of entertainment and in other ways contributing to the welfare of the patients. A helping hand is given by assisting veterans to prepare claims for benefits offered by the government. Aid is extended to all needy veterans and their dependents.

"I have only the best wishes for the fullest realization of its hopes in connection with the coming annual Roll Call."—Col. Geo. E. Hams, Director of U. S. Veterans Bureau.

"The American Red Cross is one of the great institutions of the United States, and as an efficient exponent of business methods in disaster relief, health conditions, health education and other parts of service program, deserves the whole hearted support of the business men of the country."—William Butterworth, president of Chamber of Commerce.

"It is the recognition of the invaluable services which our American Red Cross is rendering to mankind which has brought the splendid support which it receives from people in every walk of life.

"The Red Cross merits the continued support of the public."—William Gerry Morgan, M. D., President American Medical Association.

Would Have Billion Spent on the Improving of the Great Rivers of the Nation
Boston, Oct. 29.—A billion dollar project for development of the Mississippi river and its tributaries in order that business may be revived, unemployment relieved and the future greatness of America hastened, was Wednesday submitted to President Hoover by Mayor James M. Curley of Boston.

An announcement by President Hoover of an intention to go forward at once with this billion dollar development would electrify the country, Mayor Curley declared in a letter to him.

It would destroy the grim psychology of fear, he said, put America on the road to business recovery and dissipate unemployment almost overnight.

In addition to the armies of men required for the immediate construction in the Mississippi valley and its tributaries, Mayor Curley said it would afford gainful occupation to many thousands in the manufacture of the basic construction materials ranging from the kiln to the electrical equipment manufacturers.

Open to Ocean
Mayor Curley declared that the deepening and widening of the river, opening it fully to oceanborne traffic, would create an inland industrial empire more consequential than the Louisiana Purchase, because no great manufacturer could afford to be without at least one plant on this proposed artery of commerce.

It would open the river to oceanborne traffic, he said, and stimulate development of the American merchant marine.

By the building of storage basins, he said, the people of the Mississippi valley would be saved from the flood catastrophes, such as devastated their country in recent memory and they would be guaranteed a steady supply of water in the periods of drought.

The farmers of the west, now languishing in a period of agricultural depression of 10 years' duration, with wheat at its lowest level, could derive the immense advantage of cheap water transportation and a more convenient outlet for their products. He said without their prosperity the country as a whole cannot attain its fullest prosperity.

Would Offset Tariff
It would facilitate the industrial and agricultural commerce of inland America to the trade markets of Latin America and the orient, he said, and these with cleaner cause of anti-American hostility in Europe, the future foreign trade of the United States must be largely with the countries of Latin America, to the south.

European competition is again piercing those markets, he said, attempting to regain their prewar advantage. The United States has the advantage of contiguity, he said, but it cannot be utilized fully until the American industrialist and exporter are given the benefit of cheap water transportation rates.

Mayor Curley also declared to President Hoover that the American people would not tolerate the blocking of the magnificent project by powerful railroads as they "selfishly opposed" the Panama canal or by the electric power interests, which for years stood in the path of Boulder canyon dam.

"Cheaper Power"
Cheaper water power energy would be one of the major results from the construction of the storage basins, he said, and these with cleaner transportation and the increment of increased property values would alone put the entire cost of the project within this generation.

Mayor Curley first proposed this project to President Hoover in Washington last week when they discussed unemployment and the business crisis. He is understood to have found the President wedded to a program of river development in which only $125,000,000 a year would be spent.

Piecemeal development of America's great natural resources is wasteful and ineffective, Mayor Curley said, nor does it contain the hope for relief that the people must have. Mayor Curley sent his comprehensive outline of the benefits that would flow from the project to President Hoover, Secretary of War Hurley, Secretary of Commerce Lamond and Secretary of Labor Davis.—Bee-News.

A GREAT INDUSTRY
Few industries can show as favorable a record of efficiency and unceasing progress as can fire insurance.

For the past twenty years the cost of fire insurance to the insured has been declining until today it is said to be one of the cheapest of all necessities. While the average rate in 1913 was $1.04, in 1927 it was only $0.86. Since then rates have continued to drop. Yet our average annual fire loss reached the gigantic total of $550,000,000 in 1925 and has never gone much below $500,000,000 since. Statistics for the first part of this year show that the loss is appreciably greater than in 1929.

