Robert McNealy Sues Papillion Bank for $10,000

Former Louisville Man Asks Amount for Damages Through Refusal to Cash Check.

Robert J. McNealy, former Louisville attorney, who is now located at Papillion has started an action in the district court at that place against the Banking House of Clark, one of the banks of that city, in which he asks the sum of $10,000 which he claims as damages.

In the petition of Mr. McNealy it is alleged that when he located at Papillion from Louisville, he deposited funds in the Clark bank and shortly after that time drew a check on the bank and which was returned later with insufficient funds noted on it. The plaintiff claims that there was ample funds to care for the check at the time on deposit in the bank, that the bank cashed a check of a person of a similar name from the funds of Mr. McNealy and therefore when Mr. McNealy's check had arrived at the bank it had been turned down.

Mr. McNealy asks the sum of $10,000 for damages in injury to his reputation in the community where he had just located.

JUNCTION HAS BURGLARS

Pacific Junction, our neighboring city across the Missouri river, appears to be the mark for the operation of burglars and the latest to suffer from the work of the unwelcome night callers has been the James Mulvaney Oil station and the Fullerton barber shop. The oil station was the one most severely affected by the visit as a radio, tires, tubes, batteries and a number of flash lights were found to be missing when the owners of the station opened their place on the morning following the robberies. The time between the robberies and the discovery gave the robbers an opportunity of getting away from the scene.

Melvin Farabee departed this morning for Hastings, where he will join the family there on a short visit with relatives and friends.