The reduction of fire insurance rates can be credited almost entirely to the voluntary action of the industry. The business of fire insurance entails a great deal more than estimating risks, writing policies, receiving premiums and paying losses. Today insurance companies do a tremendous public service in educating the public in preventing fire, in fighting arson, in advocating better fire departments, all manner of materials, devices and machines are tested for safety. All of this work has but one purpose—to reduce the fire damage to lives and property, and, consequently to reduce insurance rates.

One cannot say how much greater our fire loss would be were it not for the prevention work of the insurance industry. But the present magnitude of the waste shows that the public still has a great deal to learn of the ordinary, common-sense principles of fire prevention. When American property owners really absorb these principles, the nation will be saved thousands of lives and untold millions of dollars a year—in property values, in insurance rates, in taxes and in industrial losses.

BRYAN ESSAY PRIZE GIVEN TWICE BEFORE
Lincoln, Oct. 31.—The William Jennings Bryan essay contest, which University of Nebraska news sources indicated would be held for the first time this year, is discovered to have been held 22 years ago.

In 1908, the Bryan prize was awarded to H. C. Robertson for his essay, "Does the Commission System of Municipal Government Harmonize with the Spirit of American Institutions," and again in 1911 when James A. Cline received the award for his paper: "The Nebraska Primary Law." The amount of the award is $25.

Members of the British family, dubbed by Lloyd George the British Commonwealth of Nations are secret, but upon adjournment the press will publish as much of the news as Prime Minister MacDonald will deem polite to divulge.

Al Smith Charges Republican Failure

Asserts Made Campaign Pledges They Could Not Redeem; Didn't Face Crisis.
New York, Oct. 29.—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith tonight urged the election of a democratic congress and told a nationwide radio audience he had three charges to make against the republicans. He listed them as follows:

1. They made campaign pledges of continuing prosperity which they could not redeem.
2. They refused to face the business crisis until it was forced upon them.

3. They failed to take necessary steps to relieve the situation.
Amplifying these, Mr. Smith said: "It is a matter of history that the president himself as short a time ago as March 8 made the definite statement that the situation would clear in 60 days. He was assisted by his cabinet officers in his refusal to face the facts."

As late as June, 1929, the secretary of agriculture made the statement that the unemployment was seasonal and there was relatively no distress. And further than that, the secretary of labor gave out figures with respect to unemployment which were shown to be false by the statistics gathered by the department of labor in the state of New York.

The former governor said he did not take "the position of placing upon the republican party the blame for the depression and consequent unemployment, but we do seriously indict them for misleading the people into the belief that a continuance of the republican party in power meant continued prosperity."

"Result of False Issues."
"What has happened to the republican party in this instance," he continued, "is nothing more or less than the result that must be expected when false issues are injected into a campaign. Lack of sincerity or even honesty behind a false campaign pledge not only wrecks itself but tends to bring about the destruction of those who issue it."—World-Herald.

GLENN FRANK IS ASSAILED
Fond Du Lac, Wis.—The Wisconsin D. A. R. was told at its convention Wednesday that President Glenn Frank is indifferent to the presence of communism in the state university. Before the session was over, President Frank replied, in a formal statement, expressing himself as still unconcerned.

Mrs. James F. Trotman, Milwaukee, state regent, attacked the university as a place where "un-American ideas were fostered." She called "enlightening" a quotation attributed to Frank when asked whether there were communists at the university!

"Well, what of it? We are apt to have both communists and Presbyterians here. I have said, and still say, a student has as much right to be a communist as he has to be a Presbyterian or a Baptist. It is not the business of the university to dictate the political and religious beliefs of its students."

EARTH SHOCKS ARE FELT
Redding, Calif.—Buildings in Redding were shaken by a series of earth tremors beginning early Wednesday and continuing at intervals until noon but no damage was reported. The last shock, shortly before noon, created confusion in superior court when the courthouse swayed and rumbled. Judge Waller Herzinger hastily adjourned court but the session was resumed after the midday recess.
